LONDON, Aug. 20. — (Associated Press).—Last year's dream of aerial flivvers has come true. An experimental glider fitted with twin engines of five horsepower and two tiny propellors has, in its first test flight, hit up a speed of 65 miles an hour and attained a height of 2,500 feet. The flight was made from the airdrome at Lympne, within two hours after the little plane had been unpacked from a motor lorry.

It seemed easy to assemble the many parts and not at all difficult, from a financial standpoint, to keep it in the air, the gasoline consumption being much less than for a small automobile.

The propellors, each a yard in length are at the back of the front plane, where a chain connects them with the engine. The pilot sits in front. The span of the front wings measures only 33 feet, and the length from head to tail is 12 feet. There is hardly any undercarriage, the landing wheels being attached to the body itself.

This new glider will be entered in the various European gliding contests this summer. These are sure to produce even greater sensations than those of a year ago, since in the interim the use of small powered engines in airplanes has made distinct progress.

GOT HIS GOLD STORE FROM HUMAN ASHES

Refiner Surprised to Learn Where His Customer's Supply Came From

POSSIBILITIES ARE SEEN

Spirits May Wonder if Law Compelling Cremation and Sifting is Not in Order, Physicians Suggest

Dr. Malford W. Trewlis, a physician of Providence, R. I., tells in American Medicine of an unusual source for the recovery of gold. He relates that a refiner told him he had been buying gold from a customer and, becoming curious as to its origin, asked the man where he got it. It then developed that the customer was the manager of a crematory and that he obtained the gold by sifting the ashes of the dead.

"Students of economy, who have plenty of leisure, have tried to figure the amount of gold which annually goes into the grave and is not recovered: people are buried whose teeth are filled with the precious metal, or who have wished to be buried with their favorite jewels, and our economists bemoan this waste of gold—gold which humag toil had brought to light, and of which there is increasing need," Dr. Trewlis writes.

"They do not know that an infinitesimal part of the metal is actually reft from the dead, but not recovered from the grave.

"Cremation has become fashionable, its advantages have been obvious to sensitive minds; from the esthetic standpoint, it is ideal: to disappear completely, immediately, without becoming a prey to the 'Conqueror Worm' appeals to a sophisticated brain. The process is rather mysterious; we know that the ashes are returned to the family, if they so wish, or in some instances kept in labelled vessels, which are placed in pigeonholes, in the crematory building. This, at least, being the European custom, which was taken from the ancient Greeks.

"America is a young and enterprising country, intensely practical, and the home of efficiency experts, Taylorization and of the packing industries. The Armours have taught us that a slain ox whose meat goes into the making of food can also furnish toothbrushes, face-powder, fertilizers combs, soap, animal extracts, etc., and that by-products are not to be overlooked.

"In Europe, nobody had realized that so much material was being wasted in the slaughter-houses, and Europeans, being more bent on enjoying life than on making money, have not been impressed by our practicality; therefore, they have not made toothbrushes out of the ox's bones, ladies' combs out of its horns; they have contented themselves with eating its flesh and perhaps curing its hide for commercial purposes. They have been unconcerned in dealing with dead humans, as they have been in dealing with dead cattle; they have buried their dead, cremated them, without figuring the amount of gold lost thereby, and without endeavoring to recover it, or bemoaning the apparent failure to do so.

"In sthis world of ours, however, there are men who realize that it is not wise to let gold disappear. That the possession of gold is the key to happiness, that 'the dead cannot rise,' therefore the appropriation of their gold is a perfectly safe and easy process and in a measure, a harmless one.

"Gold refiners are good-natured and practical people, people of discretion, who attend strictly to their own business, who are willing and ready to buy gold and have no manifest interest in ascertaining its sources. One of them, however, having an inquisitive turn of mind and a friendly disposition, who won the confidence of one of these providers, told me this story. He had bought gold from a man whose calling he ignored and who visited his office at frequent intervals. One day, in the course of his conversation, my informer asked the men where the gold came from. He did not hesitate to answer that he was the manager of a crematory and as a side issue took the ashes of the dead, sifted them and recovered the gold they happened to contain.

"Would you call the manager of the crematory a ghoul? He probably is the good-natured father of a numerous family and the gold of the dead is transmuted into dresses for a buxom wife, children's socks and shoes, perhaps even an automobile, which takes the happy family to the beach in Summer. Surely the dead do not miss their gold.

"If from the Elysian fields they can still watch us poor humans, so many ants struggling in and out of the ant hill, those who were philosophers would smile at the happy circumstances of the manager's family. While if among them there happened to be efficiency experts they would certainly wonder if the time is coming when the Senate introduces a bill requiring every dead American citizen to be cremated, his ashes sifted in order to sweell the Treasury."

Whales measuring as much as 105 feet in length have been caught in the Antarctic.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

DAVY DUMPY AND THE VOLCANO

The yellow butterfly took them to a fence with a row of flower pots on top turned upside down.

"Oh, say!" cried little Mrs. Dumpy, rushing into the throne room, wheer King Snookums, king of the Pee Wees, sat on his throne.

"Davy's gone!"

King Snookums straightened his crown and sat up. "Davy! You don't say so! And where's he gone?"

"He's gone to hunt a volcano!" cried poor little Mrs. Dumy, sitting down on an acorn and hunting for her pocket hanky to cry in. "Tiny Mite next door heard him tell a butterfly that a volcano was a hole on the top of it. And when Davey said that he wished he could see one, the butterfly said he knew where there was a whole row of them and if my Davey wished to see them to hop on his back and he would take them there. That was since last night and I haven't seen him since. Oh, dear!"

"It's a case for Nancy and Nick, my detectives," cried King Snookums. "They can find a lost Pee Wee quicker than most folks can find a word in the dictionary. I'll call 'em right now. Nancy- Nick! Come here and bring your magic shoes."

When the Twins heard the trouble off they set to hunt for the poor little Pee Wee lady's lost Davy.

The first thing they did was to ask all the butterflies. The yellow butterfly with the black dots knew all about it. "Yes, jump on me and I'll take you to the place," he said. "Davy crawled into the hole on top of one of the volcanoes, and I have not seen him since."

And mind you the yellow butterfly took them to a fence with a row of flower pots on top turned upside down. "There are the volcanoes!" he said, "but it's gone. The one with Davey inside! It was the second one in the row. Oh, there it is! It's got a flower planted in it now."

"Then Davy must be under the dirt!" cried Nancy. "We'll have to dig him out!"

Sure enough Davy Dumpy was there and not hurt a bit, but awfully dirty. "I don't like volcanoes!" he cried. "I'll never hunt another one as long as I live."

DINKEY DOODLE GOES FISHING.

"Hi lee, hi lo, hi lee, hi lo!" sang little Dinky Doodle, the Pee Wee boy. "I'm going fishing for to catch a whale."

He went along singing that way as happy as could be, his fishing rod over his shoulder and his little can full of tiny bugs for bait.

He really wasn't going to catch a whale or even to try to catch one. What he was after was minnows, and little ones at that, for the little Pee Wee boy wasn't much bigger than a cherry seed himself.

After a while he came to a dandy place. It was a place where the creek made a nice little shallow pool with sunlight all over it where you could see, and tiny little fishes were wiggling their tails and chasing each other and playing tag.

"Here's the very place I'm looking for," said Dinky Doodle, unslinging his tiny can from his shoulder and baiting his tiny rod and tiny line with tiny bait. "Here's a nice round stone to sit on and everything!"

So he climbed up on the big stone—right on top—and threw his line in the water and—

What do you think then?

He went fast asleep.

Pretty soon the stone stuck out a foot on one side, then another foot.

Then it stuck out a head in front. Then it began to move.

For it wasnt a stone at all but a turtle, and Dinky Doodle was asleep plumb on top.

"Goodness, I feel heavy!" said the turtle to himself. "I must be tired—I'd better go home."

After while Dinky Doodle woke up. It was as dark as the cellar.

"Oh, my, oh my! Where am I" he shouted. "I must have caught a whale and it swallowed me."

"No such thing!" said the turtle shortly. "You're in my house under the big stone. Here comes some one now looking for you!"

It was Nancy and Nick, with lightning bug lanterns. Snookums had sent them.

"Another Pee Wee saved!" said Nick, when he spied Dinky Doodle.

FILMS DEPICT VASTNESS GERMAN REPARATIONS

BERLIN, Aug. 20 (Associated Press) —Germany's gold reparations payments to date, in 100-mark paper notes, would encircle the earth 25 times, according to motion-picture propaganda which is being used in the Berlin cinema houses. A 100-mark note is 16 centimeters long, or about 6.3 inches.

To make the point as realiztic as possible, there is flashed on the screen a picture of a common pedestal globe, such as is used in the geography classes of American schools, spinning rapidly about as a long string of these notes wrap around and round it.

It is the last scene in a serial picture of three parts which depicts by numerous illustrations the vastness of Germany's sufferings as a result of the Versailles treaty. The audiences sit almost breathless as reel after reel shows how much territory, shipping, livestock, coal, money, and material have had to be given up by the Fatherland.

Fuel is added to the fire of indignation by including a reel to illustrate what an overwhelming proportion of the taxes must be devoted to reparations payments. It reminds the taxpaying spectator that this promises to continue until 1957. A general groan invariably greets this comforting bit of information.

There can be little doubt as to the nature of feelings toward the Versailles treaty and the Entente with which the audiences leave a showing of this kind.

One apparent effort is made at the end of the serial to guard it against charges of being provocative and conducive to sentiment against the treaty. As the spinning globe, with it miles upon miles of hundred mark notes fades out, a sub-title asks what is to come out of "all this chaos?" The answer, in hurge inspiring letters, ends the film. It is: "Unity and justice and liberty."

Belleville Evened The Series-Newark Ball Park Was Burned

FIRE DESTROYED HARRISON FIELD

Home of the Newark Team Burned to the Ground—The Loss Estimated at $100,000 — Games Cancelled.

HARRISON, N. J., Aug. 20.—(Canadian Press.)— Harrison Field, home of the Newark Bears, International League baseball team, was destroyed by fire late Saturday at an estimated loss of $100,000. The blaze which started in the grand stand just after the crowd had left, completely encircled the field within a few minutes. The park was owned by the American and National Baseball Leagues and leased by the International League. It was built eight years ago.

Saturady's gate receipts were burned, the ashes of $700 in bills and a lump of silver that formerly had been coins to the value of $300, being all that was left of the $1,000 taken in during the day. This money, it was explained, was left in the club house beneath the grand stand in care of a watchman. It had been placed in a tin box but a falling beam broke the box, exposing the money to the flames.

It was said the money had been left at the club house, principally because a large crowd was expected for a double-header between Newark and Toronto, to-day, and it would be needed to make change. The double-header was cancelled.

Watchman Patrick Lyons was severely burned on the arms when he was surrounded by flames after he had gone under the grand stand to pull an alarm. He was able to go home after treatment at a hospital. Thomas Donovan, a fireman, was cut by falling glass and taken to a hospital. A spectator was overcome by smoke and carried away unconscious.

SOCCER NOTES

The P. & D.F.A. will meet tonight in the Chamber of Commerce rooms at 8 o'clock.

A new director will be appointed this evening and plans will be discussed whether or not to enter a team in the Plenty Cup series.

On Tuesday evening the Quakers and C.P.C. will play at the Oval in the Peck Cup series. Kick off at 6.15 o'clock. Owing to the shortness of the evening no interval will be allowed between the period. The teams will just change ends.

F. Keller, an old senior referee of this city handled the whistle in the Junior game on Saturday and satisfied all players with his decisions.

The Thistle F.C. will hold a practice this evening at the Exhibition grounds. All members of the executive have been asked to attend as there is important business to attend.

The local association will have to get busy in the very near future for the approaching end of the summer vacations leaves but little time for the series to be played.

The growing shortness of the evenings will soon make it difficult if not impossible to play evening games. Several of the last few matches have already ended in darkness with consequent dissatisfaction to the players. It is probable that the schedule will be doubled for Saturday afternoons.

The Thistle executive has decided to fix the cross-board of the goals at King Edward Park. They claim the west end and the C.P.C. east-end goal is in bad shape. This ground is in excellent shape now and only awaits sanction of the local association to play there.

WIN FOR BELLEVILLE TIES UP THE BIG FOUR BATTLE FOR HONORS

Hits For Petes Came at Wrong Time and Breaks Went Against Them — Heckman Weakened in the Sixth.

SCORE WAS 7 TO 2.

The Belleville Grand Trunks evened up the series for the Big Four section title by defeating the Petes 7 to 2 on the Riverside diamond, Saturday. The game was a heart-breaker for the Petes, with the breaks of the game going against them and the hits and errors all coming at the wrong time. For the first five innings the game was a pitchers' battle of the best order between Heckman and Jack Oulette, the Lindsay star of last year. Neither team was able to make any headway though the locals carried a slight margin by virtue of four hits to three for the visitors.

In the sixth, however, everything went blooey. A bad error followed by a hit gave the Trunks their first counter and then after two were out and two on the runways Heckman weakened, walking three and forcing in two runs. He then tightened up and fanned the next man retiring the side but the damage had been done. The Petes went right out to even the count in their half but a close decision at the plate went against Collins and ended a promising rally after one run had been scored. Wolfe's triple in the seventh came too late and in the eighth the Petes again threatened but Brownscombe went right to the crowd back of third base to take Comolli's foul fly and by a snappy play doubled Swanston at second.

In their half of the ninth the visitors sewed things up properly by scoring four runs, one of which was the only earned run of the game. Oulette started it with a single to right and Heckman's error on Weir's attempted sacrifice, left both runners safe. Brownscombe scored them both with a double and came home himself on Peeny Mills' triple. Harry Mills sent a sacrifice fly to right to score his brother.

The Petes made their final bid for the game in the ninth when Collins started off with a two bagger. He scored from second on Oulette's error but the next three men went out in order and the visitors walked off with the game.

A close decision in the sixth frame was given against the Petes when W. Mills was called safe at third. Had the umpire seen the play as many of the fans did the visitors would not have scored in that inning.

With the exception of the sixth and ninth innings Heckman pitched a good game allowing in all but eight hits, three of which were crowded into the last frame. He fanned seven but walked five. Oulette also pitched a fine game but weakened a little in the sixth. Williams was sent back of the grand stand to warm up but the right-hander tightened up again and finished the game, going strong. He had plenty of speed and kept the seven hits he allowed well scattered. He was equal with Heckman in the matter of strike outs and issued one complimentary.

Wolfe and W. Mills divided the batting honors of the game with a single and a triple each. Collins got a double and a single and Oulette singled twice in two official appearances.

Wolfe pulled one of the best fielding plays of the game when he made a great catch of W. Mills fly to center in the fourth frame. He made the catch while falling and rolled over two or three times but managed to hang onto the ball.

The biggest crowd of the season was on hand for the game with plenty of Belleville rooters in the stands.

Boston Nationals Lost Protested Brooklyn Game

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—(Canadian Press)—The Boston National League club's protest of Brooklyn's victory in the second game of a double-header at Brooklyn, July 4, was denied Saturday by John A. Heydler, president of the league.

The protest by Boston hinged upon a home run allowed Fournier, Dodger first baseman, in the sixth inning. Fournier's drive struck a flag attached to a staff on the top of the right field wall, became enwrapped in its folds for a moment and then dropped back into the playing field. Umpire Hart ruled the hit a home run.

Boston claimed that the flag was part of the playing field and that the hit therefore did not go out of the park, but President Heydler citing several precedents, decided that the flag was an obstruction beyond the actual limits of the playing field, thereby sustaining the ruling of the arbiter.

DE LAVAL JUNIORS WON YEOTES CUP

Defeated C.P.C. in Final Game Saturday For the Junior Football Championship.

De Laval won the Louis Yeotes Cup, emblematic of Junior Soccer championship, on Saturday afternoon at King Edward Park for the second year in succession. They defeated C.P.C., three goals to two in a good brand of football which had no awards for illegal tactics. Frick, De Laval goal-keeper, deserves the honor of winning the game. His work between the sticks was par excellence.

C.P.C. took advantage of the strong wind that was blowing down the field which resulted in De Laval being compelled to be on alert from the aggressive work of Carmichael who worked right in on the goal-keeper. Grant tipped the ball out, but Chambers scored through a mass of players in front of the goal, after three minutes play. A splendid individual move by the C.P.C. centre left the De Laval defence in queer street, he took the ball down on to the line, then shot it back to Chambers who rattled the cross-bar. Then Mitchell hit the upright and Frick cleared to mid-field. At this period, C.P.C. forwards were peppering the De Laval goalie, in fact, he saved when goals looked sure. Mitchell beat Pulley on a tackle in mid-field and at first chance sent across a beauty to Carmichael, the centre trapped the ball, feinted nicely Grant thought he was going that way, but he turned quickly to beat Frick with an unsavable shot. De-Laval only paid two visits into C.P.C. area, that were repulsed by Downer and Curtis. Two well-taken corner-kicks by Billingsley demonstarted that Frick was an artist in fisting clear when all the forwards were in on him. DeLaval paid a visit to the C.P.C. goal Bell putting past. Ref Elliot transferred the ball to the other end where he sent a low ground pass in front of goal, Halliday mis-kicked to let Evans score. T. Ball was off the field injured and on a raid to the C.P.C. goal, the De Laval forwards all had a big try for the nets until it hit the inside of the upright and went through for the equalizer two minutes before the interval. Half time—De Laval 2. C.P.C. 2

The next forty-five minutes started on even terms. The Packers were first to attack through Mitchell but Grant and Ward were stopping them in the nick of time. Carmichael was worrying the defence. Time and again he would dribble through to make Frick put up daring saves. On one occassion he threw himself right across the goal to stop the ball, inside the upright, from a shot by the C.P.C. centre. Even play was indulged in for a while with each team trying hard to gain the superiority. De Laval was the fortunate team getting the leading goal through tricky footwork of Studley. But the most unfortunate player was Carmichael who worked like a trojan to get a goal for C.P.C. His parting shots were missing by inches. At this reverse Chambers and Carmichael changed places with Downer and Curtis. This made things lively around Frick and Company. They held the C.P.C. outside the dreaded area until the final whistle and by so doing gained the league championship.

Goal-scorers—Chambers and Carmicael for C.P.C. and Evans, Smith and Studeley for De Laval.

The following table shows how the run of play travelled through the game:

| De Laval | 1st half | 2nd half |
|---|---|---|
| Goal kicks | 11 | 7 |
| Corners | 1 | 3 |
| Fouls | 0 | 0 |
| Goals | 2 | 1 |
| C.P.C. | 1st half | 2nd half |
| Goals kicks | 2 | 8 |
| Corner | 8 | 4 |
| Fouls | 0 | 0 |

The players were:

C.P.C.—Montgomery, goal; Downer and Curtis, full-backs; Ball, Halliday and Edgar, half-backs; Mitchell, James, Carmichael, Chambers and Billingsley, forwards.

De Laval—Frick, goal; Grant and Ward, full-backs; Ashmore, Cooper and Pulley, half-backs; Bell, Studeley, Evans, Smith and Elliott, forwards.

J. Kellier, referee.

Linesmen—S. Calladine and T. Foster.

A Record Crowd Saw Leaside Go Down to Defeat By 5 to 3.

OSHAWA, Aug. 20.—(Special)—Oshawa got away with the championship of Division A of the Central Baseball Ontario Baseball League on Saturday afternoon and Dainty the elongated southpaw, with his fourth consecutive win, when Leaside were defeated a score 5 to 3, before a record attendance estimated at 3,500 people with the crowd completely surrounding the field.

Breckinbridge, the old Oshawa Town Leaguer, who turned in such a good performance in the first game of the play-off was sent right back at Oshawa, but he only survived the second frame, Morrison the first man up, Oshawa's third hit, a slow one to Breck and he made a bad heave to first. Wilson poled out a Texas leaguer to centre field, R. Fair fanned, W. Fair opened the exit for James B., when he singled, scoring Morrison and McSloy. Another right hander was hurried to the rescue and he had a rough passage for the rest of the third as Roddick sacrificed both runners along and Rowden hit for two bases, scoring both runners. Oshawa was then held safe until the sixth, when they chased two more over after Roddick The first man up cracked out one that was good for the circuit, but failed to touch third bag and his Umps called him out. Tyson got on through Hoose, dropping his pop fly in front of plate, Dainty hit for two sacks and Tyson scored. Belding hit to Mahoney, who messed it and Dainty crossed thepan, McSloy got by in the next three frames with no scoring against him. Leaside put their first over in the second when Mahoney singled and stole the middle station. Maguire hit for two bases and the big second sacker crossed the plate. They added their other two in the sixth Hoose, the first man up hit to deep centre for two and Curzon raised out another to the same place, which R. Fair got under but it tore away from his grasping hooks and both scored.

After first aid was given Maguire was found to have a torn ear, while Curzon was taken to the Oshawa General Hospital before he regained consciousness.

Enquiries at the hospital yesterday found the good Leaside centre fielder resting easily. In the afternoon, he was taken to Toronto on the International Limited at 4.44.

After the game Saturday Manager Henderson of the Leaside team notified Secretary Nott of the Central Ontario League that the protest on the Leaside-Oshawa game of Wednesday, August 15, would be withdrawn and the members of the subcommittee of the league were at once served with notice of same. Oshawa will not be down against the winners of the Peterborough Belleville tie-up which has been set by President Dedman for Cobourg at 3.30 on Wednesday the first game in the finals between the two divisions will be on Saturday, August 25, place and time to be set later.

MISS HELEN WILLS WON TENNIS TITLE

Defeated Mrs. Mallory in Straight Sets on Saturday — English Team Won U.S. Doubles Title.

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., August 20 (Canadian Press). — The long reign of Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory as queen of United States tennis broken but once in the past eight years, came to a dramatic close on Saturday when Miss Helen Wills, 17-year-old "wonder girl" from the Pacific Coast, crushed the seven-time title-holder in straight sets 6-2, 6-1, in the final match of the tournament at West Side Tennis Club.

Mrs. Mallory fought gallantly in defeat, calling on all her power and strategy to check her youthful rival, but except for a few minutes of the first set, the mastery of Miss Wills was complete.

Meeting the champion at her own game a back court duel, the Berkeley California school girl rose to the greatest heights of her meteoric career to manoeuvre and smash her way to victory with a spectacular, irresistible attack.

Title honours in the national doubles championship went overseas, when the British pair, Miss Kathleen McKane and Mrs. Nancy Covell, vanquished Miss Eleanor Goss of New York and Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman of Boston, in a three-set struggle, 2-6, 6-2, 6-1.

Beaten in the first set by the superior strategy of their rivals, the British women swept the U.S. pair off their feet with a brilliantly sustained attack in the last two sets.

The losers tired under the swift pace, and were comparatively easy victims in the deciding set.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORT

The Lakeview Juniors will play the second game of their series with St. George's of Oshawa on Wednesday evening. The locals completely outplayed the Oshawa boys in the first game which was played here last Friday.

The Petes will play off the tie with Belleville on Wednesday. The game is scheduled for the Cobourg Horse Show Grounds. Rooters for both teams are expected to be out in force for this battle, which will decide the winners of the Big Four section.

Babe Ruth is quite peeved with Ban Johnson because the Mighty Ban put the taboo on his brand new bat. The swat king threatens to take legal action to have his bat declared O.K.

The Cincinnati Reds cut the Giants' lead considerably, but the champions still have a fairly good edge and will be hard to pass before the season ends.

The victory for the De Laval Juniors on Saturday afternoon gave them the football championship and the Louis Yeotes Cup for the second successive year.

Benny Leonard and Johnny Dundee are scheduled to meet at the Yankee Stadium on 5th September. Greb has a date with Wilson on 31st August at the Polo Grounds.

The United States Olympic team, which will appear in Paris for the 1924 games, has solved all transportation problems except that of where the finances are to come from. Appeals are being broadcasted for public support to help the committee finance the trip.

The winners of the Lakeview-Oshawa series will meet the Circle team of Kingston.

DAUBERT READY TO SHOULDER BLAME

Cincinnati Would Have Been on Top If His Batting Hadn't Taken a Slump.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 20.—When the 1923 National League season closes, if the Cincinnati Reds are found below the Giants, and perhaps below the Pittsburgh Pirates, too, Jacob Daubert will rise on his spiked shoes and shout: "I'm the guy!"

In some quarters Patrick Moran, as the manager, may be blamed for not ushering the Reds into another world series.

There will be others who will insist that McGraw's bank roll in rebuilding the Giants resulted in the downfall of the Reds.

But Jacob Daubert will lean against the hot-stove league during the winter and point to another baseball mystery in explaining the pennant defeat of the Reds.

Daubert will pick to pieces a batting slump of his own.

In 1922 Daubert experienced the most successful season of his career. He had the remarkable average of .336, in his thirty-seventh year, made 205 hits, more than any time in his life, and scored the most runs with 114.

Squinting through the National League batting averages recently Daubert almost had to drift down to the last line to find himself.

"There's the reason," remarked Daubert. "See what I'm hitting? Not many points above .200. It was .228 the last time I looked at the figures. Can you figure it? I can't.

"I'm hitting the ball just as solidly as I did last season. I have the same swing, haven't changed my stance, pick on the curve and the fast one, but I'm lining to infielders and outfielders, hitting into double plays where last season I was getting them safe, advancing base runners and getting runs for the boys.

"I can go through the book and show where a hit or two in the pinch on my part would have won at least seven games that we lost.

"What does this mean—add seven victories to our pennant percentage, knock off seven defeats, and we'd be out in front of the Giants."

How many players would put the blame on their own shoulders for keeping a ball club out of the pennant race? Baseball boasts few players of the Jake Daubert type.

PINCH HITTING IS THE TOUGHEST JOB

Pinch Hitter is Only Called Upon in the Crisis — Up Against Harder Pitching.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 20.—"Playing pinch hitter is the toughest job in baseball." So says Rogers Hornsby, premier star of the National League.

"There may be some soft jobs in baseball but pinch hitting isn't one of them," continues Hornsby. "I am content to play regularly rather than earn my salary by going in as pinch hitter when the occasion demands.

"It is hard enough to hit 'em safe when you are in the game every day, playing regularly. It's some tough job, believe me, to get off the bench cold and step into the breach, realizing that much depends on your ability to come through with a base hit.

"Don't overlook the fact that the good pinch hitter is invariably called upon in the crisis only. He is saved for the big moment where often a base hit means the old ball game. The pinch hitter is always up in the crisis.

"The toughest thing in the world is to make a base hit under pressure. At such spots the pitcher is giving you everything in his assortment. The pinch hitter is always looking at what the opposing pitcher has in reserve, just a wee bit more speed or a trifle faster breaking curve.

"Never until my recent injury did I realize what a job the pinch hitter really has. When recovering from my injured leg I several times went to bat in a pinch and, believe me, the feeling is much different than being in there regularly."

Most players will say "Amen" to Hornsby's expression relative to the pinch hitting job, yet there are players who seem to thrive on it.

At present Elmer Smith of the New York Yankees by his timely hitting has just about won the title of "King of the Pinch hitters."

PUZZLING PLAYS

THE PLAY

Eddie Collins of the Chicago Whie Sox is one of the brainie.. players in baseball. He never overlooks a debatable point.

Here is a rather interesting play he recently slipped me for my opinion.

There are runners on first and second and no one out. It is late in the game and the team at bat is five runs behind. Only a big inning will give them a chance.

The hit-and-run is put on and the batter hits a low liner to center field. It doesn't look as ifthere is a chance for him to make the catch. The runners are of that opinion and dash madly for the plate.

The centrefielder makes a diving catch of the drive. When he does so, the runner originally on second is half way between home and third, while the runner originally on first is almost to third.

The fielder throws the ball to the second baseman, who touches that base. The runner originally on first was the left fielder, and when the fielder touched second base with the ball he started for his position, figuring that act had retired both runners and the side.

What about it?

THE INTERPRETATION

While the mere touching of second base apparently created a triple play, such was not actually the case.

When the center fielder caught the fly ball, that made the first out.

When it was thrown to second and held on that base, it retired the runner who had left the base before the catch and was almost home. That was the second out.

The other runner was on first base when the ball was hit. He left it before the catch, and had advanced almost to third when the ball was held on second. It is perfectly obvious that it would be practically impossible for a runner to get back to first safely, with the fielder standing on second with the ball, yet that act did not retire him.

The rule says that in such a case to retire the runner, the ball must be legally held by a fielder on the base occupied by the base runner when the ball was batted, or he be touched with the ball.

Therefore, the ball should have been thrown to first base to have properly retired that runner, as that was the base he occupied when the ball was hit.

THE PLAY

There are runners on first and second base and no one out. The batsman hits a high fly ball to the infield, which the plate umpire rules an infield fly. Such a ruling on the part of the umpire is supposed to automatically retire the batsman.

A high wind is blowing which makes the judging of a fly ball a very difficult matter. The third baseman calls for the play and the other infielders permit him to try for the catch.

The high wind causes the ball to fall to the ground untouched. It struck several yards in front of the third baseman and then crossed the foul line about midway between third and home, finally coming to rest about 50 feet in foul territory.

The team in the field claimed that since the umpire ruled the ball an infield fly, the batsman was automatically out, even though the ball finally settled in foul territory.

The team at bat made the contention that the ball was foul and that it was impossible to have an infield fly on a foul ball.

What about it?

THE INTERPRETATION

Such a happening has several times come up in the major leagues.

The team at bat was correct in its contention. It is impossible to have an infield fly on a foul ball.

Major league umpires on such a play where there is a chance that the ball may go foul, often call "infield fly ball if the ball stays fair."

The umpire, even though he called infield fly, should regard the batsman's effort merely as a foul ball, send the runners back to first and second and make the batter hit over.

WON LIPTON CUP

CHICAGO, Aug. 20. Canadian Press. — The little sloop Gossoon fighting the gamest battle of her long racing career came from an almost hopeless position in the rear of the fleet, and by winning second place on Saturday in the final race for the Sir Thomas Lipton Cup, retained the trophy.

Gossoon's victory was announced after Ariel, winner of the first two races, was disqualified for fouling Sari. Ariel had finished sixth in Saturday's race, making the percentage of the two boats for the three days even but the ruling against the former New York champion gave the victory to the cup defender.

Colleen entering only in the last three races, carried away first honours on Saturday, leading Gossoon across the line by one minute and five seconds.

BASEBALL NEWS

Classics of Lindsay won the town title in the Midget baseball series defeating St. Mary's who won the honors last season. Classics will meet the Peterborough winner in the semi-finals of the O.B.A.A. race. There is no other Midget opposition east of Toronto. Hillcrests have already dropped out of the local series and Maple Leafs also are through, leaving Curlers and Sacred Heart to battle for the championship. Sacred Heart won the first half. Curlers took the first game of the second half and the competition from now on promises to be keen.

Winning their game with Hillcrests Saturday afternoon brought the Juvenile Maple Leafs to a tie with Sacred Heart for second half honors. The Leafs won the first half The championship of the second half will be decided at Riverside Park on Tuesday evening when Sacred Heart will have Sheehy on the rubber to oppose Bradley. It should be an interesting exhibition of the summer pastime.

St. George's of Oshawa will probably send in Gower their portside heaver against Lakeviews in the second game of the O.B.A.A. Junior round, at Oshawa on Wednesday. Gower played shortstop here and shaped up as a nifty ball player. Lakeviews can expect a hard game in the motor town, but they hold two trumps—good pitching and a healthy wallop.

Rotary and Belmonts meet in a Bantam game this evening. A win for Belmonts will give all four teams a chance for the second half.

Keene and Cognawaga play at Exhibition Park this evening at 5.45 o'clock to settle the argument over the second half. The Cogs were the only team to defeat Keene this sason and another victory will bring the teams together at Riverside Park on Wednesday evening in a final game for the championship of the East Peterborough League.

Following the protest by Sacred Heart against the Maple Leafs, win last Wednesday evening at Riverside Park, the Leafs management have asked the League for a ruling in the case of Alfred Griffin, the Sacred Heart left gardener, whom the Leafs declare is not eligible to play in the Juvenile series. Griffin played three games with a Junior club, one game with in Intermediate club and then dropped back to the Juvenile series. A request was also made for a proper declaration as to Griffin's age. A meeting of the City League Executive will be held tonight.

Secret of Mist at This Year's Derby Found By Scientist.

Visitors to the Derby who were unable to see the race because of the thick grey mist on the course will be interested to hear the scientific explanation of the phenomenon.

Dust emitted from chimneys in the industrial districts of the Midlands is the theory put forward by Mr. J. S. Owens, a scientist, of Cheam.

Writing to "Nature," he says:—"Records of this haze taken with my dust-counter at Cheam between 7 and 7.30 p.m. gave a greyish deposit of dust particles upon the cover glass.

"Most of them were irregular in shape and insoluble in water but scattered among the irregular dust particles were a number of small spheres. They were transparent and usually colorless but some were distinctly brown or reddish.

Ash Particles

"It will be remembered that on Derby day there was very little wind but what there was came from the north. It is difficult to avoid the conclusion that a large proportion of this dust travelled south from the manufacturing districts of the Midlands.

"The presence of colored and colorless transparent spheres points towards ash particles ejected from chimneys while the grey color is not what one would expect if domestic smoke were the origin."

ADVERTISING PAYS

William Ward and Sons, Limited, of London, manufacturers of Sir Haig and Cosmos cigarets, are firm believers in the power of advertising. The one big reason for this belief is, of course, the fact that advertising has created a wonderful amount of business for them. For nearly three years now this firm has been a consistent advertiser, every week in the year, in the Daily British Whig and also other papers throughout Canada. Their business has had a phenomenal growth. Millions of Sir Haig cigare are sold throughout Canada, annually, and business has increased so rapidly that it has been necessary to establish a branch factory for this firm in Brantford.

Brantford was selected because it was found after an extensive survey that the necessary labor could be secured there and the new plant employing between forty and fifty skilled hands will be started at once. It will be under the management of one of the members of the Ward family and the output will be used to supply some of the many unfilled orders of the firm.

WORK

We sometimes hear of people who work themselves to death, just as we hear of ghosts and man-eating sea serpents. And all the time we know "there ain't no such thing."

For one man who works himself to death 10,000 die from lack of exercise, overeating, late hours or avoidable worry. Fatalities from overwork or from hiccoughs are about equally rare.

Work develops; work stimulates; work strengthens; work induces, promotes and compels growth; work lays a cornerstone in the success structure whose place cannot b filled by a substitute.

Hard work will not at all take the place of judgment, thoughtfulness, tact nor an earnest purpose. Added to these, however, it always means a successful career.

But to many people "work" is an ugly word.

—The Optimist.

IRISH SOLICITOR STRUCK OFF ROLL

In the High Court, Hublin, the Lord Chief Justice struck Philip C. McDermott, solicitor, who practiced in Boyle, Co. Roscommon, off the roll of the Incorporated Law Society for professional misconduct.

Counsel stated that the case disclosed conduct of a very serious and very heartless nature. On December 17, Peter Shannon, a constable of the Royal Irish Constabulary, a widower with two young children, was shot in discharge of his duty. He had £286 in the Post Office Savings Bank and two insurance policies for £115 and £150. A sister of the dead constable employed McDermott to take out letters of administration, paid him to collect these sums. McDermott obtained the money, and, in addition, obtained compensation awarded to the children for the death of their father, making in all £1,061. In addition, he obtained £800 from the Irish Office in London, but this he lodged to the credit of the children and was safe. Repeated applications were made for the £1,061 he had received, but he went into bankruptcy, and the money had not been secured.

CAUGHT

A prosperous man of standing is arrested in Newton, N. C. Thirty-two years ago he escaped from the state penitentiary where he was doing 10 years for robbery. Now he goes back to finish his term. It must be a bitter pill to swallow, after so many years of freedom.

Escaped convicts are not always captured. But in a general way Emerson's law of compensation holds good and even after 32 years. The scale times do not seem to balance, because what is joy to one may be punishment to another. We never know how badly we are off, or how well, unless we have contrast in our existence, for comparison.

THE BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

Weat is a woman's face value? Is shhtjudged by the timeliness of her cosume, her possession of her costume, her possession of red kid slippers and skin colored stockings? Is she judged by a tailored blouse, a mannish tie and an unadorned blue suit? Is she judged by the piquant painting of her face, her neatly colored lips and her etched eyebrows? Or is she judged by the freshness of her complexion and a certain air of cleanliness?

By the last, is the answer that comes from the artists, coutouriers and beauty specialists. While, they say, a red shoe or a red lip may catch your eye on the avenue, it is the air of wholesome well-being that determines the basis of judgment.

Cleanliness, more than anything else, completes a woman's charm—the cleanliness that is the result of pure white soap, unscented and uncomplicated with promises for an immediate and magic loveliness from its use.

Cleanliness is a beauty secret as valuable as fresh air and as often overlooked. The strain of finding the frock that will be later than the latest, tthe reddest lipstick and the most alluring perfume, offset the results. Too many believe that these accessories will obviate the bad impression given by a blotched, ill-kept skin. They revert to the old idea of the ostrich and hide behind all manner of cosmetics that only serve to accentuate the defects, rather than cover them.

Quite naturally, such a condition of the skin is distressing, and after a few perfunctory applications of cold creams and lotions the women, in frantic despair, resort to the easier method of trying to conceal it. The practice is successful occasionally if one has the advantage of distance, but the fact will not stand close inspection.

A prominent society beauty had much trouble with her skin and after trying several beauty specialists she gave up all treatment, declaring that such effort was much too strenuous. She had no time, she said, to spend in cleansing, and patting, and rubbing her face, or even in having it done. The result is that, in spite of the fact that her photographs still pronounce her a great beauty, her skin is shockingly bad and her excessive use of cosmetics is the amazement of all her friends. She uses a penetrating powder that gives her an unpleasant pallor, and on her lips she wears bright carmine.

How much easier it would have been for her to give the scientific treatments a fair trial and then carefully cleanse her skin twice a day in the good old fashioned way, for she was assured that by so doing she would arrive finally at the desired result.

Water and pure soap with a brush of powder is the beauty secret of the day. And with it comes a subconscious influence on character that makes face value more than skin deep.

The term "manicuring" presupposes infinite leisure, a whole battalion of bottles and jars of various sizes and the wherewithal to supply the supplies. Many a nail has gone ragged and unshined because of the initial outlay demanded.

It is a comfort to the poor in purse and the proud in spirit to learn of a new economical and efficacious method —so simple that it is within the reach of all and so effective that it is a boon to all womankind.

The filing and the shaping of the nails can always be done best by the woman herself. This has long been well known. No matter how careful or elaborate a manicurist has been, a woman will almost invariably do a little extra filing when she reaches her own dressing table to straighten out the defects which are visible when she views her fingers bent in rows over the palms of her hands, straight in front of her. Many women I know file their own nails and then go to the manicurists for the remainder of the task; for they know just the length they want their nails and they wish to take no chances of having them too short, too pointed, or too square shaped.

Mary Lewis, the Follies beauty, is most particular in the care of her hands. She thinks beautiful hands are most important adjuncts to a beautiful face, and hands cannot be kept beautiful without expert care—the sort of care that is not left entirely to the professional manicurist. Miss Lewis works on her hands every day herself, and the preparation which she uses is so shockingly simple that anyone can make it and apply it.

She dissolves half of a small cakjof a pure white unscented soap, shaved fine, in a half cupful of hot water. She then stirs in gradually two teaspoonsful of olive oil and allows the mixture to cool. This cream, rubbed around the nails, will both cleanse and soften the cuticle. After the cuticle is pushed back and the nails filed, she rinses and dries the hands. To plilishi the nails, the shavings rofm a dry piece of the same soap are used. These are rubbed on the nails with the tips of the thumbs, and the ploish is finished off iwth a chamois.

The result is a clear, healthy p , with no danger of infection from complicated preparations.

If the woman who dresses q te proper
Doesn't soon find somethin to stop her
From wearing men's clothes,
The Lord only know
The kids won't know mommer from popper.

"Conversation Circulation"

IN the days when "Conversation Circulation" statements were the basis on which the advertiser bought space, the advertising solicitor who put up his story in the most pleasing manner, generally got the business.

In case the advertiser questioned the figures he might possibly go to the newspaper office and look over the circulation records with his own auditors. But neither he nor his auditors knew the intricacies of newspaper circulation records or the possibilities for juggling figures.

Circulation differences and arguments caused bitter battles between many newspapers. Ingenious schemes were used by unscrupulous publishers to put up the appearance of a larger circulation than they had. The prevalence of these practices brought out the necessity for a reputable agency to audit and report on circulation matters.

The Audit Bureau of Circulations was started eight years ago by a nucleus of the leading advertisers, agents, newspaper, magazine, farm papers, and trade paper publishers. Today it has a membership of 1800. The purpose of the bureau is to make fair and impartial audits of circulation records and it is now accepted as the Standard Authority among space buyers throughout the United States and Canada.

Every Publisher-Member of the Bureau is required to make semi-annual statements setting forth the annual net paid circulation. Once a year the Bureau sends an auditor to the office of each publisher to check and if necessary correct his circulation statements.

Study the A.B.C. reports of the publications you are considering and it will not be necssary to argue about competitive circulation.

GOODWILL ISSUE SOO DAILY STAR

Creditable Edition Under Auspices of City's Business Men.

On the day that The Sault Daily Star, one of the evening papers of Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, was printed for the first time on its new 24-page Duplex Tubular press, which, by the way, was also the opening day, Mobilisation Day, of Discovery Week, when the Sault had its big celebration, on Saturday, 4th August, a "Goodwill Edition" of the paper made its appearance under the auspices of the business men of the city, who, out of compliment to the editor, James W. Curran, took over the publication of that day's edition.

It was a unique tribute to the work of the editor when a committee of citizens took over his paper installing the Mayor, James Dawson, as editor pro tem. Their attitude was that "Sault Ste. Marie believes an editor should know when he is appreciated, and it thinks communities should praise the editor when he deserves it."

The edition contains many complimentray references to the work of Mr. Curran as editor. "Comments on the Star's work from far and near" occupy an entire page, which contains eulogistic letters from friends of the paper in many walks of life. Heading the list is a letter from the Prime Minister of Ontario, G. H. Ferguson, complimenting the paper on its acquisition of a new and up-to-date press, and the section includes letters from the Hon. James Lyons, Minister of Lands and Forests, one from Norman H. Hill, managing editor of the Sault's Evening News, and one from Chase S. Osborn, former governor of Michigan.

An entire page is devoted also to "The Sault Star and its Editor," by Major Dawson. Centred with a cut showing "The Editor Caught Reading an Exchange," it has also a unique section in an interview granted by the editor himself, "Jim Curran," and contains several articles reminiscing on the early history and days of the paper, which was admitted to be a broken down publication when the present enterprising editor took it over.

Another page shows the new press (speed 25,000 an hour, weight 40 tons, and another is headed "Missionary Pioneers First Visit the Sault in 1641," and contains a cut of Rt. Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D., Bishop of Peterborough, who gave the solemn benediction at the dedication of the memorial to the early missionaries.

The entire edition with its atmosphere of friendliness, not alone to the editor whom it was designed to honor, but to the community at large and to the visitors during Discovery Week, speaks well for the fraternal spirit among the people who conceived and carried through an idea which had for its incentive a desire to honor a public servant while living, and allow him the pleasure of realizing a community's good feeling toward him, while still in the flesh.

HISTORY OF WHALES TO BE INVESTIGATED

Several Species Have Been Practically Exterminated

The acquisition of the Discovery, the vessel built for Captain Scott's first Antarctic expedition for scientific investigation on whales and the remote seas they inhabit, is a step of advantage to zoological knowledge and to a precarious industry. It is a first result of the work of an interdepartmental committee appointed by the Colonial Secretary in 1918, to inquire into research and development of the dependencies of the Falkland Islands, and more remotely, of the active interest taken in whales by the British Museum of Natural History for many years, writes a scientific correspondent in The Times.

The "right" or whalebone whales and the toothed whales, including porpoises and dolphins, are the least known of existing mammals. It is not even certain if they are of common lineage, rightly placed in a single "order" of mammals, or if complete adaptation to a strictly aquatic life has not brought about a covergent resemblance between two groups of mammals as little related as, say, the telephant and the armadillo. Their place among the other orders of mammals is doubtful. Creatures like seals and walruses are clearly carnivorous land mammals that have taken to a marine life secondarily, and still betray their terrestrial origin in their structure and in their habit of coming ashore to breed.

Whales are truly pelagic, becoming stranded only by accident, conducting all their affairs, including courtship, birth, and the rearing of the young, on the high seas, and showing in every detail of their structure so intimate a fitness for the waters that they might almost be survivors from an epoch in which there was no advanced terrestial life. Fossil history throws no light on the origin of the whalebone whales and hardly does more than suggest a possible closer approach to the toothed whales, although indeed the latter can be traced back to more primitive and generalized creatures resembling the common ancestors of carnivores and insectivores.

It is not even known if the whales found south of the equator, and given names by whalers identical with those of northern waters, belong to the same species. The rorquals, or "finners," which comprise the most gigantic and swiftest of the whole order, are supposed by some authorities to visit all the seas in the course of cosmopolitan migrations, but by others it is suspected that were they more known specific differences would be discovered. The breeding places, probably in warmer waters have yet to be ascertained, and there is uncertainty even about the food. Toothed whales for the most part hunt a larger prey, pursuing and capturing fishes of all kinds. Whalebone whales swim open-mouthed along the surface, sifting the myriad and minute floating life in their baleen plates, but some of them also capture fish.

Rise and Fall of Whaling

Sir Sidney Harmer, who as director of the Natural History departments of the British Museum has succeeded Sir William Flower, has repeatedly called attention to the grave danger attending unrestricted whaling. The pursuit of the Atlantic right whale in the Bay of Biscay was active from the twelfth century, but has now ceased on account of the practical extermination of the quary. The Greenland right whale was pursued to exhaustion successively off Spitsbergen in the Davis Straits, and in the North Pacific and Behring Sea. The introduction of the modern harpoon gun made it possible to attack the larger and swift rorquals, and the industry is now concerned chiefly with the humpback the fin, and the blue whale. These have now been seriously reduced in northern waters, but since 1905 have been profitably attacked on the edge of the Antartic ice.

The method of the industry has also changed. The captures are no longer stripped of their blubber and whalebone at sea, but are towed to elaborate factories on shore. In these establishments almost every part of the carcass is utilized. Train-oil, sperm-oil, spermaceti, baleen and ambergris are fully prepared. The meat is used as human food and is held to be excellent by those who have tasted it. The refuse and the bones are turned into various forms of guano.

The favorite localities are in South Georgia and the South Shetlands, islands which are dependencies of the Falklands and therefore under British jurisdiction, although actually the commercial interests are largely in the hands of Norwegian firms. The question which it is hoped to resolve by the work of the Discovery is whether or no Antarctic whaling is in danger of the fate which has overtaken northern fishing. In a single year as many as ten thousand whales were captured and brought in. The leaders of the industry urge that as these whales have enormous regions open to them the toll now taken in a restricted area cannot seriously affect their numbers.

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

BUOYANCY MAINTAINED.

New York, August 20. Canadian Press. — Foreign conditions appeared less troublesome as a result of developments over the week end and early dealings in the stock market to-day maintained the buoyance existing at last week's close. Consolidated Gas, Gulf States steel, New York Central and many other active stocks reached new highs on the move, while all the industrial leaders were in demand at the best levels reached on the current recovery. Even the oils were higher despite adverse factors like another increase in the weekly crude production and announcement of reductions in Gulf Coast crude prices. Realizing sales in the first hour were a natural sequel to the uninterrupted character of last week's advance.

After five consecutive days of rising prices traders looked to their profits, giving the list an easier tone, around 11 o'clock. But these offerings were absorbed by only fractional recessions and individual forward movements kept up. Corn products held around its best levels of the movement, so that difference of opinion exists as to whether an extra dividend will be declared on corn products in September or December.

Standard Oil issues which stand to lose heavily from the continuance of the gasoline war, are slightly over the price of a week ago. This means that the worst developments in the oil situation have been passed and that news from now on should be more constructive. No large short interest existed in the Standard Oil stocks at the time of the initial announcement of price cuts in gasoline. The opinion of many is that their strength last week was due to good buying by inside interests who believe the gasoline war will be temporary.

FRANK STANLEY IS DEAD HEAD OF PIANO COMPANY

TORONO, Aug. 20—Musical Toronto lost a well-known figure, when Frank Stanley, president of the Stanley-Cecilian Pianos, died at his home, 212 St. Clair avenue west. Mr. Stanley has been in poor health for some years past but became seriously ill less than two months ago.

Born in Toronto fifty-four years ago, Frank Stanley started to work in the office of P. W. Ellis, at the age of fifteen. A few years later he had become a successful commercial traveler, and in 1891, together with his brother, Charles, founded the Stanley Piano Company, later buying out Charles Stanley. About three years ago he took over the failing Cecilian Company, amalgamated it with his own company, and made a success of the combined company.

Mr. Stanley was a prominent Methodist, a member of Timothy Eaton Memorial church. While a member of Broadway Tabernacle some years ago, he was superintendent of the Sunday school and in Timothy Eaton church took charge of the financial end of the Forward Movement a few years ago, raising a large contribution from that church. Mr. Stanley had been asked to take the chairmanship of the C.N.E. music committee this year, but his bad health prevented his acceptance of it.

Mr. Stanley is survived by his widow, three sons, Alfred, Garton and Frank two daughters Grace and Marion, four brothers, Edmund, of New York, Charles of Chicago, and Paul of Montreal, four sisters, Mrs. A. J. Clarke, Mrs. R. G. Symes, Mrs. T. A. Jeffery and Mrs. T. E. Young, all of Toronto.

The Stanley Piano Company was first established in Peterboro by Charles Stanley. Mr. Frank Stanley was the Toronto representative of the firm while it remained in this city.

WEDDING BELLS

STEPHENS—NORTHCOTT.

A pretty wedding was solemnised at St. Andrew's Manse on Saturday, 18th August, Rev. James Rollins officiating, when Elsie, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Northcott, 512 Aylmer Street, was united in marriage to Oliver, son of Mr. and Mrs G. F. Stephens, of Campbellford.

They were attended by Miss Grace Northcott, sister of the bride, and Mr. Earl Stephens, B.A., brother of the groom.

The happy couple left, amid showers of confetti, for a short motor trip.

VETTER—CUFFE.

On Saturday, August 18th, at St. John's Church, the marriage was solemnized of Willa Harriet, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Tarleton Cuffe, and Edward Leo Vetter, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. H Vetter, of Toronto. In the absence of the Rector, the ceremony was performed by Rev. W. R. Courage, rector of St. George's Church.

Promptly at one o'clock, the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss M. Flowers. She was attended by Miss Mary Trevor McVean, of Dresden, as flower girl, and Master Ted McVean as ring-bearer.

The bride wore a straight line gown of accordion-pleated apricot georgette, with heavy girdle of silver. Her hat was of faille silk, faced and trimmed with oyster white velvet, outlined with silver beading, and she carried a shower bouquet of sweetheart roses and lilies of the valley.

The little flower girl, Mary McVean, was attractive in orchid organdie, with apple-green Priscilla bonnet, whilst Ted McVean was an admirable ring-bearer in a Sailor Boy costume. Only the members of the contracting parties were present at the ceremony, which was followed by a buffet luncheon at the home of the bride's parents, during which Miss Georgia Cuffe sang very sweetly "Because."

Mr. and Mrs. Vetter left on the 3.30 train for a honeymoon on the Pacific Coast and Alaska, the bride travelling in a suit of imported tweed, with bisque hat and shoes, stockings and gloves to match. En route to the station, the bridal party drove to the cenotaph on the G.W.V.A. grounds, where the bride left her bouquet, in memory of her only brother, who died in service during the war.

Mr. and Mrs. Vetter will reside on Willard Avenue, Toronto.

MARSHALL—BUCKHAM.

The marriage of Ethel Mary, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Buckham, Morrow Street, to George E. Marshall, B.A., of Windsor, took place at two o'clock on Saturday afternoon at Knox Presbyterian Church. Rev. A. H. McConnachie, of Centreville, officiating.

Attendants were Miss Edna Buckham and Mr. Harold McLeod, of Detroit, a cousin of the bridegroom.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Later, the young couple left on a honeymoon trip to Toronto, thence by boat down the St. Lawrence River. They will reside in Windsor.

SIMMONS—McCRACKEN

NORWOOD, Aug. 20.—A very quiet but pretty wedding took place in Christ's Church (Anglican), on Saturday morning, August 18th at eleven o'clock, when Myrtle, the youngest daughter of Mrs. Joseph McCracken, became the bride of Mr. J. Simmons of Toronto. The ceremony was performed by the Rev T. J. O'Conor-Fenton. A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's mother, King street, after which Mr. and Mrs. Simmons left by motor on a honeymoon trip.

Most children are being forced to do school work under the handicap of a constant nervous strain, caused by neglect of Eyes that need help.

It is foolish to lose time in supposing that the child will "Grow out of it."

LITTLE WANT ADS.

At this time of the year, there are any number of things that are badly needed, either by the man or woman.

These things can be done without, but the Summer is going to be not quite as happy without them, and they need not cost you nearly as much as you think, if you only use the Want Ads. to get them.

So many lose a vast amount of pleasure simply because they have never learned the value of a simple little appeal to the Examiner Want Ad. Column. Don't let this bright month of June go by without getting a little extra Summer wants through the Want Ads.

FATALLY HURT BY CONSTABLE DROVE 4 MILES

James Malinoff, On Bail, On Theft Charge, Shot By Police Force Recruit

THE OFFICER'S STORY

MONTREAL, Aug. 21.— James Malinoff, 21 years old, 1809 St. Urbain street, was fatally wounded by a police constable, who claims to have found him and Sylva Martin, 21 years old, 198 Milton street, in the act of stealing a spare tire from an automobile parked near the corner of Sherbrooke street west and Marlowe avenue, Notre Dame de Grace, at 3.30 o'clock in the morning.

With a bullet hole in his left side Malinoff drove four miles in the automobile, at the wheel of which he was at when shot before he gasped to his companion. "I can't go any further, I'm dying. Get a doctor," and collapsed.

When Martin, having laid his friend on the grass in Lafontaine Park, and, pretending that he had found him here, brought officers to Malinoff's aid, the man was dead. Martin was held as a material witness for the Coroner's inquest which opened this morning and was adjourned until Thursday.

The officer who shot Malinoff was Constable Breton, a newly recruited officer of the Norte Dame de Grace police station.

Officer's Story.

Constable Breton stated that he was patrolling the Sherbrooke street west section of his district at 3.30 a. m. when he noticed an automobile turning around several times, and coming in and out of various side streets. The chauffeur of the automobile, the constable saw, was looking around him as though to see if there was any one in sight.

Constables in the Notre Dame de Grace station had been warned to be on the watch for automobile thieves, who have recently stolen many cars from the suburb and he decided to watch the two men he saw in the automobile closely.

The constable claims that he saw the car stop close to an automobile parked on Marlowe avenue near Sherbrooke street, and the man with the chauffeur alight, and tinker with the spare tire at the rear of the parked automobile.

He approached the men. Seeing the constable, the man on the street leapt into the car. The policeman had drawn his revolver and advanced toward the front of the automobile. To escape they had to drive towards him. Constable Breton reported that the chauffeur of the, Malinoff, drove straight at him and that he had just time to jump out of the way as the automobile shot forward. As the car rushed past him the constable fired two shots at the chauffeur who was crouched low over the wheel. He did not think at the time that either of the shots found its mark.

Drove to Park.

The automobile sped away and the constable, returning to his station brought Constables Brunet and Dansereau on a motorcycle to the scene. They found the parked automobile still on the street and the spare tire at the rear of it, half hanging from its straps.

The automobile was identified by the license number of the car, as the property of G. G. Asch.

It was 4.50 o'clock a.m. when Constable St. Jean of the No. 14 (Park Lafontaine) police station was hailed by a man in an automobile driving up Amherst street near Sherbrooke street. The driver of the car, who was later identified as Sylva Martin, told the officer that he had seen a man lying on the grass of the park and that he seemed to have been badly hurt. Martin accompanied the officer back to the park and after Malinoff was found, aided his removal to the police station.

Officers at the station believed the man to be dead but an ambulance was summoned. Doctors at once saw that Malinoff was beyond aid.

Martin Held.

In the meantime blood stains in Martin's automobile and the fact that he had no chauffeur's license and that there were no lights on the automobile, caused officers to hold Martin. Detectives were rushed to the park from headquarters and Sergeant Detectives Terrien and Gauthier at once recognized both the dead man and Martin.

Chief Mercier of the detective office stated that Martin made a confession in which he told of the shooting in Notre Dame de Grace, but that he would not admit that he and Malinoff were engaged in stealing an automobile tire when surprised by the constable.

James Malinoff was arrested on the night of February 3 last by Constable Ennis of the narcotic squad and Sergeant Detective Thivierge at 83 St. Catherine street east, on a charge of attempted burglary. Malinoff's trial was to have come before the Court of Sessions August 28.

GERMAN CABINET AGREES ON AN EMERGENCY PROGRAMME

Chancellor Stresemann and Colleagues Convinced That Nothing Short of Dictatorial Measures Will Save the Country's Internal Situation.

BERLIN, Aug. 21—(Canadian Press). — Germany's industrialists, commercial organizations and banks will be immediately called upon to state under oath the amount of foreign currency in their possession so as to enable the Government to requisition a certain percentage for the purpose of creating a national defence fund. With this money the Government will endeavor to put a prop under the tumbling mark and establish a fund for food purchases abroad.

This emergency programme was agreed upon at an extraordinary session of the Cabinet last night, continuing into the early hours of the morning. President Ebert, Chancellor Stresemann and the entire Ministry are convinced that nothing short of dictatorial measures will save the internal situation, which is now fast careening, not only because of the mark's further collapse, but chiefly because of the utter chaos prevailing in all lines as a result of the introduction of the "gold mark." Wages and prices are completely upsetting conditions of production and retailing.

BIG SEIZURE OF CANADIAN BEER

U.S. Officers Get 12,000 Quarts of Real Ale at One Catch.

MALONE, N Y., Aug. 21.—Federal agents early yesterday morning made their biggest single seizure of rum-running vehicles, catching in the net spread along the frontier eleven cars of all descriptions, carrying a total of 12,000 quarts of Canadian ale. It was the first time the State police had figured in prohibition enforcement here since the repeal of the Mullan-Gage Act.

The rum-runners were travelling south when halted by the officers. The ale caravan was split into three sections. Four cars, travelling at high speed, comprised the first section, four were in the second and three were trailing. Seven men were taken into custody. The others evidently saw what was taking place in the road just ahead and leaped from their cars and escaped.

So large was the combined cargo of smuggled ale that the officers spent nearly two hours smashing the bottles. Only sufficient for evidence was kept. Drivers of the seized cars were forced to stand by and see their valuable loads of wet goods soak into the earth of the fields. The seven prisoners were taken to Plattsburg yesterday afternoon for a hearing before United States Commissioner Pattison. The confiscated machines were taken to Malone for storage

The total value of the cars were placed by officers at around $14,000. The Canadian ale, at reported Saratoga prices, would be worth $18,000 retail.

Just before this seizure, three Brooklynites fell into the hands of the dry officers when their car collided with another machine. They are Mr and Mrs. Howard S. Rhinehart and Mrs. John Malone.

The State police were notified of the collision and hurried to the scene. They found Canadian liquors, it is alleged, and held the party until the Customs officers arrived. Rhinehart, taken before United States Commissioner Burns, waived examination. No charges were placed against the two women, who were advised to return home and raise the $5,000 demanded as bail for Rhinehart in default of which he was committed.

Say Movies Big Aid to the Silver Miner.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—United Press).—The use of silver in arts and manufactures has developed into an important factor in the silver market, making constantly growing demands on silver production, according to Robert Linton of New York, president of the North Butte Mining Company, in a statement on "The Outlook for Silver."

"The amount of silver required for use in arts and manufactures," says Linton, "has shown a steady increase rising in the United States from 13,217,284 ounces in 1900 to 30,252,596 ounces in 1918 from which point it dropped to 28,843,628 ounces in 1921, or a net increase for the period of over 100 per cent.

"The most important single factors in this increase have been the development of the motion picture industry and the growing popularity of amateur photography. Approximate ly 5,000,000 ounces of silver are used annually in the United States alone for these purposes, and what is used in other countries doubtless brings the aggregate up to a large figure."

LARGEST AIRPLANE ENGINE.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—(Associated Press)—The British Air-Ministry experts are at work perfecting an airplane engine capable of developing 1,500 horsepower, which will be the largest known. Two trial engines are nearing completion and will soon be tested.

The new giant of the air will have six cylinders, each developing 250 horsepower.

If the present experiments are successful the experts will begin work on a 12-cylinder engine to have more than 3,000 horsepower. Airplanes fitted with three such engines will be capable of developing upwards of 9,000 horsepower, and will carry 120 passengers at 100 miles an hour.

GEDDES LOSES SIGHT OF EYE

May Be Unable to Return As Ambassador to the United States.

LONDON, August 21. Canadian Press. — Reports that Sir Auckland Geddes, the British Ambassador to the United States, will not return to Washington, have been revived because of the precarious condition of his eyes.

While the government will not concede the likelihood of his retirement, the impression prevails in well informed political circles that the Government authorities are casting about for a suitable successor.

Ambassador Geddes has lost the sight of one eye which entails a great strain upon the remaining eye and in addition his general physical condition is impaired.

ICE IN ARCTIC COOLS SUMMER

Presages Early Fall According To Some Weather Experts

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21.—Weather experts displayed keen interest yesterday in the theory presented that unusual ice floes in the North Atlantic influence this year's weather conditions and are responsible for some of its freak features. Possibility of early frosts in Northern Canada is believed to be closely connected with this conclusion.

Presence of unusual amounts of ice in Northern waters is regarded as having a close relationship with the abnormalities of the last year, and even the most conservative scientists who insist that all weather is abnormal admit it may have some bearing on the discovery made by Dr. C. G. Abbott of the Smithsonian Institution that the sun is giving off less heat than usual.

Ice Fields in North Atlantic.

Existence of abnormal ice fields in the North Atlantic and in Hudson Bay has been verified by the Hydrographic and Geodetic Survey offices. In the early season icebergs were sighted farther south than ever before, and ships were warned to alter their courses.

To failure of the sun to melt the usual amount of ice and thus compel recession of the Arctic refrigeration to the usual distance north is ascribed the late spring and the heavy snows which swept across New England and northward late last winter and early in the spring.

Snow and Ice Not Melted.

The sun is already halfway back from its annual northern trip, with the result that the unusual accumulations of snow and ice have not been melted. This accumulated cold of the Arctic has a good start on its yearly journey southward, a fact that presages an early fall, according to some weather experts.

Whether or not the tendency of the ice boundaries of the north to project southward has affected drouth conditions in the United States is a question upon which Government scientists are divided.

Two Men Killed When Airplane Crashed.

ROPEFIELD, Camp Bragg, N.C., Aug. 20.—(Canadian Press.)—Alfred de Mesquita, of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Durham, N.C., publisher of the Durham Sun and The Fayetville, N.C. Observer, and Sergeant Edmund Rease, of New York city, were killed here late yesterday in an aeroplane accident.

The plane went into a nose-dive after taking off, bursting into flames after it struck the ground. Both men are believed to have been instantly killed.

While the aeroplane was privately owned, an army board of inquiry has been appointed to investigate the accident.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO PEOPLE OF SAAR VALLEY

But Whole European Situation is Difficult Says Former Mayor of Winnipeg.

PRAISES THE LEAGUE

(BY H. N. MOORE.)

LONDON, August 21. (United Press.) — R. D. Waugh, former Mayor of Winnipeg, who has been the Canadian representative on the Saa Commission since it was inaugurated, has resigned his post, has resigned his post, has returned to London, and will sail for Canada tomorrow aboard the Empress of Scotland.

Mr. Waugh refused to make any statement regarding the situation in the Saar Valley, saying only that "the entire European situation is most difficult just now, and I have no desire to rock the boat."

"Possibly you might be able to make a statement that would steady the ship." I said to Mr. Waugh, but he replied that he was afraid that anything that might be said in the newspapers just now might tend to have the opposite effect.

Warm Tribute.

Mr. Waugh paid a warm tribute to the inhabitants of the Saar Valley, stating that he had always received the greatest kindness and consideration from them.

He was also enthusiastic about the League of Nations, declaring that the league is not to be blamed for the awkward situation that has arisen in the Saar.

"The British House of Commons upheld my attitude," he continued, "and that was a great satisfaction to me, in view of the fact that I had not sought the post; in fact I sought it no more than I did the position as head of the Manitoba Liquor Board some years ago and politics entered into neither appointment."

Mrs. Waugh and Miss Waugh are not sailing just now but will remain in Europe for a few more weeks.

MATCHES AS TOYS PROVE DANGEROUS

Three Little Girls Caused Fire Last Night--Quenched By Neighbor.

Three little girls playing with matches jeopardized a house at the corner of Brock and Downie streets at 8 o'clock last night.

One girl struck a match and threw it into some leaves under the verandah. She then got a pail of water to extinguish the blaze she had caused, but on the approach of a neighbor all three ran away. The Fire Department was called on, but found that the neighbor had succeeded in quenching the flames.

The threatened house was vacant, and only the prompt work of the neighbor who saw the smoke from his verandah the result might have been serious.

ENCOURAGE SETTLERS.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 21.— (Canadian Press.)— The first meeting of the Board of Directors of the newly organized Canada Colonization Association was convened here yesterday morning with Sir Augustus Nanton presiding and excellent progress in obtaining immigrants as permanent settlers in the Dominion was reported. The meeting continued yesterday afternoon.

GRIM TRAGEDY DESCENDED ON BROOKLYN CITY

Falling Wall and Roof During Fire Plunges Firemen into the Blazing Ruins.

TWO KNOWN DEAD

NEW YORK, August 21. Canadian Press. — Tragedy descended on the city during the night, when the roof and one wall of the new Plaza Hall, located at Grand and Havemeyer streets, in Brooklyn, crashed during a spectacular fire, and hurled a number of the firemen into the blazing ruins.

For hours rescue parties worked frantically in the debris and the first reports placed the number of the dead at ten. Hampered by darkness and the intense heat bursting from the smoking, flame-lit pile, firemen and police this morning were able to compile only an unverified casualty list.

According to the list, two firemen, Raymond Farrell and James Sullivan, both members of the same engine company, were killed, and 47 men, mostly fire fighters, were seriously injured, six of them perhaps fataly.

The search of the ruins however has not yet been completed for the fire is still smouldering, with fitful bursts of flames.

A SPECIAL PRIZE LOCAL EXHIBITION

For Best Decorated Sheaf of Oats Shown By Any Lady.

A special prize will be donated by Mr. W. H. Merrill for the best decorated sheaf of oats to be exhibited by any lady at the Peterboro Exhibition. The only provision of entrance being that one member of the family is a member of the Association.

The dimension of the sheaf is to be not less than 15 inches in circumference, and will be judged as follows: Quality of grain 40 points, quality of straw 20 points decorations 20 points, neatness 20 points. This is the third year for this special prize, and as the second year brought forth more competitors than the first, the third year is expected to excell both these years.

Ribbons, flowers, flags, berries and autumn leaves formed very attractive decorations last year, combined as they were in many ways, which showed the ingenuity and artistic sense of the farm young ladies.

For the best stocks of oats and corn another prize is being donated by the Gardner Seed Company, of Rochester, N.Y., which is renresented in this city by Mr. W. H. Merrill. This will be a silver shield on a mahogany background, valued at $25, to be won three times by the same exhibitor.

For oats, there must be 4 sheaves, not less than 24 inches in circumference. The quality of grain and the strain will be considered, and 60 points awarded for grain and 40 points for the straw.

For the corn, there must be 4 sheaves, containing 12 stalks each, the cob, stalk and maturity to be considered. The Gardner Company will also donate the winners cash prizes. 1st prize, $5.00 and the shield; 2nd, $5.00; 3rd, $3.00.

The above sheaves must be grown from "Growmore" seeds.

Make a list of cuss words you use on hot weather. Many can be used for cold weather soon.

Chong-Chow Wondering What Next Will Happen After His Hot Chase

MONTREAL, Aug. 21.— Chong Chow has been found. This no doubt, conveys little information to the average citizen but to the agents of the Immigration Department and five officers of the Superior court, the name provokes either intense merriment or dark rage. For Chong was the object of a hot chase over the week-end.

Chow was convicted on a charge of having "hop" in his possession contrary to the laws of the land. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $600 or to be committed to jail for six months in default. He chose the latter.

The amended Opium and Narcotic Act stipulated that all aliens convicted of an offence thereunder shall be deported as undesirables at the end of their sentence.

Chow was in Bordeaux at three o'clock Saturday afternoon, and Immigration officials were at the door to receive him when he was "out." Their courtesies were to be confined, however, to safe and swift conduct to the nearest transport to his land of origin and race.

His attorneys, however, had been working to obtain his continued residence here and a writ of habeas corpus was in readiness to serve upon the Immigration officials. Then the chase started. Chow (no relation to Chu Chin, it was averred), was hustled to immigration headquarters, but there a bailiff stood to serve the writ. Escaping this first sentinel, a railway station was visited. Here again was the inescapable bailiff. Everywhere the Chinaman went the bailiff was not far behind. After an all-afternoon hunt, however, the immigration authorities had evaded service, and then, in desperation, A. H. Tanner, counsel to Chow, took hasty departure for Ottawa to prevent deportation until court action had been taken.

The department took a hand in the procedure, to what extent is not known, but Mr. Tanner was assured that Chong would be avaliable when wanted.

Sure enough, when court opened and Mr. Justice Loranger took the bench, the Chinaman was there, accomapnied by Immigration Superintendent A. Regimbald.

Habeas corpus is based on the allegation that Chow is not an alien but is domiciled here. Similar actions in favor of several other Chinamen are now before the Supreme Court.

The hearing will take place on Thursday.

REMAINS OF ELEVEN BODIES TAKEN FROM HOTEL RUINS

Three Victims of Appalling Disaster at Lake of Bays Summer Resort Not Yet Identified. Inquest To-Morrow Formal.

TORONTO, August 21 (Canadian Press). — Charred or broken remains of eleven persons, three of whom remain unidentified, have now been taken from the ruins of the Wa-Wa Summer Hotel, at the Lake of Bays.

It is thought that the unidentified represent three of the twelve women servants who occupied the attic quarters of the hotel on the fateful Sunday morning, and who comprise the majority of the victims.

Efforts are being made to establish their identity. They are probably members of settlers' families from the country surrounding the Lake of Bays.

The remains of Mrs. Emily McNally, of Chicago, which were identified by her wedding ring, and of Miss Elizabeth Kroeger, of Cincinnati, have been forwarded to their destinations.

Wednesday's inquest will be formal. It will remain for the coming inquiry by the Provincial Fire Marshal to establish, if possible, the actual cause of the fire, and the facilities available for the inmates of the building to escape.

A SECOND CALL ON HOME BANK

Varied Interests Petition Curator, A. B. Parker, to Wind Up Affairs.

TORONTO, Aug. 21. —( Canadian Press.)—A second petition for the winding up of the Home Bank has been served on A. B. Barker, curator, and is returnable at Osgoode Hall on Saturday morning of this week. The first petition, filed last Saturday by Arthur Hawker, a creditor for $1,000, will come up on Thursday morning next.

The petitioners for the new application include the Citizens' Trust Company, of Buffalo, N.Y., and a number of Toronto people, including representatives of the Catholic Church Extension Society of Canada and Trustees for St. Francis church.

The Citizens' Trust Company and the individual petitioners in this second petition, ask that Geoffrey T. Clarkson and the National Trust Company of Toronto be appointed provisional liquidators of the estate and effects of the Home Bank, and that a reference to go Charles Garrow, Master of the Supreme Court of Ontario, to appoint a permanent liquidator or liquidators.

The petitioners, other than the Trust Company, state that they are depositors for various amounts aggregating $54,000.

AIRPLANE STARTED ON A MAIL FLIGHT

San Francisco to New York in 28 Hours is Object.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 21. — (Canadian Press.)— A twenty-eight hour mail service between San Francisco and New York was inaugurated here when Burr M. Wilson, air mail service pilot, hopped off from Crissy field this morning in a De Haviland plane carrying 84 pounds of first class mail.

Plane and pilot will be changed at Reno, Nev., the first stop. There was one pouch of mail for Reno and one pouch for each of the other stops, Cheyenne, Wyo., Salt Lake City, Omaha, Chicago, Cleveland and New York.

Good weather favored the start. While the sky was slightly overcast, there was no fog and little wind. Reno reported, "Clear and calm."

MONTREAL POLICE USED THEIR GUNS

Suspected Thief Shot in The Neck Before Being Captured

MONTREAL, August 21 (Canadian Press). — After holding three police officers and several citizens at bay for half an hour, while both sides blazed away with revolvers and the beseiged beat off the attack of one constable with a volley of beer bottles, Joseph Lapierre, 29 years old, was captured when he was shot in the neck in a grocery store early this morning.

The melody of the hour chimes from th bells of a church nearby was broken by the crack of pistol shots and the shouts of defiance of the man when a constable found him in the store while patrolling his beat

This is the third time in a week that a police officer has either killed or wounded a suspected thief resisting arrest.

JACQUETTES IN VOGUE.

Jacquettes will be in high vogue without coats during early fall and under large topcoats for the rest of the season.

OPERATORS AND MINERS DIFFER

Very Widely Separated in Their Ideas of Mine Pay Rates.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Aug. 21. —(Canadian Press).—The second of the renewed wage contract negotiations in the anthracite industry found mine operators and the Miners' Union officials widely separated in their ideas of mine pay rates. The subject opened at the first meeting yesterday, was again taken in joint meeting for discussion to-day, while ten other demands of the union upon mine-owners were temporarily set aside.

Jno. L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, emphasized the $2 increase demanded for day men as especially justified in view of the recent increases for steel workers, building trades and textile hands. S. D. Warriner, head of the Operators' Policy Committee, responded that anthracite scales were fixed in 1920, had not been decreased since, and had been declared generally adequate by the United States Coal Commission.

The document is said to be long enough to fill fifteen columns of an ordinary newspaper.

THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT REPLY TO RECENT NOTE

TRIED TO SQUARE THINGS.

TORONTO, Aug. 21.— Charged with driving a car while he was under the influence of liquor, E. J. Lee was sentenced in the police court to seven days' imprisonment. John Beachey stated that accused knocked him off his bicycle on Keele street, and then offered to let witness kick him on the knee "to square things up."

ADJT. W. BUNTIN IS ARMED WITH A GOSPEL GUN

Depends on the Bible in Handling Family Disputes and Non-Support Cases.

FRIENDSHIP CHAIN

When Adjutant Wallace Buntin was called on yesterday to settle a family dispute he shot several people with his gospel gun.

"The only gun I carry," he said, "is the gospel gun—the Bible. I don't pack any handcuffs, only the chains of friendship."

Complaints had been received of quarreling between two sections of a family, and Adjutant and Mrs. Buntin visited the house yesterday. Gathering the offenders around them, the peacemakers endeavored to restore harmony. For twenty minutes, the Adjutant said, he could not make himself heard, the two factions reviling each other in offensive terms. At length, when quiet had fallen, he pointed out the absurdity of their actions, showing how a police court case would spoil the opportunities of the men for obtaining employment and telling the women of the beauty of harmony. A few rounds from his "gospel gun" brought the family to their knees, and after a prayer for peace and guidance and forbearance a joyous reunion crowned the efforts of the intercessor.

A Return Visit.

"Are we finished there?" the Adjutant asked. "Not yet. We will go back to those people to-day and on other days and help them all we can. That is the best part of our work—to keep people straight."

Adjutant and Mrs. Buntin are now in sole charge of the cases of non-support, immorality, and desertion which formerly cluttered the court. They do not hale the offenders into court, but by reasoning with them in their homes, endeavor to inculcate a spirit of harmony and goodness.

It is found that people who did not care to call on the police are taking advantage of Adjutant Buntin in settling their disputes.

Reserve Constables.

The duties undertaken by Adjutant Buntin were a constant drain on the police force. Often a policeman would walk to a distance to investigate a report of cruelty or an inter-family dispute, only to find that he could do nothing. All calls of this class will now be handled by the Adjutant, and so far he has been busy from early morning until late at night.

With his genial disposition he seems to be in his right sphere in re-tying the broken bonds of domestic felicity, and his hearty goodwill is an invaluable asset in this class of work.

BUS WENT OVER A PARAPET AND INTO A RIVER

Six Killed and Several Injured When 'Bus Crashed 300 Feet Into the River Var.

TWO UNIDENTIFIED.

NICE, Aug. 21—(Canadian Press) The Reverend Hiram Grant Person and Mrs. Person of Newton, Mass.; Charles H. Gray, two women, who have not yet been identified and an automobile bus driver were killed to-day when the bus went over the parapet of the road leading from Nice to Evian and plunged 300 feet into the River Var.

A number of other persons in the bus were injured. Some of them were taken to a hospital in Puget-Theniers and the remainder brought to Nice.

Ambulances were immediately rushed to the scene from Nice, forty miles distant. The Sub-Prefect of Puget-Theniers, the nearest town to the scene, superintended the work of rescue.

The accident happened three miles from Guillaume where the road runs above the bed of the River Var. According to information received here the car had just taken a sharp bend in the road. The driver was unable to straighten it out and the car dashed over the parapet and fell into the river.

Mr. Lachenet, manager of the trans-Atlantic Company and Mr. Flint both of New York, and several other persons who were following the bus in a small car witnessed the accident and immediately took steps to summon aid. While awaiting the arrival of help they did all they could to succor the victims.

The driver of the car Louis Vallerino, died on his arrival at the village of Guillaumes. The mechanician on the car was gravely injured.

QUIET EFFICIENCY OF LONDON PEOPLE

Traffic is Controlled, Not Stopped and Started—Courtesy is Marked.

LONDON, Aug. 20. United Press. London newspapers have contained many articles of late about things that are better done in America and especially in New York, than they are here. Englishmen have been told in effect by the writers of these articles that they should no: consider themselves property educated until they have been to America. and found out how much they don't know.

And now by way of contrast, it would seem an American business man, Mr. W. S. Ashby tells in the Daily Chronicle of various things he has seen here which are much better done than in New York. Especially does he commend the handling of the street traffic in London as compared with New York's way of doing it.

"The first thing to impress one on arriving from New York," he said "is the quiet and absence of hurry. At first thought one might surmise that the English are slow and we have had enough reports to that effect to warrant us thinking so.

"But first impressions, while vivid, are wrong.

"There is an absence of bustle and noise but no appreciable sacrifice of speed.

"At the crossings there is no shrilling of traffic officer's whistles, no banking of pedestrians on the curb, no banking of vehicular traffic for blocks.

"The traffic officer is in the midst of it all and is busy every moment. He stands there, calm, deliberate, almost in a detached sort of way, but there is precious little that misses his eye.

Real Control

"Instead of holding up traffic at long intervals, the officer seems to be moving along in all directions at once and at many of London's corners the 'all directions' is well used, for streets radiate in several directions. He directs traffic, rather than stops it and starts it.

"And here is another thing about the English—their courtesy. They are anxious to elp, and 'please' and 'thank you' are frequently used words in the language.

"The bus conductor thanks you for your fare, the waiter thanks you for your tip, the lift man thanks you when you give him the number of your floor.

"The London policeman knows his London and directs you promptly, politely, and accurately without waste of words.

"The Londoner does not push, crowd or hustle but he knows where he is going, and will gladly help you get where you are going in an orderly, comfortable and quick way.

"So if one were to check up on the question I would say that for all the Londoner's apparent deliberation he is moving towards his destination as quickly as any New Yorker, and making far less hubbub about it.

"It is this quiet efficiency that is misleading and is so often mistaken for slowness."

GOOD PROGRESS MADE IN THE WHEAT HARVEST

Weather Conditions Have Been Favorable and the Labor Supply Has Be en Meeting All Requirements—Threshing Un der Way in Some Parts — Yield Is Estimated at Ten to Twelve Bushels Per Acre.

WINNIPEG, August 21. Canadian Press. — Harvesting is now in progress throughout the Prairie Provinces, and the weather conditions during the past week have been comparatively favorable. fair and moderately warm, with local showers and cool nights, states the weekly report issued by the Agricultural Department. of the Canadian Pacific Railway here yesterday. At present the supply of labor arriving is adequately meeting all the requirements, but a heavy demand is anticipated when threshing begins. Current wages range from $3.50 to $4.50 with an advance when threshing begins.

Wheat cutting in southern Manitoba has been completed in numerous districts, while other districts report from 25 per cent. to 50 per cent. finished. From 10 per cent. to 25 per cent of the crop is threshed and threshing returns reveal a yield of from ten to twelve bushels an acre. In central and more northerly portions of the province cutting is now under way.

Harvesting is well under way in the southern and central districts of Saskatchewan with from 15 per cent to 35 per cent. completed and becoming general in districts farther north, with probably about five per cent. of the cutting already accomplished.

As a result of recent rains, grain in numerous districts has lodged, and this combined with the heavy stand is making cutting somewhat difficult.

The crop outlook continues favorable in Alberta. The first car of fall wheat from the Stirling district yielded 14 bushels an acre, and graded No. 1. This is a lot below average for the district, as many of the crops will go as high as 40 bushels and practically all will grade No 1. Ten to fifteen per cent. of the wheat has been cut in the southern districts. but the more northerly sections will not commence harvesting extensively for a week, cool weather having retarded the ripening.

Crops are in fine condition along the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway and cutting is general in many districts.

Conditions continue favorable in British Columbia and the crops are developing rapidly and uniformly.

Peach, plums, apricots and duchess apples are marketing in liberal quantities, and harvesting of the grain crop is near completion.

The Associated Growers Limtied have estimated their fruit crop in the entire Okanagan, Grand Forks, Kere mos and Main Line points as follows:

Soft fruit 98 cars; stone 345 cars, pears 90 cars, crab apples 202; apples 3443 cars, a total of 4,178 cars.

PUBLIC VIEW MOTHER SHIP FOR AIRCRAFT

Landing Device Stops Airplanes in Few Feet—Carries Thirty Planes in Hold.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20. — (United Press).—The U. S. S. Langley, a floating airdrome, is making an exhibition tour of the Atlantic Coast.

Airships are launched from the landing deck of this mother ship 75 feet above the water and return to be trapped in a network of wires which can stop an airship in 30 feet. In 500 landings there has not been a miscue.

The drome is complete in every detail. Every apparatus used on land is part of the ship's equipment. There are complete work and machine shops, with a heavy personnel of mechanics. Homing pigeons have been trained for the first time to return to a floating home. Birds released from the planes miles at sea return to the Langley with messages.

The ship, as seen from the shore, appears to be a floating motion picture set, with its top deck as an open-air stage. Steaming about the ship it is an odd appearing spectacle, with a stockade built as a wind-break for the planes on the side.

When a ship is to be sent off, all projections above the deck line drop from sight. The smokestack bands over, flagpoles sink and the big steel stockade pickets drop from view.

Then the first airship takes off in 60 feet. Ships are sent off at intervals of a few seconds. When they are ready to land they make three circuits of the ship, feeling prevailing wind currents. Then moving as slowly as possible the plane is flown at a height of 12 to 20 feet over the stern of the Langley, dropped to the deck and halted within a few feet by the special landing device developed by the navy.

One Every Two Minutes.

A ship can be landed every two minutes. It requires thirty seconds to stop the plane and a minute and a half to release it from its trapping bands and taxi it up to the starting line.

A net similar to that used by circus acrobats is stretched over the sides of the Langley. When a plane is ready to land or take off, all operating help drops into these nets so as to absolutely clear the deck. Topside wireless antenna is replaced on the Langley, with side atenna, which is strung along the sides of the converted collier. A steel net over the stern protects the aviators in case they miss the ramp approach arrangement at the stern.

The most successful manoeuvres are conducted with the Langley under way, when it is pointed into the wind, the aviators making their own favorable conditions for which land ships have to wait.

The idea, in case of war, is to send the ships into the air as "spotter" for gun-fire, while another battling group protect the American fleet from enemy spotters. A third type of plane to be used aboard the ship is a large bombing plane.

Thirty planes can be carried aboard the Langley, and an elevator, with a capacity of two ships at one time, is used to move the planes from the hold, where they are stored to the top deck.

Two other ships are being built, the lessons learned on the experimental ship, Langley, being built into them.

CANNOT TELL IF POOL WILL WORK

Premier Dunning Doubts If People Can Be Forced to Pay More For Wheat.

YORKTON, Sask., Aug. 21—(Canadian Press).—"At present we cannot say whether the wheat pool is going to be a success or not," declared Premier Charles A. Dunning in an address at Springside Saturday night.

Premier Dunning stated that he did not believe it is possible to make any change in the present form of marketing which will bring better returns. "This province," he said, "will average 250,000,000 bushels of wheat, whereas the total production of the world will be two and a half billion bushels and it will be impossible by juggling to force people to pay a higher price for our wheat. The whole trouble is that we have some wheat to sell to a market which is five thousand miles away and which has no money.

"Now," he said, "you please yourselves about signing the contract or not. If you sign it you are in for five years. It will probably be a good thing. It will not bring such good results as some of the advocates say and unless fifty per cent of the farmers enter it will not operate at all. However, the pool has my blessing."

DOHERTY BLAMES WETS FOR DEFICIT

Former Minister Discusses Causes of the Fall of the Drury Government.

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 21—"Many factors contributed to the defeat of the Drury Government in Ontario and it is difficult to appraise the effect of each factor," said Hon. Manning Doherty, former minister of agriculture, yesterday discussing the present position of the Progressive party in Ontario.

"When we came into power there was on the statute books of the province a law prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors. During our administration we made a determined effort to administer that law vigorously and without fear or favor. There was a certain very stong minority in the province which was opposed to prohibition and this element felt that a new government by another party might make things easier for them to have this law changed. We did not get any support from those who are anti-prohibition."

Penniless Harvesters Problem in the West.

CALGARY, Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Harvesting in practically every section of the province will be delayed from four to five days as the result of the general rainfall on Sunday and Monday.

At the same time harvesters from the east continue to pour into the city, many of them with hardly a cent. These men could easily have been taken care of had the weather continued favorable, but with few new orders coming in and hundreds of advance orders being cancelled the authorities are faced with a serious situation.

The Salvation Army, the Y.M.C.A. and the Board of Public Welfare were deluged with hungry men Saturday evening and all day Sunday wo wanted not only food but a place to sleep.

TO BRAND ALL STORE CATTLE FOR SHIPMENT

The Method of Branding Demanded By British Authorities is Described As Unnecessarily Cruel.

DEEP BURNS.

MONTREAL, Aug. 21.— (Canadian Press.)— "This is absolutely the most damnable thing that has ever been brought to our notice," said J. R. Innes, secretary of the Canadian S.P.C.A. here yesterday in discussing the regulation of the British government that on and after September 1, all Canadian store cattle for export must be branded with white hot electrical branders. "Further," he added, "you can say that not one of these animals will be branded in such an unnecessarily cruel manner if we can prevent it."

Mr. Innes said that he understood that there would be 3,000 Canadian store cattle at this port September 1, awaiting shipment, and that there would be men sent out from England with electrical machines to brand them. He stated his intention of being at the place when this was started, ttogether with a couple of S.P.C.A. inspectors, and as soon as the work was started, he would intervene and arrest the branders.

Mr. Innes showed a piece of hard birch on which the electrical brand had been pressed for the required ten seconds, and the "C" was charred into it to a depth of fully one eight of an inch. This proved that the animal's skin would be deeply burned, causing intense suffering, and danger of future sores and infection.

Duncan A. Campbell, one of the leading cattle exporters, said here yesterday: "We are getting the shadow of the removal of the cattle embargo, but they are taking away the substance by these unnecessary regulations. He added that all cattle exporters had been informed from the department of agriculture at Ottawa that no store cattle will be admitted to British ports without this "C" brand.

The brand is approximately four inches high by two inches wide.

EASTERN AND WESTERN BROKERAGE HOUSES AMALGAMATE.

An event of considerable interest to the Canadian retail trade is the amalgamation of the firm of Harold F. Ritchie & Company, Toronto, and that of Screaton & Whiteside, Winnipeg. The Winnipeg business will be conducted under the name of Harold F. Ritchie & Company, Limited. Mr. S. M. Screaton, bemany years the Manager of Screaton & Whiteside, Winnipeg, will be in charge thereof. Mr. Screaton, before going West, was indentified with Edward Adams & Co. of London, Ont., and has had wide experience in the grocery and brokerage business. The amalgamation is the result of the increasing importance of the Western Canadian market. The decision of these two prominent houses to join forces and operate in the West under the management of Mr. Screaton, will give Western buyers even greater facilities and service in connection with the many important lines which this House represents. The establishment of the Winnipeg Branch of the Harold F. Ritchie Company is a further link in a selling organization which is rapidly extending to every country on the globe.

Taschereau to Retain His Post of Attorney-General.

MONTREAL, Aug. 21.— (Canadian Press.)—Hon. L. A. Taschereau, premier of Quebec, denied in an interview here yesterday that he was about to relinquish the post of attorney-general of the province, although remaining at the head of the government as prime minister and president of the council.

Questioned as to the retrial of Rev. Abbe Delorme on a charge of having murdered his half brother Raoul, Premier Taschereau said he had not as yet decided when it should take place. The announcement would be made in due course, he added.

BARS DIVORCE DETAILS.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—(Associated Press)—British newspapers soon will cease to carry detailed reports of evidence given in divorce cases.

The House of Commons Committee, which has been considering this question some time, recommends that newspapers be permitted to publish only the statement of the petitioner, the defence, the judge's summing up, any points of law which may arise during trial and the jurys' finding and judgment. The names of witnesses may be given, but not their evidence.

The committee also recommends that the scope of a bill carrying these suggestions should be widened to include the prohibition of reports of matter that is indecent in all proceedings before a judicial bench.

THOUSANDS OF FARMERS WILL GO BANKRUPT

Selling Wheat At Less Than Cost of Production Is Ruinous Procedure Increase Price Farm Production.

GRINDING ECONOMY

WASHINGTON, August 21 (Canadian Press). — Thousands of farmers in the United States will go bankrupt with wheat selling at considerably less than cost of production, Secretary Wallace, of the United States Department of Agriculture, said yesterday ,while thousands of others will be able to hold on only by the most grinding economy.

If the present plan of prices of commodities other than agricultural is to be maintained, he added, then, to have general prosperity, prices of farm products must be increased.

Railroads Could Help.

Eastern railroads could help by making substantial reductions in the freight rates on agricultural products, especially if destined for export, Mr. Wallace asserted, pointing out, however, that until agriculture, industry, and commerce were brought into a more normal relationship, acute agricultural problems will develop one after the other.

"The ruinously low price of wheat is not a new agricultural disease," said the Secretary in a statement. "It is just one acute symptom of the trouble from which agriculture is suffering. The disease itself is the distorted relationship between the prices of farm products and prices of other commodities."

No Further Statement Home Bank Affairs.

TORONTO, August 21 (Canadian Press) — While the curator has his staff at work on the affairs of the Home Bank of Canada, which announced suspension last Friday night, Toronto depositors, of whom there are hundreds, are talking of an organisation to look after their interests, and secure information as it becomes available.

The bank directors are taking the position that it is no part of their business now to make any further statements on the bank's affairs. They are leaving that to the curator.

President H. J. Daly is still up north recuperating, and R. P. Gouth, vice-president, again said yesterday he had no further statement to make bevond that contained in the formal announcement of suspension.

By organising, depositors hope to get information first hand from the curator.

A meeting is expected to be held this week, when a plan of organisation will be prepared.

AIRCOOLED FLYING ENGINE.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—(Associated Press)—The aim of British airplane builders, for some time past, has been to produce a powerful multi-cylindered engine which would cool itself merely by reason of its own swift passage through the air. This would eliminate radiators, water-jackets and other impediments in water-cooled engines. Some of the best brains in the air world have been endeavoring to solve this problem.

The Duke of Sutherland, in presenting the prize to the winner of the aerial Derby, remarked, "This day has seen the triumph of the air-cooled engine," and it is now believed that he was revealing the official significance which is attached to the result of the race.

BLOODHOUNDS USED TO TRACE DETROIT THUGS

Bandits Who Held Up Road-house Believed to Be Only Two Hours Ahead of Possemen.

FOUND TRACKS.

DETROIT, Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press). — Bloodhounds tracking three of the bandits who held up the Allendale Inn early Sunday and later killed Patrolman Oscar Reinhardt of Monroe, Mich., were taken off the scene late yesterday when they led the 150 possemen to the shore of Lake Erie, one miles west of Bolles Harbor, which had been the object of intense scrutiny.

Subsequent to this came a report from a farmer that he had seen two men in a rowboat pulling for Raisen Point, which forms a bay with the swamp penetrated by the bandits, who made away with money and jewelry variously estimated at between $6,000 and $20,000 from the patrons of the Inn. The farmers story was verified by the fact that marks showed that a boat had been

NEGLIGENCE THE CHIEF FACTOR.

Considerable is being said and written these days about the peril of the level railway crossing and the alarming increase in the number of accidents at such points has led to a strong demand for better protection for grade crossings.

Yet, according to a bulletin just issued by the Board of Railway Commissioners, the way to safety does not lie in the direction of better protection but rather in a campaign for the education of careless motorists.

Apparently warning signals and other facilities for the protection of the public are of little avail against the reckless driver.

The Railway Commissioners in summarizing accidents on the G.T.R. crossings from October of last year to May, 1923, give some very startling figures.

For instance in the period under review it is shown that there was danger at protected crossings due to the negligence of those using such crossing in fifty-four cases and all but four of these cases were due to the carelessnss of motor drivers.

Safety devices and cautions and signals were disregarded in many cases, in several instances defective brakes made a stop impossible before the car had smashed through the protecting gates and on nearly every occasion a tendency on the part of the driver to take a chance had brought about a dangerous situation.

This official report from an impartial source is significant and should not be overlooked by Peterborough motorists who may have been in the habit of similarly tempting death by neglecting to take advantage of the protection afforded them.

DO YOU, OR NOT?

Of all the machines he uses, man takes the least care of his only really valuable machine—his body.

Give the average man a $5,000 auto and he'd polish and oil and pet and generally guard its welfare as if he had been entrusted with the destiny of the nation.

Compare all this with the care we devote to the more valuable and fragile machine, the human body.

Take the case of the stomach. Many a man who wouldn't think of overloading his motor car does not hesitate to gulp food without proper chewing, thus throwing on his stomach a strain that would wreck the average piece of machinery.

The auto driver respects his car enough not to make a practice of overspeeding his engine. How much thought does he ever give to the matter of overexerting that extremely delicate engine, his heart?

If we took half as good care of our bodies as we do of our autos, watches and the like, most of us wouldn't have to worry much about our health.

We usually are neglectful of ourselves to the point of meanness.

There is no better investment than self—that is, spending our money to keep the body running smoothly, as it deserves, and also spending to extend our knowledge and experience.

Man when he lived close to nature didn't have to worry a lot about his health. Nature and hard work kept him in good shape. As civilization takes us increasingly further away from the natural way of living our bodies function less automatically and require assistance and watching like any kind of machinery.

The neglected machine wears out permanently.

KEEP THEM HERE.

It is announced that the Canadian Colonization Association is considering a scheme to retain in Canada the 10,000 harvesters brought out from the British Isles to help in the Western wheat fields.

This will strike the majority of people as a good stroke of business and an enterprise in which the Federal Government might well take an active interest.

A splendid type of citizenship from all reports is to be found in the men who have answered the call of the West, and it would be a pity indeed if these newcomers from the Motherland were not kept in Canada.

We have not been getting our share of immigration, and although conditions on the whole do not perhaps justify a wide-open gate to all of Europe's surplus citizens who might wish to try their luck in Canada, there is no reason why this country could not readily assimilate a large share of the splendid material that is being forced by conditions in England to locate elsewhere.

The recent spectacle of several thousand Scottish immigrants passing through Montreal en route to the United States was not a good thing for Canada, nor for the British Empire.

Canada should be able to offer to such immigrants a ready opportunity to make good, not only because this country needs them to help develop the resources of the Dominion, but also because in making their homes here they would not be lost to the Empire as they undoubtedly will be if they are allowed to drift away into the neighboring Republic.

Changes in the Federal Cabinet give reason to hope for a more vigorous immigration policy, and one of the first things to be considered should be to see that the thousands of harvest helpers now in Canada from the British Isles become permanent citizens of this country.

CONCERNING DISARMAMENT.

Already in the chancelleries of the 52 nation-members of the League of Nations thoughts are focussed on the approaching league meeting in Geneva, when the question of disarmament will be again discussed and the representative diplomats in conference assembled will endeavour to solve the troublesome problem of reducing national armaments without making any one nation weaker than others in its class and yet holding all to an equal place in the race for the balance of power.

This is indeed a problem which will require all the collective wisdom of the wise men to solve if the conference is not to be a failure, and the clause permitting nations to make defensive alliances does not tend to help, for when was an alliance of any sort regarded as other than defensive by its sponsors or offensive by its opponents? On this there is certain to be division of opinion. It matters little whether the pacts entered into are called defensive or otherwise—they allow ample scope for armament building and preparation for another conflict. One group of nations will naturally consider the plans of a rival group to be offensive and acquire sufficient armament to be just a little ahead—and so it travels all around the circle.

Just now this phase of the question is of especial interest in view of the situation between Great Britain, France and Germany. French military authorities have stated openly that they do not intend to bring their military estimates to the League of Nations for control as it is essential that success of their operations depends upon their proposals remaining known only to themselves. No doubt some other nations will sympathize with this view and will act accordingly. In this connection it is worthy of note that since the Washington conference on disarmament was held and agreements reached there for the destruction of battleships, most of the nations concerned have kept strictly to the letter of their promises. They have scrapped their battleships—and built aeroplanes and submarines instead.—London Advertiser.

THE "WHISPER OF DEATH."

The Montreal Star has undertaken to open the eyes of all Canadians to the dire fate which lies ahead of them if they fail to heed its warnings and abandon the suicidal policy of owning their own railways, says the Christian Guardian. The Star declares that although the war has been over for nearly five years "our national debt is still rising by the hundred millions" and "it is hard to credit we are not being sacrificed by a policy of deliberate neglect." This is pretty hard on Canadian politicians, but the Star evidently blames them for the situation. The editor declares that the people are willing to pay for the war, but it says, "we are not willing to imperil the very existence of the country we fought for by piling up deficits to feed a veritable devil-fish system of bankrupt railways." It is argued that the situation is so desperate as to threaten our national existence, and yet the Star is the only journal patriotic enough to declare the truth and point out the remedy. The remedy suggested is to get the right kind of men at the head of the Government, and these should be Grits and Tories who can be depended upon to hand over our Government-owned railways to some private corporation, possibly the C.P.R., and so at once and for ever get rid of any railway deficit. But the public memory is long enough to recall that the very men who now declaim so vehemently against paying deficits on Government-owned railways, were not at all unwilling that Canada should provide millions of money to pay deficits on privately-owned railways. And the people of Canada would probably a good deal sooner face all the horrors foreshadowed in the "whisper of death" than face the alternative of one great railway corporation controlling all our Canadian railways. We do not forget that the people of Canada in any case have to foot the bill, and it is no harder to meet it as a deficit than to meet it as exorbitant freight rates. We admit that Canada is facing a difficult situation, but that we are threatened with national bankruptcy no one in his senses believes. Canada is financially sound and can pay all her debts.

THE APPEAL BOARD.

The personnel of the Board of Appeal appointed by the Federal Government to hear appeals from decisions of the Board of Pensions Commissions is such as to commend respect from those most directly concerned, the veterans of the Great War, and to assure the public that the Act will be administered in a sympathetic spirit.

The members of the Board have either had the advantage of service at the front or have had experience in dealing with problems affecting soldiers, and should therefore be able to deal with the manifold problems that will come before them generously and kindly, as the people of Canada undoubtedly desire that questions affecting the welfare of those who fought, and their dependents, should be dealt with.

It is no light task the Appeal Board is facing, especially in the initial stages of its work.

They may expect a flood of applications from veterans who consider that they have not been fairly treated by the Pensions Commissioners—and it will require keen judgment and considerable backbone to separate the wheat from the chaff, to distinguish the genuine claim from the false.

The "lead swinger" to use the expressive term Tommy Atkins and Jack Canuck had for the man whose ailments were largely imaginary and designed to keep him out of danger and as far as possible out of hard work as well will be the first to take advantage of the amended act and the creation of a new board and one of the primary problems Col. W. D. Belton and his associates will have to face will be to eliminate as far as possible this class of application.

With the legitimate appeals, however, the people will expect that the Board will deal patiently and generously and that red tape and unnecessary delay will be reduced to a minimum.

There has undoubtedly been injustice in the case of too many veterans, due it would seem fair to assume to the fact that the Pensions Commissioners had been apparently actuated by a desire to show business ability and efficiency rather than eager to see that victims of the war received the treatment due them.

The Appeal Board is counted upon to correct such cases.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

News that the squirrels are preparing for a hard winter coupled with the discouraging tidings from the anthracite conference indicate that the only thing open about next winter will be the pocket book of the public.

Bush fires in many portions of the Northern section of Peterborough county are proof of the necessity on the part of all those who have occasion to be in the woods at this season of exercising the greatest care.

The beginning of the annual exit from the summer resorts is another sign that summer is rapidly passing. And yet there is usually no more delightful month to be on river or lake than September. There is no reason why the tourist season should end with Labour Day.

The school boy needs no reminder that the long vacation is almost over. He is too conscious of the fact that the time when he will have to "creep like snail unwillingly to school" is just around the corner.

Peterborough is to entertain the Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters next year. A gallant occupation is theirs, and this city will be glad to have the fire laddies as its guests.

OMEMEE VILLAGE AND THE DISTRICT.

Women's Institute Sale a Success — Horse Broke His Neck — Paving Is Finished.

OMEMEE, Aug. 21.— The Omemee branch of the East Victoria Women's Institute are congratulating themselves on the splendid success of their sale of home baking on Saturday afternoon.

This society has been in existence in the village for many years, but of late many ladies have lost interest and the membership has greatly decreased. The district president attended a meeting a short time ago and it was the wish of all present to re-organize, and with new officers elected ,try to put more vim into the meetings and also take advantage of the many benefits offered by the department which are continually being received by other nearby branches of the Institute. Mrs. T. E. Macpherson is the newly appointed president and assisted by a group of willing workers, the society has already taken steps to raise money whereby they might purchase awnings for the south windows of the junor room of the Public school. Accordingly a sale of home cooking took place on Saturday afternoon on the foundry olt and the tables, which were kindly loaned by Mr. T. C. Ivory, presented an inviting appearance to not only the busy housewife, but to a number of motorists passing through the village, who were tempted by the array of pies, cakes, biscuits, tarts, cookies, gems, homemade bread and buns.

The proceeds, which amounted to about twelve dollars, are very gratifying to the members, who number fifteen and they are also grateful to the non-members who sent donations.

As the assortment was diminished at an early hour, a number of ladies were disappointed in their purchases so the society decided to hold another sale next Saturday, when it is hoped that not only those who patronized the booth last week will call again, but that others will come in greater numbers and thus help to swell the treasury, to be used for a good cause.

Lost Valuable Horse.

Mr. Bert Sanderson, a prosperous farmer residing a short distance northwest of Omemee, was shocked to find his valuable driver dead in the stable on Thursday last, having broken his neck by falling, after one hind foot got across the rope. The beast, which was highly prized by its owner, was dappled brown and white, and will be remembered by many a keen observer by his dignified manner while travelling. And the old saying, "Trouble never comes alone," again proved true, for only a short time afterward his old pig was found lying dead in the yard, leaving a brood of ten small pigs to be nurtured without a mother.

Street Clear.

Motorists and drivers of other vehicles who have grown tired of seeing detour signs in Omemee for the past three months, will be pleased to know that the street is now clear, the pavement having been finished and the roadway and sidewalk over the iron bridge on the main thoroughfare are now completed. A new board siedwalk has been laid, which afterwards received a generous sprinkling of oil. New planks were placed on the roadway over the new structure, on top of which a liberal amount of oil and crushed stone have been spread which no doubt will lengthen the life of the lumber.

Late Ida Storey.

The funeral of the late Ida Storey beloved wife of Alexander Lang, of Emily, was held on Sunday afternoon and was largely attended by a wide circle of friends whom the deceased had made by her kind and loving disposition. The late Mrs. Lang, who had been suffering from a complication of diseases for some time, bore her sufferings with great fortitude and not until she was forced to do so did she make them known to her husband. The services which were very impressive, were conducted by the Rev. Edward Rolland of the Methodist church, Omemee, who spoke in glowing terms of the deceased, she having been a faithful member from early childhood.

Many floral tributes bore mute testimony of the esteem in which the late Mrs. Lang was held.

Left to mourn the loss of a loving helpmate and mother are her sorrowing husband and two sons, Harold and Vernon, also one sister, Mrs. W. C. Switzer, of Peterborough, and one brother, Mr. Evans Storey, of Emily.

Renovating School.

If the school children of long ago, or even in the early nineties, could only take one glimpse of the modern school building, which was erected some time ago in their home town to replace the frame school house destroyed by fire, and is now being renovated to suit the requirements of the Department of Education, they would probably wish to return to the "good old school days" where one's cares are few. The floors, which were wearing, are being replaced by hardwood floors, all over the building, with the exception of the chemistry room and the play room of the Public school.

A water system, which is uncommon in Omemee, has been installed, and in itself will be a great convenience as well as a novelty to those who are fortunate enough to have the privilege of receiving an education within these four walls. These conveniences ,along with such luxuries as a piano, a good library, etc., should be an inducement to many who fall back in their studies.

The trustee board have been successful in securing the services of at least three of the teachers to fill the vacancies. Mr. Jeffrey Widdis, of Omemee, with Miss Anderson, of Campbellford, will have charge of the Public school, while Miss Meredith, of Peterborough, has been engaged as assistant High school teacher, with the Principalship to be yet filled.

Rain Helped Grain.

The rainfall of Saturday night was welcomed by the owners of gardens as it will help the later vegetables and promote their growth and development. The crop of beans and peas was below the average as they were literally cooked on the vines. The farmers are in the midst of harvest and some have begun threshing the grain but the rain would help the corn and root crops. The grain was, in the main, a light crop but was not a failure in any way.

Negroes Study Arabic; Plan Return to Africa.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., August 21. — (United Press. — With visions of some day returning to Africa and becoming "first citizens" among their less favored brethren in their "native land," scores of St. Louis negroes are taking up the study of Arabic.

Their leader is "Sheik" Ahmid Din who holds weekly Moslem religious services where the language is being picked up by the St. Louis negroes. Ahmid Din is his Moslem name. He was christened P. N. Johnson, his father being an Arab and his mother a negress.

Attired in ordinary street clothes with the exception of a glaring green turban, Ahmid Din each week preaches the doctrine of "Al Ham Do Lilah Rabbil Al Ameen," as he says it.

Beginning his lessons with a religious service, Ahmid Din reads a chapter in the Koran, proclaiming "there is but one God and that is Allah." Songs are then sung, followed by chanted prayers.

With characteristic negro fervor, the negroes are flocking to "Shiek" Ahmid's mission to be initiated into the mysteries of Islam and to "talk Arabic."

"I have one hundred converts in St. Louis, and I have been here six months," the "Shiek" said. "We are gaining rapidly.

ACTION TAKEN TO MAKE SAFE ROAD CROSSING

Campbellford Accident Followed By Investigation of Conditions With View to Remedy.

WARNING NEEDED.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 21.—Following the accident at the Centre street crossing about two weeks ago, when an auto was struck by a passing freight train and the three passengers injured, Town Clerk McGregor acting on instructions from the council wrote the railway's officials asking that some protection in the shape of safety devices be given the public at that point, which is situated on one of the leading thoroughfares.

The Board of Railway Commissioners have already taken action. The other day a count was made of the number of passing trains, and of the rigs and foot passengers using the crossing from 7 a.m. to the same hour the following morning. One man was detailed to keep the count for 12 hours and another man was on watch for the same length of time.

The result of the count was as follows: In the 23 hours 0 trains passed that point. The number of autos and loose vehicles using the crossing in 24 hours was 534, and the number of foot passengers was 284.

Residents in that vicinity say that on the day in question the traffic on the road happened to be unusually light. As many as 15 trains frequently pass that point in a day.

Surveyor Visits Scene.

A surveyor with two assistants spent nearly all day Friday in that vicinity. On the west side of the crossing there is a sharp curve and the surveyor ran a new line from this curve, to a point on the road on the east side. To change the track to this line would considerably straighten it and would also raise the roadbed which at the crossing passes through a cut.

It is almost impossible for occupants of vehicles approaching the crossing from the south to see trains coming from either directions owing to a number of trees on the right side of the road and a tall lilac hedge between the home of Josiah Tinney and the residence recently purchasd by John Gould on the left. The surveyors stated that trees and hedge would have to be cut down, the railway to pay the cost of removal. He also stated that the public was entitled to some protection, either an overheard bridge, safety gates or an electric bell.

Special Meeting of Council To Raise Amount For Completion of High Schools—Persona's.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 21—The Town Council held a special meeting Monday night, at which all the members were present except Councillors Carter and Coles, and put through its three readings the by-law providing for the issue of debentures to raise the amount required to complete the new High School. The by-law was passed by a vote of 5 to 2. Reeve Anderson and Councillor Dorie voting in the negative. Councillor Burk, sponsored the by-law, and those supporting it were Mayor Meyers, Deputy Reeve Wilkinson, Councillors Allan, Burke and Meiklejohn. All the expense, it was decided, in connection with the issue of these debentures and the $68,000 worth disposed of some time ago will be paid out of the premiums received from the brokers whose bids are accepted.

Chairman Abernethy, Commissioner Russell and Engineer Scott, of the Water and Light Commission, met with the Council to consider the request of the Campbellford Cloth Company for permission to string an electric wire across the street from their main plant to light their new store-house which has just been completed. This company does not get its power and light from the municipal plant but from the Hydro, in return for waiving its rights to a dam on the river.

The required authority was given, the work of extension to be subject to the approval of Engineer Scott.

Adds to Sewer Cost.

Mason and Hawkrigg recently obtained a judgment of $1,050 against the town for extra work on the front street sewer, due to a mistake in the plans and the costs in the case amounting to $904.20.

The Council decided last night to add the judgment and costs to the amount of the debenture issue to pay for the construction of the sewer.

Deputy Reeve Wilkinson suggestde that the Engineer be bonded so as to protect the town from the expense of future mistakes in making levels, but no action was taken.

FOREST RESERVES ARE BADLY NEEDED

Lord Lovat Related the Difficulties Experienced During the War Owing to Lack of Reserve Timber Supply.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press).—In relating the difficulties experienced by the allies during the war from lack of forest reserves general Lord Lovat, chairman of the British Empire Forestry conference, declared the possibility of another emergency demands action to forestall danger that might result from a shortage in the future. He made this declaration while addressing a joint luncheon given by the Manitoba government and the Canadian Club in honor of the delegates to the conference.

Canada was in the most favorable position at the present time of any country in the world for forest cultivation, Lord Lovat said and he advocated state forests for the Dominion, where experiments in applied research could be made on a commercial instead of a laboratory scale.

The delegates were welcomed to the province by John Bracken, premier of Manitoba, and Lieut.-Governor Sir James Aikins. The party leave this evening for Indian Head and Regina and the tour will conclude at Vancouver on September 7.

pushed off the shore. A small party of searchers set out across the bay for the point.

The remains of a bonfire, which had been put out only about two hours before, spurred the remaining possemen on. The party worked their way down shore when they were joined by members of the 125th Howitzer Co. Michigan National Guard. The searchers also are covering Kuster Island, a two acre tract off-shore.

WARKWORTH WON AT ORLAND 9-8

Campbellford Out of Race For Championship In Northumberland League

CAMPBELLFORD, August 21.—Campbellford lost to Warkworth yesterday in the game played at Orland to break the tie for second place, and by the narrow margin of one run, the score being 9 to 8, is out of the race for the championship of the Northumberland League.

Warkworth and Trenton will now play home and home games for the Clarke Cup, the first of these contests to be at Trenton on Wednesday and the second at Warkworth on Saturday. If each team wins a game, the tie will be decided on some neutral diamond.

It is not often that the Campbellford team find fault with the work of the umpires, but at Orland yesterday they got so many raw deals from O'Rourke of Burnley, who started at the plate, shifted later to the bases, and was finally put out of the game altogether, that the Campbellford management was urged to protest the game. They will, however, accept their defeat, as the history of sport in this town contains no record of a protest.

The game almost broke up in a riot when O'Rourke called Mulhall safe at second when he took a long lead off the bag and was caught on a throw by Nesbitt to Eagleson.

Campbellford refused to play unless the base umpire was retired, and he was finally replaced by C. Down, of Roseneath, whose work for the remainder of the game was satisfactory. Sprung, of Brighton, an old player himself, who officiated both behind the bat and on bases, in either position was competent and fair.

The trouble with O'Rourke began in the second when he called Zufelt safe at the plate when he slid in feet first, and never touched the bag, but was tagged out by Nesbitt, one of whose shoes was almost torn from his foot by the spikes of the base runner. In the seventh McGregor sent a fly to Eagleson, who dropped the ball, but recovered it in time to get it to first a full yard ahead of the runner, who was called safe by the umpire.

Then the decision on Mulhall brought matters to a climax.

The line-up of both teams was the same as in the game here on Saturday with the exception that Armour did the catching for Warkworth instead of Wilson. Shillinglaw replaced West in centre in the fifth innings and his double in the ninth sent in two runs.

Brady was on his metal but the fielders did not give him their usual support and 12 hits were piled up by the Veterans, only one of these, a double by Armour in the sixth, being for an extra base. Brady broke the record for speedy put-outs when, in the third inning, he retired the Veterans on three pitched ball. Poole and Mulhall were out on rollers to Brady and A. Zufelt, who fouled the first ball pitched to him, was thrown out at first by Nesbitt.

Campbellford won the toss and took the field at the opening of the game. When they went to bat in the ninth the score was 9 to 5, and for a while it looked as if they would win by one of their old time batting rallies. After Eagleson, the first man up, had flied out to Dick, Hume was hit by the pitcher and stole second. Holmes was retired on a pop fly to A. Zufelt. Weston got to first when Mulhall fumbled his grounder and Hume crossed the plate when Mulhall threw wild to the catcher. Brady doubled to left and Weston scored, Brady going home when Shillinglaw doubled to left.

There wre two men out, a runner on second and one run needed to tie the score when Nesbitt went to bat. He leaned against one of Zufelt's curves and the ball sailed high out to right field, but Beatty, who had been playing deep to be ready for the long hit everybody expected, made the catch that ended the game and Campbellford's hopes for the championship of the league.

The crowd was the largest that has attended a game this season, a procession of autos over a mile long carrying enthusiastic fans from Campbellford, Warkworth sending about an equal number of rooters. Brighton, too, was well represented. The supporters of the teams vied with each other in cheering their favorites on to victory.

Spanish Cabinet Says Situation Not Serious.

MADRID, Aug. 21.— (Canadian Press.)— All leaves of absence in the army have been suspended, it was announced yesterday, and detachments will be sent to Morocco to replace the losses suffered in the fighting with rebels.

The president of the cabinet declares the Moroccan situation is not serious and that the king has no intention of returning to the capital at this time. The government ministers, however, are conferring on the situation.

ONTARIO REQUIRES MANY FARM HANDS

Ten Thousand Could be Absorbed at Present, But Immigration is Disappointing.

TORONTO, Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Hon. J. H. Martin, Minister of Agriculture, stated yesterday that Ontario could do with about ten thousand farm laborers even now, and that it was because of this shortage that he had sent for Mr. W. C. Noxon, agent-general at London, to come and discuss the whole emigration policy with a view to formulating schemes whereby the situation would be relieved. He said that his own county of Norfolk sent in some two hundred applications to the Government this spring for farm help, but obtained only twelve, which was a most discouraging state of affairs.

"We also desire to be in a position to help the young Canadian farmer, who needs a little assistance to get started," added the Minister of Agriculture, who stated that the system of rural credits would likely be retained in some form.

BARNS AND GRAIN PREY TO FLAMES

Dunsford Man Lost Season's Grain, Hay, Pigs and Implements Through Combustion.

LINDSAY, Aug. 21.—(Special to the Examiner).—Combustion caused a fire on John P. Thurston's farm, near Dunsford, last night, which completely wiped out his barns, grain, implements and considerable livestock.

Breaking out about 8.30, the fire quickly spread, engulfing two barns, one frame and one log, and the henhouse. Among the contents were 61 loads of hay, all the season's grain, a number of pigs and hens, and farm implements. All were completely destroyed.

Mr. Thurston's loss is heavy, and is only partly covered by insurance. Only a fortuitous wind saved his residence from the fire.

The Thurston farm is situated about half a mile south of Dunsford, and the conflagration drew hundreds of people from a radius of many miles. This is the fourth fire in this district within a few weeks caused by combustion. It is suggested that it arises from storing green hay in barns and the consequent heating of the hay.

Fires in France Have Broken Out Afresh.

NICE, France, August 21. Canadian Press. — Forest fires which broke out in the Esteret mountain region on Saturday, and were brought under control after destroying much property and causing the death of three persons, broke out afresh yesterday near Bozon. Fanned by an easterly breeze the flames advanced rapidly, threatening the well known resorts of St. Rapahel, Valescure and Frejus. The inhabitants, aided by troops, worked furiously and it is thought the danger to the towns, at least for the present, is over.

In the Maures range, the fire is dying out, after having destroyed fifty thousand acres of forest and a number of properties, including the country house of M. Franklyn-Bouillon. At some places the fire swept down to the water's edge, even burning the seaweek on the shore.

At a meeting of the authorities at St. Raphael to-night, a number of drastic measures to prevent further outbreaks, were decided upon.

Big Demand For Help in Saskatchewan Fields.

SASKATOON, Sask., Aug. 21.—Although cutting has been delayed by wet weather and is by no means general in Saskatchewan, there has been a brisk demand for farm help during the past week. Many farmers have taken on harvest help arriving from the east and British Columbia, together with those arriving from Scotland and England, in readiness for the harvest. Many of the men arriving from overseas have been unable to take jobs involving a train journey owing to lack of funds.

SOME INTERESTING SIDELIGHTS AND LORE ON THE WILY TROUT

BY MORRIS ACKERMAN

Nationally Known Authority and Writer on the Great Out-of-Doors, and Editor of Ackerman's Sportsmen's Guide.

THIRD ARTICLE—WHERE TO FIND THEM.

It's a far cry from chugging for codfish to enticing the scaleless speckled trout to embrace the barbed hook of a feathered fly.

I've gone through the various stages of inland fishing in America from burlap-sacking shiners and hornpouts to flipping flies to sceptic Atlantic salmon.

It's the same story as the rabbit hunter craving grouse, deer, moose, and grizzlies in more or less easy stages.

Trout fishing, with an artificial fly, stands at the top of the heap in the world's fishing When you arrive there, Heaven alone is the next stop in human desire.

All Hard Fighters.

There is no rod in the world that has quite the poise and the artistic beauty of the fly rod—no fish of quite the grace and magnificence of the trout. There are many varieties of trout—all lovely to look at. All are splendid fighters.

Well may the wielder of the tapered bamboo spints thank the Great Spirit that most of them feed on the surface, and in conseguence rise to a fly.

The one notable non-riser is the salmon trout, lake trout or grey trout, that inhabits the cooling depths of our northern rock-bottomed lakes. The trout family is wel lscattered The trout family is well scattered over North America. In Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Labrador, and in Newfoundland there is one speckled trout that stays at home.

In the two provinces this fish is known as the "native" trout — in Labrador and Newfoundland as the "mud" trout. (Why a fontenalis should be termed a mud trout is more than I could fathom.)

The sea trout of the Maritime Provinces is not the sea trout of southern waters. This fish is speckled, looks and tastes like the non-migrators of the clan.

Get 'Em With Spinners.

The Eastern Canada "sea trout," entering the streams in June in large quantities, is a worthy fighter. It comes in lightning darts of five or more pounds. From the middle of August to the closing of the season, the middle of September, in Newfoundland, you can hit sea trout streams where a single fly can load a boat in a day's casting, if the angler can last that long.

In Ontario the big speckled trout leave the streams about the first week in June and enter the lakes the small mouth bass taking up the vacated positions in the rapids and fast water. On the other hand, the world famous Nipigon offers its mightiest trout to the July angler.

On a recent trip in Algonquin Park, Ontario, I was fly casting below a dam for trout. Having poor luck, I put on a spinner in the hope of catching bass. A huge speckled trout took the spinner on the first cast, and as far as I know is going yet

PLAN COMPLETED TO FOIL BANDITS

Foreign Supervision of Railroads and Police Protection of Foreigners in China.

PEKIN, Aug. 21—(United Press) —A committee of the diplomatic corps in China has completed a plan for the foreign supervision of railroads and police protection of foreigners there.

The new project announced on Monday is designed to safeguard foreigners by preventing such incidents as the Shantung bandit outrages and recent anti-foreign disturbances. The present railway police will be organized with two high commanders, one foreign and the other Chinese. Twenty minor foreign officers will participate the reorganization. The nationtality of the officers to be selected has not as yet been discussed.

Experts Discussing the Tangier Problem.

LONDON, August 21. Canadian Press. — The British, French and Spanish experts who have been discussing the Tangier problem with a view to discovering whether a basis exists from a plenary conference to settle the status of the province, have arranged to resume their conversations next month. They adjourned their meetings in July for the purpose of returning to their capitals and reporting to their respective governments.

While the decision to re-open the meeting is regarded as an encouraging sign, the British officials profess to see little hope of an agreement unless France is ready to make more liberal concessions and to relax her military and economic domination in Tangiers.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson
Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Teresa Desmond (Terry), exquisite and unbelievably innocent, has determined to leave her father. Terrence Desmond, the proprietor of a roadhouse, the Blue Moon. He is moody and selfish, bent on Terry's "bagging" a rich man. He introduces her to Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek, who falls in love with the girl, and on an auto ride makes unwelcome advances. She escapes from him and goes to Juliet Divine, the stage name of her beautiful half-sister, known as the Million Dollar Doll, whom she has not seen for years. 'Juliet's' career has been somewhat sketchy, but she has a genuine affection for Terry, whom she greatly resembles. Miles Sheridan, Terry's Dream Prince, furnished the money for Terry's education at a convent when she was a child, partly to atone for a past rudeness of his wife Betty Sheridan, who is now making him unhappy with her infidelity. Hartley Phillips, a member of the Four Hundred, calls on Julia to tell her that Sheridan, in order to facilitate his wife's obtaining a divorce, will pay the Million Dollar Doll twenty thousand dollars t take a yacht trip with him. Except for appearing with her in order to cause talk, he wants to have nothing to do with her. Terry confesses to Julia that Sheridan has always been her ideal.

Terry is made unhappy by the discovery that Jule is going to marry a South American, Manoel Fernandez, and go to live in Buenos Aires.

CHAPTER XX.

Fate as the Stage-Manager

"I expect you think I'm a brute, kid," Julia began once more, when the fiat had gone forth. "But I'm not as hard as I seem. All this time I've been working up to a plan for you.

"It's a real good plan. Nothing the matter with it whatever—if you've got the pluck you were boasting about just now."

"I—boasting?" Terry was bewildered.

"Why, yes. You said you'd let your right hand be cut off to help your 'Prince'—Miles Sheridan. It's a sort of coincidence—but there's a way you could help him. And not hurt yourself, if you kept your head screwed on—anyhow not as much as you'd get hurt at the Blue Moon. In a few weeks you could earn enough money to live on, wherever you wanted to live."

The girl forgot the hurt of knowing herself unwanted. Her eyes shone. She lived again But it was not the money or the ease of living she thought about. In fact, she had ceased to hear before her sister reached the sentence.

"Oh, Julia" she begged, "hurry and tell me what you mean You're not joking, are you? No, it would be cruel. Can I really help Mr. Sheridan?"

"You really can, if you're not afraid to—make a big sacrifice. Not any sentimental sob-stuff, like cutting off your hand. But you'll have to risk your—reputation—if you're wise to what a girl's reputation is. Are you?"

"I don't—quite—understand," Terry said. "But I tell you I'd do anything—anything."

"It needn't go as far as that" Julia smiled obscurely. "Still you'd get talked about. Noses would go up, and mouths down."

"I don't care for noses or mouths," "What can I do for him? It would be a dream come true. Only it seems too good to be true."

"You could save him from wrecking his life. Julia chose her words carefully now, for she was warming to her work. She began to feel that, as things were for the girl, there was but one way out of Terry's troubles.

If Fate wasn't stage-managing the business, would the kid have raved to her over Sheridan, just after Hartley Phillips' call? Why, she—Julia—had almost turned his proposition down at first. There was something queer about her agreeing to think it over.

"You haven't much cause to love Betty Sheen—his wife—if you remember," Julia went on.

"I do remember," Terry said. "It's wicked to hate people, and I don't hate Betty, though I wake up from dreaming that I hate her, sometimes—even now. But it makes me sad to think she's Mr. Sheridan's wife. She was cruel all those years ago. I hope she's changed now, and that he loves her. But I can't believe she's good enough for him."

"You needn t try to believe it. She isn't," Julia pronounced. "And Sheridan doesn't love her. She's beastly to—

"She's been—flirting—with an Italian Prince who's here in America—very fast and very good looking. Sheridan could divorce his wife if he wanted to. Do you know what divorce means?"

"The mother of one of our girls, Kitty King, was divorced," Terry replied. "Kitty defended it, but some of the others said that divorce doesn't really unmarry people."

"My goodness, did the convent turn you into a Catholic?" Julia shrieked.

Terry shook her head. "The Sisters never tried to influence us."

"That's all right, then Sheridan doesn't mean to divorce his wife, because he promised her grandmother to defend her through thick and thin. He's too chivalrous and particular for his own good He plans instead to free her, as if he was the guilty one, not she."

"Guilty of what?" Terry demanded. She didn't like the word, coupled with the name of her Prince.

Julia threw out her hands, with a great sigh. "Good gracious, don't you know anything at all?" she groaned.

"I'm afraid I don't know much,' the girl confessed. "But can't you explain to me?"

"Can't a—a wildcat explain to a tadpole? Explain the whole scheme of existence? No, that's too big an order

"The important thing is, Sheridan's between two evils: the devil and the deep sea. The devil's his wife. The deep sea is—another danger. But there's where you come in, and I will explain that much, if you won't interrupt."

Julia was growing "jumpy" as she told herself. To her, who knew so much, it began to seem that Terry, who knew so little, was a fool. She was tempted to give the girl one shock about Life with a capital L, and get it over. But she thought of the convent, and something held her back. With impatience of her task blended a kind of tenderness, half contempt, half affection.

"What am I to say to the little owl?" she wondered.

Terry waited.

When Julia Divine needed to think, or to make up her mind, she generally lit a fresh cigarette. It gave time for a pause, and sometimes brought inspiration, therefore it was a good trick, especially as she had taught herself how to make smoke-rings becomingly.

When she had produced a few perfect circles, she felt better able to cope with the kid's abysmal ignorance.

"You don't know me awfully well," she said. "We haven't seen much of each other. But I'm your big sister, and you trust me, don't you?"

"Oh, yes" Terry assured her eagerly.

"That's right Now listen again, baby. Miles Sheridan has got a yacht. It's named after Mrs. Parmalee's old place that he loved—and you loved too—Silverwood. Sheridan's planning to take a long trip on board her—all the way across the ocean, to beautiful places you must have heard about, in France and Italy, and who knows where."

"Does he go because he wants to be away from—his wife?" the girl almost whispered.

"There's more in it It's part of his self-sacrifice, freeing that horrid, stuck-up little cat, and getting himself talked about instead of her. If he takes a young woman on the yacht with him—even if they both behave themselves like plaster saints and are as good as gold—the world will say he's wicked.

"Mrs. Sheridan can sue for a divorce and get it. The thing is, to engage some well-known person, an—an actress, like me, for instance, for the trip, because there has to be a scandal if there's to be the sort of divorce that's legal everywhere. That's the quick, sure-fire way to make a scandal: a married man goes off with a woman who isn't his wife.

"Not very nice, maybe But we have to take the world as it is. This very day a great friend of Sheridan's was here, asking if I'd accept the job—go on the yacht, I mean. And I'd have said 'Yes,' like a shot, if it weren't for my Manoel, and being married. Are you shocked?

"But no, don't answer yet, because I want to tell you first why I'd have accepted. There's the money, of course. That's one thing. And the trip would be fun. But the big reason is—you

You can keep your arms, neck or face free from hair or fuzz by the occasional use of plain delatone and in using it you need to have no fear of marring or injuring the skin. Be careful, however, to get real delatone and mix fresh.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

MRS. UPSEDAISY'S BABY

"My baby has disappeared out of his crib."

"Please go out and count noses," said King Snookums to Nick. "Go out and count all the Pee Wees and see if they are here will you?"

So out went Nick with a big horn.

"Toot, tooty, toot!" he blew. "Are all the noses here? Will everyone please to count his nose and tell me if anybody is missing?"

Suddenly Mrs. Upsedaisy rushed out and grabbed him. "My baby has disappeared out of his crib," she screamed. "And I can't count his nose because it went with him. My darling Upsy Upsedaisy! He's gone! Kidnaped! Oh, what'll I do?" And the little Pee Wee lady wrung her hands something awful.

"What did he look like?" asked Nick, stopping his tooty tooting, and taking out his book and lead pencil. "I'll have to take his description so we can look for him."

"Pink nose," said Mrs. Upsedaisy quickly.

"Nose pink!" wrote Nick.

"Bald head!" said Mrs. Upsedaisy.

"Head bald!" wrote Nick.

"Two teeth!" said Mrs. Upsedaisy.

"Teeth two!" wrote Nick.

"Round and fat," saids Mrs. Upsedaisy.

"fat and round," wrote Nick.

"Say," said Mrs Upsedaisy indignantly, "You're getting him upside down. He isn't upside down."

"Not upside down!" wrote Nick.

"Goodness, you must be crazy," cried the little Pee Wee lady. "That's no way to find a baby."

"Is this your baby?" cried Nancy rushing in. "Mrs. Robin thought he was a bug and picked him up by mistake."

"Oh, the horrid thing!" screamed Upsy's mother. "How awful."

"Toot, tooty, toot!" went Nick on his horn as he strode back to King Snookums.

"All noses safe and sound!" he reported. "Everybody safe in Pee Wee Land."

The Cobweb Net.

Little Georgie Porgie Pee Wee was lost. He was so lost that not a shoe button of him was left.

His daddy felt dreadful, his aunts and uncles felt worse still, and his momsy felt worst of all.

They looked everywhere, then they sent word to Snookums, the wise little King of Pee Wee Land, and Snookums sent word to the Twins.

You'll have to find Georgie Porgie at once," he said when Nancy and Nick came hurrying in their magic shoes and bumped their heads three times against the royal throne. "Try to find him at once if not sooner. If you don't I'm afraid his daddy will have a fit, his aunts and uncles two fits, and his mother half a dozen fits. No doubt, like so many of my other subjects, he has jumped on one of those pesky lightning bugs and gone some place."

"Oh, we'll find him," said Nancy. "We've found every Pee Wee we started out to find and I'm sure Georgie Porgie can't be far away either."

So away they went to look for the little Pee Wee fellow who was so small he could have hidden in a fairy's thimble.

First they looked under the mandrake leaves. But he wasn't there. Then they looked in the daisy patch. But he wasn't there. Then they came to the meadow where a hundred little ground spiders had woven a hundred little webs all looking like lace doilies on a green table.

And there was Georgie Porgie Pee Wee sticking in one of them.

"Help, help! I can't get away," he called loudly. "Help! I'm caught!"

When the Twins hauled him out he told how it happened "I was playing circus" he said, "jumping from one blade of grass to another and pretending the spider web was a net to catch men like the circus people when they fall. It caught me all right; I'll say. It's a good thing you came along or I'd have made a nice dinner for Mrs. Spider.

So the Twins took him home and nobody had any fits at all!

MAKE ANOTHER ATTEMPT FLY OVER NORTH POLE

ST. PAUL, Alaska, Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Captain Ronald Amundsen, Norwegian explorer, who was forced by an accident to his airplane, to abandon his proposed air flight from Alaska to Spitzbergen over the north pole, has indicated that he will make another attempt using Spitzbergen as a base, according to officers of the coast guards Cutter Bear, which has arrived here from a voyage to Point Barrow, were the explorer made his base.

MRS. DAVIS NERVOUS WRECK

Tells Women How She Was Restored to Perfect Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Man.—"I cannot speak too highly of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was a nervous wreck and I just had to force myself to do my work. Even the sound of my own children playing made me feel as if I must scream if they did not get away from me. I could not even speak right to my husband. The doctor said he could do nothing for me. My husband's mother advised me to take the Vegetable Compound and I started it at once. I was able to do my work once more and it was a pleasure, not a burden. Now I have a fine bouncing baby and am able to nurse her and enjoy doing my work. I cannot help recommending such a medicine, and any one seeing me before I took it, and seeing me now, can see what it does for me. I am only too pleased for you to use my testimonial."—Mrs. EMILY DAVIS, 721 McGee St., Winnipeg, Man.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Cobourg, Ont. This book contains valuable information. c

Negro Janitor Paints Picture of Christ Child

KANSAS CITY, Mo., August 21.—(United Press.)— Interest of art critics in an oil painting portraying the "Birth of Christ" which hangs in the Union sttaion here, led to-day to the discovery of the "unknown artist" Albert Jackson, negro janitor and former coal miner.

A group of critical art lovers, gathered about the painting, exchanged comments of wonder that such a first-class original canvas should appear in such comparative commonplace setting. Such paintings are rarely found outside the walls of the best art galleries, they agreed.

Jackson, in his grease-covered overalls, with a monkey wrench in one hand, came up from his workshop in the basement at the request of the station-master, and told the critics briefly his love for art, and the work he had done in oil paintings after hours in this little home in the colored section here.

"You might call this my masterpiece," the negro said. "I have done many small paintings, but this is my best. I worked on this canvas every night after working hours, for four months."

Jackson told his audience he had never studied art, although several of them insisted before they met the painter that the canvas was "old Italian" or the work of an artist who had received his training from the old Latin masters.

"I have always aspired to be a painter," the negro continued. "But I have not studied art and the ability I have comes natural. I get ideas from visiting the art galleries and from talking with artists."

The critics agreed the painting, barring a few minor technical faults, was well done. The figures, depicting the Christ child lying in the manger, watched over by the kneeling virgin Mary, were almost perfect, as was the accuracy in shading and proportion of the foliage and other background.

DANCE HALL COLLAPSED TEN FIREMEN KILLED

NEW YORK, N.Y., Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press).—Ten firemen were believed to have been killed early to-day when the roof and one of the walls of a three-storey building housing a dance hall in Brooklyn, collapsed during the course of a fire.

DECREASE IN BEER.

MUNICH, Aug. 20.—(Associated Press)—Germany's beer production is less than half what it was in prewar days. Last year there were only 33,000,000 hectoliters produced as against 70,000,000 hectoliters in the period immediately preceding the war.

The beer production for 1922 was roughly 871,000,000 gallons, or nearly 15 gallons for each inhabitant of the German republic. Experienced barkeepers manage to get eight glasses of beer out of every gallon, so at that rate every inhabitant of Germany might have had 120 glasses of beer last year, or, roughly, one glass every three days.

The brewers say the decline in beer consumption is due to poverty of the public. Temperance workers say educational work as to the evil effects of alcohol is responsible for much of the decline in beer drinking, and beauty doctors say the world-wide desire of women to be slender in order to wear prevailing fashions has made women, especially younger women, more abstemious.

In 1904 there were 442,000 persons directly employed by the brewing industry in Germany. The number is now 10,000 less.

MORE DUTCH TROOPS

LONDON, Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press).—A despatch to The Daily Mail from Maastricht says that in view of the possible "incidents" along the German-Dutch frontier, Dutch troops have been sent thither and the frontier guards increased.

The despatch adds that hordes of Germans are buying all available foodstuffs in Dutch frontier towns.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—(United Press).— Prices moved irregularly in the early dealing on the Stock Exchange to-day reflecting the same influences which governed Mondays fluctuations.

News developments were without particular significance as an immediate factor and changes in the general district were principally caused by operations of professional traders. Pan American Petroleum was a feature of the oil list, developing exceptional activitiy around the best levels reached on the current recovery variations from the previous close among the industrials leaders were confined to fractions which were mostly on the down side as a result of further profit taking. Professional attempts to force the reaction further encountered stubborn resistance in the first hour. Prices among the Industrial leaders yielded slightly but the recessions were so small, they indicated the presence of substantial buying orders under the market.

Despite the sluggishness of the main body of stocks special issues displayed pronounced strength. Gulf State Steel reached a new high on the movement at 78 3-8 reflecting the difficulties of an over extended short interest. American ice continued in demands at its best levels, on the recovery responding to the record earnings the company is enjoying this year. Bankers and brokers are of the opinion that if business improves in the last four month of the year the tendency of the stock market is bound to be upward. The market, they say, has thoroughly discounted the falling off in business over the last several months and is in a strong position to discount any improvements.

A moderate increase in the demand for certain industrial products has already occurred and inquiries indicate this demand may reach fair proportions in September.

Bookings of the Steel Companies are not very far away from the low record level reached in the last depression and the turning point may be reached in either September or November. It is traditional that securities move in sympathy and with the hours of unfilled steel tonnage.

Since the organization of the United States Steel Corporation in 1901 securities always have been a good purchase with steel tonnage near the turning point.

DON'T OVEREAT TO ADD WEIGHT

Thin People Frequently Eat Too Much, Froude Says.

By Marian Hale

NEW YORK, Aug. 21. —You've encountered the slight young thing who eats as many calories in a day as you allow yourself for a week who has whipped cream bat daily—and has never yet weighed 100 pounds, haven't you?

Well, if you want to know why she is than you'll find the answer in Charles C. Froude's book, "Right Food the Right Remedy."

According to Froude, the most common cause of underweight is overeating.

"Thin people frequently eat beyond their assimilative power, ruin their digestion and prepare the way for ill health," he states.

How to Gain

"The way to gain weight is to reduce the amount of food eaten. An additional loss of weight may occur at first, but this loss is chiefly due to the eliminations of the poisons and waste that have accumulated through overeating. This will be followed by an increase in weight and the building of normal healthy tissues."

To the woman who would gain weight Froude gives this advice;

"Don't attempt to force a gain in weight.

"Don't try to stimulate the appetite.

"The thin and nervous should eat sparingly of acid and sub-acid fruits.

"Don't overeat. Fruits and vegetables should compromise the major part of food consumed daily. Acid fruits and acid vegetables should never be eaten with starchy foods.

Day's Menu

"The best arrangement of meals for the day is to have your morning meal consist of uncooked fresh fruit without sugar; cereal, coffee or tea, without sugar.

"The noon meal should be the starch meal. One concentrated starch such as potatoes, bread, cereal, or rice or any product made from whole wheat or grain. One or two cooked vegetables, one raw vegetable and a moderate amount of dairy butter or salad oil.

"The night meal should consist of meat or a meat substitute, a salad of uncooked fruits or raw vegetables and one or two cooked starchy vegetables."

DETROIT WOMAN'S FACE TORN BY FISH HOOKS.

HUNTSVILLE, Ont., August 21 —Among the terribly injured in the Wa-Wa Hotel fire is a Miss Case, whose address is given as Detroit.

She was being lowered from the second-storey window by her brother when she became entangled in some fish hooks left hanging from a window sill on a lower floor.

The barbs caught her in the neck, chin and face. She suffered terrible wounds, and some of the hooks were so deeply embedded in her face that parts of the flesh had to be cut away to remove them.

She now is in Huntsville, in a precarious condition.

After Miss Cas had been lowered, her brother had to jump from the window to save his life.

DETECTIVE CATCHES RUM THROWN FROM WINDOW

MUSKEGON, Mich., Aug. 21.—Bernard Grady threw a bottle of liquor out of a second-story window when Charles Hammond, detective, went in to arrest him. William Feeney, another detective was standing blow the window and caught the bottle the window and caught the bottle. Grady is charged with violating the liquor law.

BLIND WOMAN EVOLVED TOY WOOLLEN DOGS

Made Children Happy and Now Teaches Her Art to Others—Happier When Busy.

CAN'T FILL ORDERS.

(By Marian Hale.)

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 21.—Some of the funniest toys on the market to-day, and those that afford the greatest amusement to grownups as well as children, are made by a woman who has never seen one of her creations.

Etta Knowlton of this city is reponsible for an aggregation of woolly dogs that have an irresistible appeal. Some have a waggish tilt to their heads, some look fierce and aggressive and others are cuddly ones that just beg to be taken home. No two ever quite alike because her sensitive fingers get no guidance from her eyes.

Blind since she was 9, Miss Knowlton had a limited field from which to select her career. She became an expert knitter and rugs, sweaters, wash-cloths and other knitted articles grew under her fingers.

Then one time as she lay in a hospital recovering from an illness, a friend brought her a skein of silver-glow yarn that she might knit during her convalescence.

Childhood Memory.

Instead of some useful article, Miss Knowlton evolved her first woolly dog, as much like the ones she could remember as possible. The fact that the features were slightly different only added to the charm.

It amused the nurse and the callers so much she made more for the sick children in the institution and then some interested friends sent a sample of her work to New York, to the Lighthouse Handcraft Shop, where the work of the blind is exhibited.

To-day she has more orders for dogs than she can fill, though she turns them out with amazing rapidity.

Out of Love.

"You're so much happier if you are busy all day long," she says.

"I love children, and it was always my dream to do something for them. Of course I wanted to teach them, or be a nurse that specialized on children's cases, but since I can't do that, I find the greatest satisfaction in being able to amuse them by supplying toys.

"I never make a dog but I try to visualize the boy or girl who will get it, and I always offer up a little prayer that they may have the gift of sight."

Miss Knowlton is now self-supporting and is teaching other blind girls her craft.

OVER 130 HARVESTERS LEFT THIS DISTRICT

The C.P.R. sent out an excursion train from Peterboro a few days ago, carrying one hundred and thirty harvesters, and another goes to-morrow morning.

The last party included twenty-five women. The harvesters go from here to Winnipeg and are distributed from there throughout the districts needing help.

MARKS FAMOUS SPOT

LONDON, Aug. 21—Visitors to places of interest in the city, and many Londoners themselves, have been surprised lately to find numerous blue plaques with white letters on walls of buildings. These are being put up by the City Council to mark the site of ancient London, and the residences of famous citizens.

One of the most recent ones marks the spot in Cheapside from which the Romans measured their miles from London. Residences of Chaucer, Keats, Shakespeare Pepys and other prominent citizens of the olden days also have been designated BELLEVILLE, Ont., Aug. 21. — Coroner Dr. Tennent opened an inquest on the remains of David Babcock, an elderly man who died in the General Hospital here, to which he had been taken following an accident when he backed into a slowly moving truck.

MAKE EFFORT TO STAY BEAUTIFUL

Rules to Be Followed By Girls Who Would Retain Their Beauty.

BY ANNE DOLAN.

You can't stay young and beautiful without making an effort.

The most perfect engine in the world would never run indefintely without repairs and your body won't either.

So when I tell you to get up half an hour or even an hour earlier than you ordinarily do in order to prepare intelligently for your day's work and get yourself in proper shape to do your best, don't rebel.

Just try my plan for three months then if you want to go back to the old way, do so with my blessing.

As soon as you arise in the morning mix yourself the following cock tail—one quart of water and one teaspoonful of salt.

You won't care much for this drink at first, but force yourself to swallow it for the first few days and you will find you don't mind it so much.

Fill the Lungs.

Then go to an open window, or outdoors if possible, and practice deep breathing. Slowly take just as much air into your lungs as you can, and hold it as long as you can. Do the bending and the stretching exercises I will describe in the articles that follow. Or do the daily dozen if you like. And manipuate the muscles of your abdomen lightly as you do.

About half an hour after you have consumed the water you may have coffee or orange juice or any fruit you like and a little solid food; such as a slice of whole wheat bread toasted, or a bran muffin or a light cereal—that's enough.

At lunch time you may have a sandwich of whole wheat or dark bread with a filling of lettuce and tomato and a glass of buttermilk or skim milk. Perhaps you have been used to desserts and starchy foods, but you should get over the habit.

Use Your Teeth.

Then for dinner you can have pretty much what you like — soup meat, a salad and a dessert. Go lightly on the starches and the sugar and don't give the butter a second glance. And chew, chew, chew. Chew until you no longer get any taste from the food. In that way you get every ounce of nourishment and your teeth do the job that they were intended for.

During the day, as you feel hungry, drink copiously of good fresh water. This wil relieve the pangs of hunger.

RUM PIRATES GOT HAUL OF $20,000

Shot Down Captain and Cook of Steamer. Captain is Dying.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., August 21 (Canadian Press).—Rum pirates who boarded the Nova Scotia schooner, J. Scott Hankenson, about 1 miles off Rockport yesterday, and shot down the captain and cook, and carried away about $20,000 in cash from the craft, the police said to-day they had reason to believe.

Evidence showed, they added, that liquor had ben sold from schooner in large quantities for some time past to rum-running boats from the shore, and they were inclined to think that the pirates were customers who knew there was a large sum of money on board the schooner.

The cook, Harry Harm, is recovering from his bullet wounds in a hospital here. The captain, Arthur Moore, at the same hospital, is said to be dying.

NEW YORK HAS MORE OF EGYPT THAN PYRAMIDS

Women Are Strong in Political and Social Circles and Interchange of Fashions Unites Them

HOPE FOR PEACE.

(BY MARIAN HALE.)

NEW YORK, August 21. — The place to see the Egyptian costume in all its splendour is not in the streets of Cairo, but on the sidewalks of New York, concludes Sarah S. Lyon, traveller and lecturer.

Having just returned from a tour of Asia, Africa and Europe that lasted almost two years, she observes that the Orient has been moved to the Occident.

"In Egypt," she explains, "I found that though most of the women have not abandoned veils, they are wearing the very latest and most fashionable type of veil, sheer as mist and most becoming.

'In New York, every other girl wears an Oriental turban or a veiled effect. Just as the fashionable world is turning to the land of Cleopatra for inspiration, the Egyptian herself falls under the spell of the western styles."

Changes Everywhere.

In Constantinople too Miss Lyon found many changes.

"There I found women unveiled in the streets and in Stamboul I was served with an eight course Turkish supper during the feast of the Ramazan by Moslem girls affiliated with the Stamboul Y.W.C.A.

'But the most significant thing in the east to-day and in Europe as well is the way women of different races, creeds and political convictions are successfully overlooking war antagonisms even to the point of working together under the same roof.

Hope from Women.

"One cannot help feeling there may be more hope for the healing of the war scars through the newly enfranchised women than through the men. This is because women of all creeds and classes have a common and dominating interest in the welfare of their country's children; because they have lived apart from politics and therefore attack the problems of state from an unprejudiced point of view."

GERMANS SEEK HARTZ COAL

EISLEBEN, Saxony, Aug. 21.—(Associated Press)—Coal mines in the Hartz Mountains, neglected for 25 years, again are being operated as a result of the French occupation of the Ruhr. The Hartz coal field is 20 miles long, and it is estimated that one mine alone is capable of yielding 15,000,000 tons of coal.

SUMMER COMPLAINT CRAMPS and DIARRHOEA

There is no other kind of disease that comes on so quickly and with so little warning as an attack of

One may retire at night, in the best of health, and before morning be awakened by terrific cramps and pains in the stomach followed by diarrhoea, dysentery, summer complaint or bowel trouble in one form or another.

At this season of the year, when bowel troubles are so prevalent, we would advise the precaution of always having on hand a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry so that you will be ready for any and all emergencies. You will find that a few doses of this valuable remedy, taken promptly, will be the means of preventing a great deal of unnecessary suffering, and many a time save life.

Mrs. W H. Judd, 174 Catherine St., Hamilton, Ont., writes:—"Last summer I had a very bad attack of summer complaint, cramps and diarrhoea. I tried many different remedies, but they did not seem to help me. I heard of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, so decided I would try it. I only took a few doses, and in a short time I was better."

TWENTY-ONE PIECES OF ELECTRICAL APPARATUS, not counting electric lights, are lightening the housework performed daily by American women. So huge has become the electric light and power industry which makes the foregoing possible that it takes a billion dollars of new capital each year to run this one Public Utility.

RECENT REPORTS STATE THAT season unemployment will soon be done away with by the introduction of the small electrically-driven factory. This will enable both manufacturing and agriculture interests to arrange winter and summer schedules to meet conditions that arise. The flour mills will go back to the farm, machinery will go into the outlying districts and the population will follow the machinery. A boom in our great uninhabited stretches of land should soon be imminent.

WHEN YOU HAVE ACCIDENTALLY RECEIVED A SHOCK from an electric light socket, you have an immediate and striking understanding of what 110 volts is. Multiply that voltage by 20,000 and you get the power with which the General Electric Company experiments. A real bolt of lightning is 25 times again as powerful as the chained force in use at Pittsfield, yet men have been known to be struck by lightning and live. The human body would therefore seem to deserve a niche all its own among the "wonders" of the world.

MOST WOMEN WOULD BE BOTH PUZZLED and unresponsive if you talked to them in terms of "volts," "amperes" and "watts." If, instead, you use their simple synonyms, "pressure," "current" and "power," they would show a glimmering of understanding. The next time you want a woman to grasp the principles of electricity, explain the matter to her on the basis of "pressure, current and power" and she will be much more apt to obtain a comprehensive idea of what you are driving at.

THE TRAIL OF THE LONESOME PINE leads electric-lightwards and then the pine becomes lonesome no longer. It has plenty of company, especially in the state of North Carolina, where the living pine is used for transmission poles. Here, bristling with glass insulators which support the wires, the pine trees wave a passing greeting to travelers along every highway.

THE ARABS SAY "There are three things that come not back—the spoken word, the lost opportunity and the bullet from the rifle." There is a fourth and most important thing which, taken away, can never return. It is the energy and time of the housekeeper who does her daily work by old, backbreaking, unsanitary methods, refusing to see the economical advantages of electrical aids.

THERE WILL BE NO ICE SHORTAGE these hot summer days in the home that owns an electric refrigerator. When the iceman is doing his worst by staying away from ice boxes in which the milk has soured, the butter melted, the food spoiled, the homemaker with an electric refrigerator is merely snapping on the current that keeps her ice box colder than ice can make it, her foods free from taint and cubes of ice ready at any time for table consumption.

U.S. Davis Cup Defenders Will Be Chosen To-Day.

NEW YORK, August 21 (Canadian Press). — Defenders in this year's Davis Cup challenge round against Australia will be chosen today by the Davis Cup Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

Among court followers it is regarded as a foregone conclusion that William T. Tilden, U.S. national champion, and William M. Johnson, new world's champion, will be selected to carry the burden in the singles. Neither has been defeated in this branch of international cup competition since they brought the fa. ous trophy back from Australia in 1920.

Choice of a doubles team again looms as the committee's chief problem as it did a year ago. Last season, Vincent Richards, the young Yonkers star, was selected to play with Tilden, but this combination of holders of the U.S. national title lost to the Australian team of Patterson and O'Hara Wood and has been abandoned this year.

J. McHARDY ELECTED NEW PRESIDENT OF SOFT BALL LEAGUE

Officers Elected at Enthusiastic Meeting Held in the Chamber of Commerce Rooms Last Evening.

MEET NEXT TUESDAY.

J. M. McHardy was last evening unanimously elected president of the Men's Soft Ball League at the annual meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce rooms. J. E. Sullivan, the retiring president, was also nominated to succeed himself but withdrew as he felt that the office was one which should be passed along and not held from year to year by one man. Mr. McHardy was very actively connected with the organization last year during both the fall and spring schedules in the capacity of a member of the executive committee. His efforts during those periods ably seconded those of the retiring president and went a long way toward making the league the success it was.

Other officers elected were: C. G. McLean, vice president and Tommy Holyman, secretary-treasurer. Both of these men took a very active part in last season's schedules. Dr. A. W. McPherson was the unanimous choice of the meeting for the office of honorary president, an office which he also held last year. These four officers will have the power to name three other men to form with the executive committee with them. During the election of officers the chair was occupied by Dr. J. J. Craig.

The meeting was attended by over thirty delegates representing eighteen teams.

The teams represented were: Rangers, Lock Works, Gunners, Triple Link, De Laval, L.O.L. 50, Dragoons, K. of C., Quakers, Woollens, C.N.R., Rotary, Bowlers, Kiwanis, Belmonts, C.G.E. (Porcelain department), C.G.E. Engineers and Westclox. This gives nine teams in each of the Mercantile and Club sections. Several other teams have signified their intentions of entering and they have until next Tuesday to get in touch with the secretary and make the necessary arrangements. The next meeting of the League will be held on Tuesday night when the entry fee of $10 for each team will have to be paid and the certificates will be issued. Several other important matters will have to be decided at this meeting. The date for the opening of the schedule will be set though the schedule itself cannot be drawn until it is known exactly what teams are entered. The question of a single or a double schedule will also come up as will the matter of setting an age limit.

A suggestion was made last evening that the playing field be shifted to the west end of the armoury but the final decision in the matter was left to the executive. In view of the fact that the Armouries are to be used for playing the games it was suggested that the Gunners, Rangers and Dragoons be exempted from the entrance fee and this matter was also left to the executive to decide.

It was decided at last night's meeting that each team should supply some form of indentification from the manager of their plant or president of their club showing that all members of the team were bona fide employees or members.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the Chamber of Commerce rooms.

In a short address to the members Dr. A. W. McPherson expressed the appreciation of the P.A.A.A. for the donation which had been made at the close of the spring schedule. The money had been a big help, he said. It had been easy to find a place for it, as it would be easy to find a place for a lot more. The league had, he felt, given more real pleasure and athletic activity to men who really needed it than any other similar organization in the city.

The organization, he said, is young yet and is in need of rules and precedents for guidance. This is especially true in the matter of the aims and objects or the organization, the conditions under which membership may be obtained and the business guidance of the affairs of the league.

He depreciated any tendency to strengthen one team at the expense of others for the sake of winning a championship but rather advocated keeping the teams as nearly even as possible in order to foster a spirit of keener competition and better team play. He spoke of the excellent spirit which has been evidenced in the past schedules and paid a glowing tribute to the work of the umpires who had done so much to make the league a success.

DEMPSEY IN TRAINING.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, N.Y., Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press.)—Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion, yesterday put in one of the hardest days of training since he pitched camp here several weeks ago in preparation for the Sept. 14 bout with Luis Angel Firpo at New York city.

Down to 195 pounds, the champion reeled off eight miles of mountain roads as his morning bracer and then devoted two rounds a piece to the light and heavy punching bags. This afternoon he boxed two rounds with Elzear Rioux, French-Canadian lumber-jack, who simulates the Firpo type of fighter.

INJURY MAY FORCE UMPIRE TO RETIRE

Ormsley Was Hit on the Head By a Thown Ball Some Time Ago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Umpire Ormsby of the American League staff is probably out of the running for the remainder of the season, as a result of a very unusual accident.

In a game at Boston some time ago, Ormsby while working the bases, turned to get a play at second, the runner on first attempting to steal that base. It so happened that he got in a direct line with the throw of Catcher Al Walters of the Boston club. The ball struck Ormsby directly under his left ear. He dropped as if completely knocked out but quickly got to his feet and resumed play.

Ormsby finished the game and also worked the following day. He then began to be troubled with a severe headache that made is impossible for him to work. After resting for about a week in Boston he was able to make the journey to his home in Chicago.

There a careful examination was made, which showed a blood clot forming that was the cause of all the trouble. Ormsby is undergoing treatmeat for the injury under a specialist, but it is not believed that his condition will enable him to do any more umpiring this year.

It is a rather singular fact that Ormsby is the second American League umpire to suffer serious injury as the result of being struck by a thrown ball by Catcher Walters.

Several years ago Umpire George Moriarty turned too quickly to get a play at second and was struck on the head and severely injured.

Bues of Milwaukee is Declared Ineligible.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.— (Canadian Press.)—Two baseball games which Milwaukee won from the Indianapolis club of the American Association while playing Art Bues in the Brewers' line-up, yesterday were thrown out by Thomas J. Hickey, president of the league. Mr. Hickey acting on a protest from the Indianapolis club, found that Bues was an ineligible player.

In 1922, Mr. Hickey said, Bues, who was the property of the Louisville club, had been placed on the voluntary retired list. The Milwaukee club gained permission from the Louisville club to employ Bues and he reported. Investigation by Mr. Hickey developed that Bues by playing last year with the Joliet, Ill. club, not in organized baseball, had outlawed himself from organized baseball.

Protest Against Ken Williams' Bat

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press.)— Kenneth Williams, home run slugger of the St. Louis Americans uses a bat with a wooden plug in the business end of it and Umpire George Hildebrand yesterday asserted he would make a complete report of the matter to Ban Johnson, president of the American League.

Mr. Hildebrand's announcement followed a statement by Manager Bush, of Washington, that he would protest against all victories the Browns won from the Senators in which the bat was used by Williams. Bush asserts the bat is illegal because it is made out of more than one piece of wood.

Piloted Ball Team

CHAS. H. DAVIDSON.

Manager of the Campbellford team in the Northumberland League Mr. Davidson promoted and financed the team, got a place in the League for Campbellford, and with a bunch of comparatively new places held on against discouraging results at the start and piloted them to third place in a League of nine teams. In the play-off with Warkworth for second place, his team lost out by one run. Manager Davidson and his players have aroused the enthusiasm of Campbellford citizens in baseball and his friends will be pleased to hear that the club as come through the season without a deficit.

PUZZLING PLAYS

(BY BILLY EVANS)

THE PLAY

Here is a play that at one time caused many disputes, because the rules did not specifically cover the point.

At the meeting of the rules committee recently the point was definitely covered, so there is no longer any room for argument.

Here is the play as it came up in several minor league games last season.

There are runners on first and second and one out. The batsman hits a ball to the fence for a home run.

The runner on second for some unknown reason missed third base on his way to the plate. The man on first as well as the batsman touched each base in proper order. The ball is thrown to third base, and the umpire declares the runner out who failed to touch the base.

The team in the field contends the other two runners should also be called out, since they technically passed the other runner on the base line by touching third base before he did.

What about it?

THE INTERPRETATION

The only runner who can be called out on the play, is the runner who actually missed the base.

At one time the rules offered a chance for an argument, because the point was not definitely covered. Now the rule is very specific. It says:

"The failure of a preceding runner to touch a base, and who is declared out therefore, shall not affect the status of a succeeding runner who touches bases in proper order.

BEER AND WINE VOTE.

MANIWAKI, Que., Aug. 21. —(Canadian Prses.)—At a meeting of the council here last night a by-law was passed permitting a vote on the beer and wine issue. The day set for the vote was Sept. 3.

LOCAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE STANDING

The standings of the Football League games show the War Vets and Thistles tied for the top position, each having won six, lost one and tied three. The Vets have scored one more goal than the Thistles, but have had two more goals scored against them. The Vets and Thistles have still one game to play, which will probably be the deciding factor of the league.

The standings to date are:

| Team. | P | W | L | D | Goals F | A | Pts. |
|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|---|
| Thistles | 10 | 6 | 1 | 3 | 24 | 7 | 15 |
| G.W.V.A. | 10 | 6 | 1 | 3 | 25 | 9 | 15 |
| Woollens | 12 | 3 | 6 | 3 | 23 | 31 | 9 |
| Quakers | 8 | 3 | 4 | 1 | 10 | 20 | 7 |
| Packers | 10 | 1 | 7 | 2 | 11 | 26 | 4 |

HERE AND THERE IN SPORT

The Peterborough Baseball Club has made arrangements to run a special train to Cobourg for the final play-off game between Belleville and Peterborough. The train will leave here at 1.15, and as the game is scheduled for 3.30, there will be ample time to reach the lakeshore town and get to the Horse Show Park where the game is to be played.

The Massey-Harris soccer team of Braptford, which defeated the local G.W.V.A. team, 6 to 1, in the series for the Ontario Cup, was in turn defeated by the Hamilton team by a score of 7 to 1 in a game at Hamilton last Saturday.

The Toronto Leafs turned out in brand-new uniforms for their game with Baltimore yesterday. Their entire lot of uniforms were destroyed in the fire which wiped out the grandstands and bleachers at Harrison Field, the home of the Newark Bears.

The Tigers, who have been consistent tailenders in the Girls' Softball League, last evening held the league leading Colonials to a score of 3 to 1. The Colonials won only after a hard struggle. The Tigers have greatly strengthened their team with several new players. Jack Thornton is now managing the team.

"Red" Wingo, Toronto's star home-run smacker, has been sold to Detroit for $50,000. The new running mate for Ty Cobb and Heilman, walloped out thirty-four homers last season, leading the International League. He has been doing very well with the willow this season.

The 8 to 3 victory for the Cognawagas over Keene last evening gave the Peterborough team the honors for the second half of the schedule. Keene won the first half, and the first of the play-off games is scheduled for Wednesday. The winners last evening scored all their runs in the last inning.

SHOOTING DUCKS ALREADY STARTED

Fish and Game Protective Association Will Take Steps to Protect the Feathered Game.

Reports have been received by the officials of the local Fish and Game Protective Association that ducks are already being shot in the vicinity of Peterboro. The Secretary, Chris. G. Graham, is taking the matter up with the Association, and has been informed of the intention to use severe methods to put a stop to the practice.

The absurdity of this shooting out of season is seen in the depleted number of game birds which are left when the season opens.

It is useless for the Association to bring into the district fish and game which are to be destroyed uselessly and needlessly before they are developed. Reports have also been received relative to the running of deer. All offenders who are caught will be dealt with in a manner to cause respect for the law.

FIVE EARTHQUAKES.

TEHERAN, Persia, Aug. 21. — (Canadian Press.) — Five severe earthquakes have been felt at Turbat-i-Haidari during the last twenty-four hours and the inhabitants are panic stricken, say despatches received here.

Heavy floods have also caused damage, and there are said to be many casualties.

COGNAWAGA IN LEAGUE FINAL

Win Second Half of East Peterboro League By Rally In The Sixth.

SCORE WAS 8 to 3

After breezing along for five innings with a comfortable lead that looked good enough to win, Keene ball tossers went to pieces in the sixth and were defeated by Cognawaga at Exhibition Park last evening by the score of 8 to 3. The win gave Cognawaga the second half of the East Peterborough League series, and as Keene won the first half, the teams will now play one final game for the championship, as provided for by the constitution of the League.

The play-off proved to be an exciting contest. The "Cogs" could do nothing with Robertson's pitching until the sixth when with a three-run lead to overcome, an error at first, the club team started a rally that neither Robertson nor his teammates could stop before the game was lost.

Keene got all their runs without a hit, P. Vannest keeping them to a pair of runs in the fifth by a fumble and wild throw.

The "Cogs" pitcher barring streaks of wildness pitched a good game and I. Fletcher got the only hit, a double to left in the fourth with nobody on.

First Innings

Davis was thrown out on a nice play by Nelson, Grose fanned, but had to be retired at first. Shadgett also missed three.

Nelson struckout. O'Dette was safe on Grose's fumble. Hawkens' long fly was captured by Allen and Shadgett came in for Fletcher's fly.

Second Innings

D. Davis fanned; Prest was retired at first and MacDonald lined out to C. Robertson.

C. Robertson was hit and he stole Davis dropped the third strike on A. Fletcher. After taking the throw to get Robertson and he went home. Renwick fanned and M. Robertson popped to Shadgett.

Third Innings

The Keene heaver struckout the side. P. Vannest, Allen and A. Vannest being the victims.

McCarthy flew out to Prest. Nelson and O'Dette fanned.

Fourth Innings

A. Davis was retired at first, Grose struckout, and Shadgett sent a fly to McCarthy.

Hawkins grounded out. I. Fletcher doubled to left for the first hit of the game; only to be caught at third on an attempted steal. C. Robertson was hit. A. Fletcher grounded out.

Fifth Inning

D. Davis dumped a single into centre and went to second. Prest fanned. MacDonald sent up a short pop which Hawkins caught and doubled Davis who had gone down to third.

Renwick was deadheaded. He was forced at second by Mr. Robertson stole second and third and McCarthy took second, both scoring when P. Vannest fumbled O'Dette's grounder and threw wildly to first. Hawkins grounded out.

Sixth Innings

P. Vannest was safe when the first baseman failed to handle a throw from the catcher off the batter's tap down first. Vannest made second and advanced to third on a wild pitch. Allen flew out to C. Robertson. A. Vannest walked A. Davis singled to left scoring P. Vannest. Grose singled through second to score A. Vannest. Shadgett lined out to A. Fletcher. C. Robertson dropped another throw following D. Davis' grounder to Nelson, allowing A. Davis to get home. Prest shot a long single to right, scoring, Grose and D. Davis. McDonald tapped to the pitcher, and was safe when C. Robertson allowed the throw to get away. P. Vannest made his way to third and scored on a passed ball. Allen's third strike was dropped but Hawkins got him at third.

I. Fletcher was thrown out by Shadgett. C. Robertson sent up a foul fly to D. Davis . A. Fletcher fanned after whcih the game was called.

TO PLAY SERIES FOR CITY TITLE

Maple Leafs and Sacred Heart Meet in First Game This Evening.

The City Baseball League having declined to accept its responsibilities as an executive in the matter of protests entered by Sacred Heart and Maple Leafs, the managers of the two teams got together and settled their differences.

The two clubs will play a series of games, the team winning two out of three contests to be awarded the city title in the juvenile series.

Sacred Heart protested the Maple Leafs' win of last Wednesday on the grounds that the umpire-in-chief erred in not calling the game on account of darkness.

The Leafs claimed that Griffin, who played all the games of the second half with Sacred Heart, was ineligible to play with the team by reason of his having taken part in three ujnior games and one intermediate game with other clubs.

Instead of the disputes being decided in a regular way, an effort was made to have the teams reach an agreement. It was decided by them that Griffin should be dropped from the Sacred Heart line-up; that the second half be awarded to Sacred Heart; and that a championship series be played.

The first game was billed for Riverside Park at 5.45 o'clock this evening with Ed. LeBarr and Alex. Kay as umpires.

HELP THE CITY BALL CHAMPIONS

Now that the Peterborough ball teams are entering the semi-finals of the O.B.A.A., an opportunity appears before car owners to give the championship-hunting clubs a lift.

Travelling expenses are heavy and the gate receipts not large. It would be a real help to the clubs if car owners would assist with their automobiles.

When St. George's of Oshawa, came here last Saturday, they travelled in cars provided free. One supporter who, at the last moment, had to use the car promised to the ball players, telephoned a garage and ordered a motor for the trip.

Assistance of this kind makes the players feel better.

The Intermediate, Junior, Juvenile, and Midget champions should be given a helping hand in the O.B.A.A play-offs.

QUIZ CORNER

THE BATTLE OF SEVEN OAKS

Q—When and where was the battle of Seven Oaks fought?

A—The Battle of Seven Oaks was fought in 1816 between the men of the Northwest Fur Company and the Selkirk Settlers when Governor Robert Semple and twenty-two of his officers and men were killed. In 1817 Lord Selkirk, with a company of disbanded soldiers, recaptured Fort Douglas and established his settlers on the Red River. This celebrated encounter led to the union of the two great rival fur companies —the Hudson Bay and the Northwest Company. A memorial marks the site of the battle.

RECORD CROWD AT FINAL GAME

Central Ontario's Fans Will Flock To Cobourg To-morrow.

The game between Belleville and Peterborough at Cobourg to-morrow, which will decide the championship of B Section of the Central Ontario League, promises to attract a record crowd.

Cobourg fans, of course, will be out in droves. Belleville and Peterborough will be strongly represented, and from Port Hope, Lindsay, Oshawa, Bowmanville, and Kingston there will be large delegations, as the game is looked upon as the choicest morsel of the ball season.

For the accommodation of the many local fans who want to see the battle, a special G.T.R train has been arranged for, leaving here at 1.15 to-morrow afternoon, and returning at 7 o'clock.

Th fare for the round trip will be $1.80, and it is expected that several hundred local enthusiasts will take advantage of the opportunity to see the old rivals clash in the eleventh and most crucial game of the season between Belleville and Peterborough.

Each has beaten the other five times this season, and there is every reason to expect the hardest fight of the year to-morrow.

The game will be called at 3.30 o'clock, with Umpires Frank Hallinan and Walter Thorne, of Toronto, in charge.

A similar closed season has been provided for Eider Ducks, except that Eider may be shot in the Yukon and Northwest Territories during the regular open season provided for ducks in those localities.

PROSECUTE CASES; RESERVE JUDGMENT

Instructions Regarding Betting Information Act Say to Continue Enforcement.

TORONTO, Aug. 21.— (Canadian Press).—In a letter sent out last night by E. Bayly, deputy attorney general, on the instructions of Hon. W. F. Nickle, K. C. the crown attorneys throughout Ontario, are directed to continue prosecutions under the Betting Information Act as if no question as to the validity of the provincial law had arisen.

As soon as the hearing of the cases has closed, however, the crown attorneys are advised to request the magistrate to reserve judgment until after the constitutionality of the act has been decided by the Appellate Division, to which the attorney general purposes appealing the judgment recently delivered by Judge Danton declaring the new provincial statute ultra-vires.

Yellow Tomato Preserves

Yellow tomato preserves have a delicate flavor all their own. They have an old-time tang not found in any other preserve and the clear amber look of them makes anybody's mouth water. Serve them with hot, buttered, crispy toast and tea some dark, cold afternoon. The most fastidious guest will be delighted.

The tiny, pear-shaped golden "love apples" should be used for the following recipe:

Preserves.

One-half peck tomatoes, sugar, two lemons.

Scald tomatoes and slip off skins. Weigh. Use as many pounds of sugar as there are pounds of fruit. Use one cup water for each pound of sugar. Put sugar and water in preserving kettle and bring to the boiling point. Boil three minutes. Add tomatoes and lemons sliced very thin. Simmer until the tomatoes are transparent. Pour into sterilized pint jars and seal while boiling hot. The lemon may be omitted.

Candied Tomatoes.

Six pounds yellow tomatoes, three pounds light brown sugar.

Scald tomatoes and slip skins. Prick with a needle to prevent bursting. Put layer for layer of sugar and fruit in a crock and let stand over night. In the morning drain off juice and boil to a thick sirup.

Add tomatoes and simmer slowly until transparent but perfectly whole. Skim out on platters and dry in the sun, adding sirup as fast as it dries in. When the tomatoes have absorbed all the sirup and are firm pack in layers. Sprinkle each layer with powdered sugar. These sweetmeats can be used in place of figs in many puddings.

Conserve.

Four cups yellow tomatoes (the large ones can be used), five cups sugar, one orange, two lemons, three-quarters cup preserved ginger.

Scald tomatoes and slip skins. Cut in small pieces and measure. Put in preserving kettle, bring to the boiling point and skim. Add sugar, juice of orange and lemons and the rinds of both. Boil one hour. Add chopped preserved ginger and boil until mixture is thick. Pour into sterilized jars and cover with paraffin when cold.

Amber Marmalade.

One half peck yellow tomatoes, two pineapples, sugar.

Scald tomatoes and slip skins. Cut in small pieces and put in preserving kettle. Pare and grate pineapples. Add to the tomatoes and measure combined fruit. Add as many cups of sugar as there were cups of fruit and simmer until mixture is clear and thick. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

THEATRES

Capitol Entertainment

One of the prettiest of screen romances, with the tang of the salt sea in its absorbing action, is "Homeward Bound," with Thomas Meighan and Lila Lee. It is a picture that has an atmosphere of reality and an element of suspense. One wonders just how the thing is going to turn out, and, in the meantime, there is the popular Paramount star with his usual demeanor of mild perplexity in involved situations. As a foil for the handsome Thomas, the graceful softness of Lila Lee is most attractive. She does some fine acting in this picture, and Meighan also seems perfectly at home in a part that suits him to perfection.

It is the story of a rich girl and a poor man. The girl throws aside family opposition and marries secretly the man of her choice, and then she hides on the "Nancy B," the old tub that her lover has purchased. With a pursuing father in a glorious white yacht, and a storm at sea that is realistic in the extreme, the action gallops to a romantic finale of one of he most interesting pictures in which the popular Meighan has ever appeared here.

The comedy is a burlesque affair, christened "Winter Has Came," and featuring a snow blizzard that would have been absolutely ideal as a picture background, had the thermometer been up to summer-weather standard.

The Capitol orchestra had some pretty selections for the feature showing last night.

Coming Soon.

H. R. Hitchinson, manager of the Capitol Theatre, returned from Toronto yesterday and makes the announcement that he has secured for Peterboro two pictures that rank among the best of the season, in "Three Wise Fools" and "The Spoilers."

"Three Wise Fools" is from the John Golden stage success that ran for three solid seasons on Broadway. A Toronto review of its showing at the Hippodrome calls it a "very satisfactory picture, apparently produced with great care." The old men's parts are played by three of the screen's best old-men actors. A good deal of action has been introduced into the movie, with a thrilling prison escape, and the reviewer remarks, "It is a clean and entertaining movie, and ought to prove a highly popular one."

"The Spoilers" is a picturization of Rex Beach's great novel of the gold rush, the conquest of the Yukon, a novel that is said to have done more than anything else in stopping the political "spoilers" from wresting the rich gold mines from their rightful owners. Newspaper critics have acclaimed this picture as one of the most outstanding triumphs of the season.

Both productions will be shown at the Capitol Theatre in the near future.

SAYS DEMPSEY MUST WIN IN FOUR ROUNDS

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—( Canadian Press).—Unless Jack Dempsey wins from Luis Firpo within four or five rounds he will not win at all in the opinion of Jess Willard, former heavyweight champion, who is in Chicago, on a visit.

'In my opinion it is a toss up," the former champion said. "They are both tough tearing fighters who rip and slash and hit with little regard for boxing, and it is merely a question of which one lands the first punch."

"I consider Dempsey the greatest quick starter in the business, but I do believe that unless he cops it in five rounds he will not cop it at all. I honestly believe Dempsey is going to get the surprise of his life, when he goes against Firpo."

"Auto is an insult to everyone but its owner," says Albert Payson Terhune. Often, we add, it even insults its owner.

"Conversation Circulation"

IN the days when "Conversation Circulation" statements were the basis on which the advertiser bought space, the advertising solicitor who put up his story in the most pleasing manner, generally got the business.

In case the advertiser questioned the figures he might possibly go to the newspaper office and look over the circulation records with his own auditors. But neither he nor his auditors knew the intricacies of newspaper circulation records or the possibilities for juggling figures.

Circulation differences and arguments caused bitter battles between many newspapers. Ingenious schemes were used by unscrupulous publishers to put up the appearance of a larger circulation than they had. The prevalence of these practices brought out the necessity for a reputable agency to audit and report on circulation matters.

The Audit Bureau of Circulations was started eight years ago by a nucleus of the leading advertisers, agents, newspaper, magazine, farm papers, and trade paper publishers. Today it has a membership of 1800. The purpose of the bureau is to make fair and impartial audits of circulation records and it is now accepted as the Standard Authority among space buyers throughout the United States and Canada.

Every Publisher-Member of the Bureau is required to make semi-annual statements setting forth the annual net paid circulation. Once a year the Bureau sends an auditor to the office of each publisher to check and if necessary correct his circulation statements.

Study the A.B.C. reports of the publications you are considering and it will not be necssary to argue about competitive circulation.

The Examiner is a member of the A.B.C. and would be pleased to submit a copy of the latest circulation report

MODERATE DRINKING ENDORSED IN LORDS BY KING'S PHYSICIAN

Prohibition Opponents in England Read With Interest Opinion of Lord Dawson on Vexed Question.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—(Associated Press. — Opponents of prohibition in England have read with interest the recent remarks of Lord Dawson in the House of Lords endorsing the use of alcohol by adults in moderation. The occasion was the second reading of Lady Astor's temperance bill. Lord Dawson is physician to the King.

The speaker always made the proviso that drinking must be moderate and indulged in at the proper time to be beneficial. He told of a recent public dinner which he had attended saying in part:

"The centre table consisted entirely of prohibitionists, many of them high ecclesiastics. That table was the one dull, grey spot of the dinner, and if anybody wished to be converted from uncompromising condemnation of alcohol, he would have been converted by that scene."

Referring to Lord Astor's speech in introducing the bill, Lord Dawson said it gave him the impression that Lord Astor really desired to make out a case for the elimination of alcohol. "I should be more happy," he continued, "if I had heard from lips one word of approval of alcohol in any shape or form. One cannot shut one's eyes to the fact that quite a large proportion of the people who support this bill are people who look on alcohol as a harmful thing in itself, and especially harmful to youthful persons."

"Under the conditions of modern civilization," Lord Dawson went on, and in these days of concentration, the constant endeavor to put 12 hours into six, and the high measure of specialization, it is obvious that at the end of such a day the mind of man gets into one track. He has no uplift. here alcohol comes in very well Alcohol—in moderation—gets that man out of the track It lightens his mental touch"

The King's physician took the example of the working man, in these days of high pressure, who was engaged in the making of motor cars. He had, perhaps, been using precisely the same set of muscles for seven or eight hours, and consequently had been using precisely the same cells of the brain. Is it to be wondered at," he said, that at the end of the day his brain is in one track I suggest that there comes in the moderate use of alcohol He is uplifted Good beer at that particular time of day would help him and not harm him" He added that a number of people at the end of the day were quite unable to digest their food because they were too tired. "A small quantity of alcohol," he said "makes them fel happy with themselves and happy with the world"

"There was no time in our civilization," the speaker concluded, "when alcohol, properly taken, served a more useful purpose than now."

At last the president of the Bachelor Maids of Atlantic City has managed to get married.

SMUGGLING REVIVED.

DEAL, Eng., Aug. 21.—(Associated Press).—Smuggling traffic is being revived along the lonely stretches of Kent and Sussex coasts, according to sea-faring men.

Many years ago this and nearby ports were headquarters of cross-Channel smugglers in brandy, lace and silks, and now the possibilities of big profits through depreciated French exchange and a reduction in strength of the coastguards, has tempted many to take up this exciting work again.

TRIBESMEN FIGHT FRENCH WITH MODERN WEAPONS.

PARIS, August 21. — The French campaign against the unsubdued tribes in the lower Atlas Mountain region of Morocco is being conducted under extraordinary physical and military difficulties.

Fighting is going on at 6,000 to 8,000 feet up in barren country reached by traversing more than 100 miles of absolutely bare desert

The tribesmen fight obstinately with modern weapons, including field guns and machine guns.

TELEGRAPHS PARALYZED.

BERLIN, Aug. 21. —(Associated Press.) — Telegraphic communications in Germany have been swamped ever since the mark began its downward swoop. Since January of this year the amount of business handled by the German telegraph lines has been double that of the corresponding period for last year.

Telegrams now travel more slowly in Germany than letters, and the telegraph administration has appealed to the public to equalize its business and use the wires as sparingly as possible.

ACTORS DEMAND DAILY PAY.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—(Associated Press).—Singers and actors in the countries affected by the slump in exchanges have adopted a new method of collecting their salaries. The artists now demand that they be paid at the conclusion of each day's work, and at the rate of exchange paid for seats that day.

The artists have refused to sign contracts except on this basis, as they claim that the fluctuation of the exchange makes their salary nothing at the end of the month.

IN MEMORIAM.

BOATE — In loving memory of George Boate, who departed this life. August 21, 1920.

Three years have passed and gone
Since one we loved so well,
Was taken from his home on earth.
With Jesus Christ to dwell.
Sleep on, dear one, thy suffering's o'er,
Thy willing hands shall toil no more.
God took you home. He thought it best,
To give you a sweet, peaceful rest.
Only gone a while before us,
We shall meet him by and by,
If we are prepared to enter
The bright mansions in the sky.
For there is a hope, a blessed hope,
Which our dear Lord has given,
When days and years are passed and gone,
We all may meet in Heaven.

GOING BACK TO SCHOOL HANDICAPPED

Most children are being forced to do school work under the handicap of a constant nervous strain, caused by neglect of Eyes that need help.

It is foolish to lose time in supposing that the child will "Grow out of it."

The time to put out a fire is before it amounts to anything.

The sensible time to stop eyestrain is before it amounts to anything.

Is your child going back to school handicapped?

Our examination will remove the doubt.

FRANCE STANDS PAT ON QUESTION OF REPARATIONS

Reply of Premier Poincare To British Note Made Public in London To-Day

BITTER PASSAGES

PARIS, August 22. United Press.—France stands pat. The reply of Premier Poincare to the British reparations note, made public to-day, inflexibly upheld the French policy toward Germany, refusing evacuation of the Ruhr until payment is made and rejecting any proposal for a reduction of the amount of the German debt.

The reply contained little of the conciliatory tone which had been forecast, and in many passages was bitter and sarcastic.

France's Ideas.

Starting with the first British point, Poincare said: "I regret we cannot understand the British disappointment, but unfortunately we cannot see the effort England says she has made toward rapprochment with France's ideas of the execution of the Treaty of Peace.

"Our resolution has been repeated a hundred times not to renounce one centime of reparations, which are sacred," the Premier asserted, declaring that England has taken no need of what France considers essential, and that the British note is basically unconciliatory.

"I avow that we cannot understand the British reasoning regarding Germany's capacity for payment, for Germany's capacity is now zero, by her own will," the reply declared, adding that a commission of experts to pass upon the capacity of the Reich would be useless.

A Pointed Question.

"Does England wish entirely to suppress Germany's debt on the pretext that her capacity to pay temporarily is zero?" Poincare asked.

Referring to the British allusion to the rights of others, the reply said, "France does not need to be reminded of her duties."

Regrets Lack of Accord.

"I regret our lack of accord with England," Poincare said, referring briefly to the British claim that the occupation of the additional German territory is illegal. He dismissed the idea of referring the reparations question to the permanent court of international justice at the Hague by asserting "we have no need to refer to the jurisdiction of any body."

Poincare dismissed the charge that the occupation of the Ruhr is endangering Europe by declaring "we have destroyed nothing in the Ruhr. Its capacity for industrial production is stronger than ever."

Poincare only envisaged continuance of negotiations by suggesting that if they were carried on either immediately or after cessation of resistance by Germany, it would be preferable that conversations be more discreet, and given less publicity.

Almost Freezing During the Night

Lowest Temperature Reported Was 34 With Peterboro Registering 40.

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press) —Cool weather, accompanied by storms in some parts, is prevailing in nearly all sections of the Dominion. While Ontario apparently did its best to maintain its reputation by registering frost, it only managed to depress the mercury to 34 above for the lowest during the night. Prospects are for continued coolness all over the Dominion for a day or two at any rate, without any likelihood of frost, however, at least not south of the Arctic circle.

The official record here last night was 40 degrees.

NEGOTIATIONS FAIL

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press).—The Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies Petroleum Corporation announces the failure of negotiations which have been in progress in endeavor to reach an agreement with the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation looking to co-operation in the British market.

THE WEATHER.

The rainfall of Tuesday was indeed welcome, and while copious was not as heavy as might be thought. It amounted to .55 of an inch, but owing to its fineness and gentle descent but little was wasted —the dry and parched earth quickly absorbing it as it fell. It will be of untold good to the root crops and the pasture land. This morning the temperature was down to 42 degrees.—W. P.

SAYS CANCER IS INFECTIVE

Research Specialist Favors Isolation to Stamp Out Disease.

MONTREAL, Aug. 22.—Notification and isolation of all cases of cancer is held to be an essential step toward stamping out the disease, by Dr. Hugh Campbell Ross, well-known English specialist in cancer research, serving for one trip as surgeon on board the White Star Dominion liner "Canada," which has arrived here.

For a good many years Dr. Campbell Ross held the appointment of director of the McFadden Cancer Research Foundation at the Lister Institute of Preventive Medicine, London. He is the author of four volumes on cancer research, as well as numerous articles in medical publications.

Dr. Ross recently visited Pitcairn Island and satisfied himself that there is not a trace of cancer on the island, and apparently never has been since the crew of the "Bounty" mutinied and landed there. The exploration of Stefansson, and the evidence of medical men and missionaries from Arctic regions are held by Dr. Ross also to prove that there is no trace of cancer among the Eskimos. From this he deduces that diet has little to do with cancer, for the Eskimos live entirely on a flesh diet, seldom eating anything vegetable in nature such as cereals, bread, etc., while the Pitcairn Islanders up to quite recently had an exclusively vegetable diet, and have only lately begun to ask meat from passing vessels.

Climate also can have little to do with the disease, Dr. Ross figures, since the immune Eskimos are in an entirely diffeernt climate to the immune islanders. Both races descend from cancerous stock, so the question of heredity can have but little to do with the matter. The only remaining explanation, according to Dr. Ross, is isolation. Climatic conditions on the one hand, and geographical situation on the other, have almost completely isolated the two groups, and they have had little contact with anyone outside of their own group.

This leads to the conclusion that cancer is an infective disease, caused to some extent at least by a germ or some outside agent which has to be imported into a community before the disease can start.

Dr. Ross therefore concludes that notification of all cases, and their isolation where this can humanely be done, is necessary if the disease is ultimately to be stamped out.

COAL MINES MAY CLOSE SEP. FIRST

Miners Threaten the Operators with the Trouncing of Their Careers.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Aug. 22. (Canadian Press.)—Miners' officials and anthracite operators, who yesterday broke off wage negotiations for their industry were still in the city to-day awaiting whatever communication might come to them from the United States' Coal Commission or other agency of the Federal Government. Both sides had made it clear that nothing was likely to result from their inaction, which would allow the miners to operate after September 1st.

Mr. Lewis held to-day to the last word of the union, that it would administer to the anthracite operators the trouncing of their careers."

OPIUM CROP IS SMALL.

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia, Aug. 22. —(Associated Press)—The opium crop in Jugoslavia this year is the smallest in several years past. The present crop, it is estimated, will not be enough for seed purposes. Planters are asking the government to help them import seed from Asia Minor.

MINE MINISTER SAYS POSSIBLE REDUCTION TAX

Nickel Industry is Discriminated Against in Levy—Efforts To Interest Outside Capital.

OUTLINE OF POLICY

SUDBURY, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press). — Hon. Charles McCrae gave his first general outline of his policy as Minister of Mines and that of the new Ferguson government toward the mining industry of Ontario at a smoker at Copper Cliff Club last night, in honor of the visiting members of the American Institute of Mining Engineers.

The Minister spoke more in general than in definite terms. He indicated a possible reduction of the taxation on the nickel industry stating "Our mining tax is a tax on property and this affects all branches of the mining industry with one exception. This exception is the nickel industry which pays higher rate and cannot see any reason why any one branch of the industry should be discriminated against."

He stated that it was intended to intensify the work of geologists in service of the department and emphasized the general policy of building roads, blasting trails for prospectors, building railways where discoveries justified and to assist prospectors in every way to see that laws protecting workers are enforced and to make known by publicity to outside capital the opportunities of the mining areas of Ontario.

Outside Capital

Stress was laid on efforts being made to interest outside capital and that it will be made clear that outside capital may come in and feel that it is equitably distributed. He said the Ontario mines were on verge of the greatest expansion the industry has ever known. Mining commissioner Godson referred to for feiture clause of the mining act that has been the subject of so much complaint and intimated that a slight revision may be expected at the next session of the legislature.

John A. Dreffer, president of the Canadian Institute of Mining engineers, B. A. Lapierre, M.P., for Nipissing and Edwin Ludlow on behalf of the visitors also made brief addresses but the late hour of starting cut short the time allotted for speeches.

During the day the visiting party inspected the British American Nickel Plant at Nickelton and the Mon plant at Coniston.

MOTORISTS BUMP COWS ON HIGHWAY

Six Belonging to Monaghan Farmer Hurt Recently — One Killed.

Six cows hit by cars in less than a month is the casualty list in the herd of a Monaghan farmer who lives on the highway.

One of them was so badly injured it had to be destroyed. Two of the others are limping around on three legs and the others are carrying bruises.

The joy-riders have gone too far, this farmer has decided. He has approached the police and intends to make an example of the next offender.

"I never let my cattle graze along the road," he said, "but I have every right to drive them on the highway to and from pasture. One man was decent enough to offer to settle for the cow I had to destroy, and I charged him only half of what it was worth. Two of the cows have gashes just above the hoof on hind legs. That is explained this way. Some of the motor drivers come right up behind a cow so close that they can catch the near hind leg with the tire of a front wheel without breaking it. But they leave a nasty cut. Bersonally I can't afford these losses, and I don't intend to have cattle needlessly hurt by foolish drivers. I have the number of one car, and I know another, and it is just about time we came to a show down. I think the Magistrate would be inclined to put a heavy fine on some of these smart Alecks for an example to others."

UNLOCATED EXPLOSIONS GIVING POLICE CONCERN

TORONTO, Aug. 22. Canadian Press. — Repeated unlocated explosions during the night in Toronto's Ghetto district, are giving the citizens and the police some concern this morning.

The situation is admittedly mysterious. Some people are talking "black hand," others burglars and shooting, but the majority of opinion seems inclined to the view that the reports were indicative of an inglorious failure in the manufacture of "home brew."

MINERS HOLD-UP ENTHUSES OTHER WORKERS TO STRIKE

Bathrobe Makers and Mattress Workers Ordered Walkout To-day. Slipper Makers and Underwear Union Have Demands For Higher Wages

NEW YORK, August 22 (Canadian Press.) — Seizing the opportunity created by the collapse of the anthracite coal negotiations at Atlantic City, Boards of Strategy representing 2,000 bathrobe makers and 3,000 spring and mattress workers, ordered a walk-out to-day in an attempt to unionise the two industries, enforce the forty-four-hour week, with increased wages, and compel the maintenance of sanitary shop conditions.

Coincident with the walk-out, it was reported that several thousand members of the Felt Slipper Makers' Union and the Fleece-lined Underwear Union had framed demands for higher wages, with a joint strike on 1st October as a penalty for refusal.

A SMALL ARMY OF MENNONITES

No Effort to Conceal The Fact That Thousands Have Arrived

OTTAWA, August 22. — There has been no effort to conceal the fact that some thousands of Mennonites are on their way to Canada and that several hundred have already arrived according to D. W. D. Scott superintendent of immigration, when asked yesterday with regard to a report that newspaper men had been refused access to a trainload of Mennonites at the Canadian Pacific Winnipeg railway station, on the ground that the Government desired to keep the arrival of the new settlers a secret.

"There is no reason for secrecy The new arrivals are from Southern Russia. Some are going to the old settled Mennonite district of Southern Manitoba. The majority are bound for Saskatchewan and will settle around Rosthern. Some thousands are on the way and they are all agriculturalists. That is what the country wants," Mr. Scott said.

The movement of these Mennonites has been confined to the month of August according to statistics available at the Department of Immigration.

Robb Still Away

During July a total of 1,848 people entered Canada. Of these 1,350 came from United States, 306 Canadians absent more than three years, 106 were of British origin and only six were Russian.

Hon. J. L. Robb, the new Minister of Immigration, will not be in the city for a few days and has not yet had opportunity to get firmly settled in the saddle. In his absence it is impossible to secure an official statement dealing with the federal policy toward Southern European immigration.

The general demand for more immigration, however, is having an effect upon the administration and it may be that one of Mr. Robb's first official acts will be to widen the scope of the regulations under which Europeans may enter Canada.

At the moment immigrants entering Canada are practically confined to farmers, farm laborers and domestic servants. It is undestood that the exemption from military service accorded the Mennonites who came years ago will not be granted to the new arrivals.

ARRIVE FROM RUSSIA

WINNIPEG, Aug. 22—Manitoba received a new quota of Mennonite immigrants today when several hundred from Russia passed through the city en route to the Mordern-Rhineland district in the southern part of the province.

FRESH AIR CAMP BUILDING BURNED

Fire Was of Unknown Origin, The Loss Is $40.000

BOLTON, Ont., Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Yesterday 130 mothers and children left Hastings Lodge, the main building of the fresh air camps here, for their homes in Toronto, and early this morning a fire of unknown origin, fanned by a strong wind, destroyed the institution with a loss of $40,000, partly covered by insurance.

The camp was operated by the Neighborhood Workers' Association of Toronto, with an auxiliary camp maintained by the Rotary Clubs, and another party of children was to come from Toronto to-day.

Three workers were in charge of the place last night, but they fortunately slept in tents some distance from the building which was destroyed.

French Enters Fourteen Town In Ruhr Sector

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—(United Press)—Occupation of fourteen additional towns in the Ruhr by the French is imminent, a dispatch from Muenster said today.

The French are re-inforcing their garrison especially the border guards, the dispatch said, and it is believed they intend to institute complete control.

NOT TOO LATE TO ENTER BABY

Normal Children Under Three Years May Register At Exhibition.

A little misapprehension exists in the minds of some mothers with regard to the coming baby contest at the Peterborough Fall Fair. Some are of the opinion that registration has to be made only through the Well Babies' Clinic, and, as the lists at the Clinic were closed a fortnight ago, that their babies are necessarily barred. This is not the case. The Clinic merely co-operated with the directors of the Baby Show to the extent of opening their rooms for registration of under-developed children mainly, so as to afford an easy and efficient means of discovering the advance made by these children in a specified period before the Fair commences. Mothers of other normal children desirous of entering the contest also took time by the forelock and entered their babies for the show in advance. However, any mother whose child is normal and healthy, and comes within the required age limit of the various classes, none of which go beyond three years of age, can come to the Fair during its four days and have her baby take part in the contest. It is hoped that many infants from the city, country and neighboring counties will take part in the show.

This question has been raised on several occasions recently. A city doctor had two babies brought in from the northern district of the county this week by a woman who thought she was too late to enter the contest. At the Clinic yesterday several applications were made for registration, and a pair of twins, just eight weeks old, were presented by a woman who said very truly that she had been unable to bring them in before.

The fluctuations in the under-developed class are being watched with great interest. One of the little things has developed pneumonia, another gained a pound of weight in one week, another lost a quarter pound in the same time, while its little neighbor balanced the scales by adding the same quantity of flesh to its small body.

A very gratifying result of Clinic attendance has been noted this year in the absence of summer complaint among children whose mothers attend the Clinic regularly. This year, this very common summer affliction among children has been less frequent than in many years past The women coming to the Clinic tell of the treatment followed out on advice of the physicians there; the oil doses, heat applications and decrease in feedings, when an attack threatens, and consequent improvement.

The section of the baby show with which the Clinic is mainly concerned is that having to do with under-developed children who show the most progress in health since registration. For these, a special prize will be given to the baby boy and girl both.

Prizes in the regular contest, for which entries may be made at any time during the Fair days, according to a list which will be published this week, will be given to the best-looking and best-kept and healthiest infants shown in different classes and ages, up to three years, and to the mothers of the city, the surrounding district and neighboring counties is extended a cordial invitation to be on hand during Fair week with their babies.

TWO MEN TOOK ALL PRODUCTS CHEESE BOARD

Decrease in Number of Boxes After 3 Weeks' Adjournment — Price Was 20½ Cents.

TWELVE FACTORIES

Only two active buyers attended the Peterborough Cheese Board this morning, when 892 boxes of cheese were disposed of. J. S. Cooke, buying for W. S. Cooke and Son, took 323 boxes, and G. A. Gillespie accepted 420, all at 20½ cents, the same price at which cheese sold in Belleville on Saturday last.

Bidding opened at 20 cents, and nine bids brought it to the closing price, when Mr. Gillespie made his selection. On second selection Mr. Gillespie bid 20 7-16, but was promptly raised to 20½ by Mr. Cooke.

Factories Boarded.

The following factories boarded cheese: Warminster 55, Warsaw 140, Young's Point 95, North Dummer 50, Cedardale 55, Star 45, Dunsford 56, South Burleigh 23, Buckhorn 45, Oakdale 110, Killarney 168, Shearer 50. The product of Warsaw factory was sold to the Canadian Packing Company.

SCOTLAND SEAT OF RUM FIGHT

Canadian and U.S. Forces Are Lending Assistance To Both Factions.

LONDON, Aug. 22. — (British United Press Cable).—Canada and the United States are both taking part in the greatest fight between the wets and drys that Scotland has ever seen. The struggle is more serious than in 1920 when the Temperance Act first came into force. Both sides appealed to trans-Atlantic friends for support. The campaign machinery is working smoothly. Electioneering methods have improved.

A third party, headed by former Lords of the Court of Session and other prominent leaders in the national life of Scotland, is demanding improved public houses for Scotland. At the last election of the kind only two wards of Glasgow voted dry and the contest there is to keep them dry. In eight other wards there are four alternative questions for the electors with a corresponding number of ballot papers.

The questions are:

Shall there be a continuance of existing conditions which would mean preservation of the present restricted number of licenses, or a repeal of this system which would be a reversal of the decision of 1920, or shall there be increased limitation or as a further alternative, shall licenses be done away with altogether? The polling will take place early in December and the fight is exciting interest not only in Scotland but by wet and dry forces all over the country.

NO GOVERNMENT ACTION IS NEEDED

Home Bank Suspension Does Not Call For Interference by Finance Dept

OTTAWA, Aug. 22. — (Canadian Press).—Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, who was called back from Nova Scotia by the suspension of the Home Bank, was at his office here to-day and attended the Cabinet. Before the Cabinet meeting, Mr. Fielding stated that the Home Bank situation had no features which called for comment at the present time.

The view of the Finance Department is understood to be that official investigation of the bank's affairs is now being conducted by the Curator, and, pending a report from him, there is no need of action by the Government.

The whole question is believed to have been up in the Cabinet, and the demand for Government action is being considered. As indicated, however, it is not thought in official circles that any action on the part of the Finance Department is likely at the present. Should later developments call for action, they will no doubt be dealt with when they arise.

STRIKES IN GREECE

ATHENS, Aug. 22. —(Canadian Press).—There is little prospect of the general strike which seemed likely when workers in a number of plants walked out on Saturday. Dissention has developed in the ranks of the strikers and the support of public opinion is lacking.

No newspapers are appearing because of strike of linotypers. The railways still are unaffected.

Sir William Meredith

Chief Justice of Ontario, who died this morning in Montreal.

MEREDITH LED IN OPPOSITION

Was Opponent to Government of Sir Oliver Mowat.

Chief Justice Sir William Meredith who died in Montreal last night, was born on a farm about eight miles from London, Ont., on March 31, 1840. He was one of a family of eight boys and four girls. He was called to the bar in 1861 and returned to London to begin the practice of his profession in partnership with Thomas Scatcherd, M.P.

In 1872 he began his political career, which lasted 22 years, when he carried a by-election in London for the Conservative party by a large majority. In 1875 he was created a King's Counsel. In 1878 Mr. Meredith succeeded Sir M. C. Cameron as leader of the Opposition, and for sixteen years thereafter he was the minority leader in the Legislature opposing Sir Oliver Mowat.

In 1894 he met his first reverse at the polls and decided to quit politics and devote the remainder of his life to the duties of the bench. He was appointed Chief Justice of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court of Ontario in 1913.

While in politics, he was the first to advocate manhood suffrage in 1875, and he is credited with being the earliest advocate in Ontario of compensation for injured workmen.

While it is true that the Conservative party in Ontario did not attain success under his leadership, commentators on conditions at that time point out that his task was an extraordinarily difficult one. Not long after he succeeded the late M. C. Cameron as leader of the Manitoba boundary award was made, and the agitation which immediately arose rendered his position an embarrassing one. The discussion between the two parties was a heated one, and opponents tried to cast upon him the onus of having supported the claims of the Dominion as against those of the province. He insisted after the rejection of the award by the Dominion Parliament that the question be submitted to the Privy Council, and the event ultimately proved his contention to have been correct, and the course proposed the proper one.

In the Disallowance agitation of 1882 he again appeared to be on the unpopular side. He, however, did not hesitate to affirm the conviction that a strong central Government was vitally necessary to a strong confederation and to deprecate any efforts on the part of Provincial Governments to weaken it for selfish ends. Throughout the reverses he sustained at the polls he never ceased to support this principle.

BANK DEPOSITORS MEET TO-MORROW

Letter Calling For Meeting is Signed by Solicitor of Lindsay.

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Depositors in the Home Bank, particularly those from outside Toronto, are being called to meet at the Walker House, Toronto, to-morrow to discuss the application being made to Osgoode Hall to place the bank in liquidation

The letter calling the meeting is signed by I. E. Weldon, solicitor, of Lindsay, who declares it to be the impression that the liquidation of the suspended bank at the present time would be against the best interests of the depositors.

REV. F. E. MALOTT IS VICTIM OF ACCIDENT

BELLEVILLE, Aug. 22.—Rev. F. E. Malott, formerly of Peterboro, suffered a bad fall on his shoulder yesterday afternoon in front of the City Hall when the bicycle he was riding came in collision with the side of an automobile which was moving in the same direction — to the north. Mr. Malott rose without assistance and was taken home by a motorist. He suffered considerable shock. The motor car was driven by Mr. T. H. Chambers.

NO LIKELIHOOD COAL SHORTAGE AS LAST YEAR

OttawaAuthorities Do Not Anticipate Abnormal Scarcity of Fuel in the Dominion

ALBERTA COAL $11

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Declaring that they foresee the time when the supply of American coal to Ontario will be cut off, and voicing the opinion that poor people of Ontario ought to be able to get coal in winter at a reasonable price, Sir George Filmer and H. O. Swarg, business men of Edmonton, are at present in Toronto for the purpose of making arrangements for Alberta household coal to be sold here at $11 a ton. "It is a sub-bituminous of high class lignite coal," said George Filmer. Analysis show it to be good coal and very fine for household use.

Statistics show that Ontario spends about $100,000,000 on American coal. I do not see why the Dominion should not have the benefit of some of that amount."

Watching Developments.

OTTAWA, Aug. 22.— (Canadian Press.)—Developments in the critical situation which has developed in the anthracite mining field of the United States are being closely watched by Federal fuel authorities, but there is a hesitancy to make any public statement at the present juncture. The general feeling, however, is that there is little likelihood of a repetition of the abnormal fuel scarcity of last year. Returns from the Bureau of Statistics show that anthracite has this year been moving into Canada at a greater rate than last. There has also been an increase in importations from the United Kingdom.

Framing a Report.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Members of the Federal Coal Commission were engaged to-day in framing a report to President Coolidge, fixing responsibility for the break between anthracite operators and miners, and outlining what steps they believe the government should take in event of the prospective strike on September 1st maturing.

Chairman Hammond, of the Commission, announced this would be the next step by the Commission after he, with Commissioner Neill, had conferred last evening with President Coolidge. He did not indicate definitely how long the drafting of a report would require, but there appeared the possibility to-day that it would be in the hands of the President before night.

OCTOBER WEATHER EASTERN CANADA

Power and Telegraph Lines Blown Down By North-Eastern Gale.

FREDERICTON, N.B., Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Power, electric light, telephone, and telegraph wires in this city and vicinity have been carried away, huge trees have been broken off, fences blown down and windows in buildings blown in by unusual gales which to-day followed a night of heavy rain. Weather conditions are abnormal, the temperature to-day being more like that of October than August, and it is feared that unusually heavy winds may do considerable damage to the apple crop.

In Montreal.

Fall weather struck Montreal this morning when a raging and icy north-eastern wind tore through the city, leaving a track of broken trees and blown down power wires in its wake.

27 PASSENGERS HURT IN JITNEY BUS CRASH

Strikes Auto Crossing Its Path, Jumps Curb and Plunges Into a Big Tree.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—An express jitney bus, carrying forty persons from the Hudson Tube station in Jersey City to Bayonne, crashed into a touring car at Hudson Boulevard and Kensington Avenue, Jersey City, veered across the curb to a sidewalk and brought up against a tree. Twenty-seven persons were injured, seven of them seriously.

Policeman Michael Burns of the Communipaw Avenue Station, on duty at the corner, was joined by men from the home-bound pedestrian crowd and untangled the mass of injured and frightened humanity packed in the shattered bus. The Sisters of St. Aloysius's Convent at Kensington Avenue and the Boulevard opened the convent and cared for those of the injured who were not taken to Jersey City Hospital in automobiles commandeered by policemen.

Blame for the accident fell on James N. Kelly, 22 years old, of 63 Grant Avenue, Jersey City, driver of the touring car, who, according to the police, attempted to turn west into Kensington Avenue after proceeding north in the Boulevard. He saw the bus coming rapidly south, the police said, but stepped on the gas and crossed the path of the heavier vehicle.

Bus Crashes Into a Tree.

The bus driver, Jesse Tafro, 22 years old, of 269 Danforth Street, Jersey City, threw his wheel over in an effort to avoid striking the touring car, but his bus had gathered such momentum that he could not stop it. The bus jumped the curb after side-swiping Kelly's car and plunged into a large tree. The radiator of the big machine was forced back into the bus.

With the crash came the shrieks of women passengers, the shattering of glass and splintering of wood. Policeman Burns, who witnessed the accident, ran into a store and sent for ambulances before going to the rescue.

Five of the injured were put into two private automobiles and taken to Jersey City Hospital. They were admitted to the hospital as two ambulances left on their way to the scene with Drs. Aquerino and Introcasso. On their arrival the physicians found that the convent sisters had converted the front parlors of their home, which is affiliated with St. Aloysius' Church, into a dressing station.

Both Drivers Arrested

Tafro, driver of the bus, suffered only a cut hand. Kelly did not require medical attention. Both were arrested and charged with atrocious assault.

The Canning of Peaches

Perhaps there is no fruit more satisfactory for canning than peaches. They retain their flavor and shape and keep so well that the canned peach is almost as acceptable as the fresh one.

For canning, clingstone peaches, not too ripe, are preferable; but for peach pickles, never. This thing of trying to eat a clingstone pickled peach is far from a pleasure. Clings have a finer, richer flavor and a firmer, finer grained flesh than frees; but unless firm to the touch they are too much of a pest to bother with. They must be canned by the open kettle method.

To prepare peaches for canning cut around the peach on the seam. Twist the halves apart and cut the stone from the half to which it clings. Pare and can, allowing 1 cup sugar to a quart can for peaches canned for pies or puddings, and 2 cups for peaches canned for table use.

Cold Pack Peaches.

Use freestone peaches. Wash and dip in boiling water for two minutes. Dip in cold water and slip skins. Cut in halves and remove stones. Pack in sterilized jars to within ½ inch of the top. Fill with sirup and half seal. Put in hot water bath. The water must cover jars by at least two inches.

Process for twenty minutes, counting the time when the boiling begins. Remove from boiler, finish sealing and cool quickly. Peaches are usually canned in a medium sirup: 3 cups sugar, 3 cups water. Boil four minutes.

Pickled Peaches.

Four pounds peaches, 2 cups cider vinegar, 3 cups sugar, 1 teaspoon ground cloves, 2 teaspoons ground cinnamon, 1 teaspoon ground allspice.

Tie spices in a small muslin bag. Wash peaches and wipe off fuzz. Stick two whole cloves in each peach. Steam peaches till tender but not soft. Put peaches in a large crock. Make a sirup of the vinegar, sugar and spices. Pour over peaches. Let stand over night.

In the morning let fruit simmer in vinegar sirup until fruit is tender and transparent. It will take about an hour. Pack in sterilized jars, fill to overflowing with the sirup and seal.

Peach and Orange Marmalade.

Twenty-four peaches, 6 oranges, sugar.

Scald peaches and slip skins. Remove stones. Slice peaches. Wash oranges and cut in thin slices, rind and all. Combine fruit and weigh. Put one-half cup water in preserving kettle. Add fruit and as many pounds of sugar as there were pounds of fruit. Boil until thick, stirring to prevent burning. Pour into sterilized pint jars and seal.

Peach Butter.

Scald peaches and slip skins. Remove stones. Put in preserving kettle with just enough water to prevent burning. Cook until peaches are tender, stirring to prevent sticking. Rub through a wire sieve and measure pulp. Put fruit in preserving kettle and add as many cups of sugar as there were cups of fruit. Bring to the boiling point and boil fifteen minutes, or longer if a stiff butter is desired. Stir constantly with a long-handled spoon.

When the butter is nearly "done" it sputters and splashes and will burn one's hands if the spoon is not long enough. Pour into sterilized pint jars and seal. This makes a light-colored butter that is truly delicious.

PULP EXPORTS SHOW BIG GAIN FOR THE YEAR

United States Imports More Pulpwood From Canada Than Other Countries Do.

THE FIGURES.

OTTAWA, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press).—The United States imported 366,986 cwt of wood pulp from Canada during the month of July at a cost of $566,896 it is shown in a report dealing with the industry compiled at the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The United Kingdom was the next greatest purchaser taking 238,132 cwt. and France stood third on the list with 75,000 cwt to her credit.

Total exportations for July stood at 680,934 cwt. compared with 795,520 in June, 537,453 in July of 1922 and the exportations for the twelve months ending with July totalled 6,769,932 as compared with 6,083,926 for the corresponding period of 1921-22. Continuing comparisons of figures for these periods the report shows that 3,313,997 cwt of wood pulp sulphite bleached was exported during the twelve months ending with July at a value of $14,093933 as compared with 2,423,819 and a value of $10,020,726 in the corresponding period.

Figures for wood pulp sulphite unbleached also show an increase in quantity and value for the period covered by the report. During the twelve months which closed with July, 4,740,775 cwt of this product was exported and brought $12,110,477 as against 3,481,650 cwt., in the preceding period and a value of $9,737,935.

Rise in the Basis of Gold in Canada.

OTTAWA, Ont. Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press).—A slight fall in the circulation of Dominion notes and a slight rise in the ratio of the gold basis of notes are indicated in the statement as to circulation and specie for July issued by the department of finance. The total circulation of Dominion notes and specie at the end of July was $233,774,961 as compared with $234,146,433 at the end of July; while the value of the gold held against Dominion notes at the end of last month was $121,136,091 as against $121,025,725 at the end of June. The percentage of gold held against notes, therefore, rose from 51.7 to 51.8 from June to July. The circulation of Dominion notes issued against approved securities under the finance act was 76,056,544 for July and for June it was 76,400,866.

Had Insufficient Funds Is Now Under Arrest.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Aug. 21. — (Canadian Press.)—Alleged to have obtained goods to the value of approximately $27.00 by false pretences, H. L. Waldon, whose business is given as managing director of the Pan-American Projector Company, said to be capitalized in the Province at $1,500,000 is held by the police. The alleged offence is said to be the issuance of cheques for printing bills, insufficient funds being at the bank to meet them. In police court yesterday morning he was remanded for one week.

Waldron's firm proposed manufacture motion pictures and advertised for prospective actors and actresses who deposited $10 each for a "try-out" and a photograph the police say.

FRENCH STATE GERMANS ARE GOING TO WORK

Large Numbers of Workmen Have Taken Employment Under the French Authorities.

NEAR A CRISIS.

DUESSELDORF, Aug. 22. Canadian Press. — The belief was expressed in French circles here yesterday that the constant fruitless bickering between the German work men in the Ruhr and their employers over the question of wages, may result in the desertion of large numbers of the workmen to the French side in the Ruhr struggle. As an example of the fruit the dissatisfaction is bearing, the French cite the fact that 27 German railroad men took employment with the French railway regime on Monday.

A similar restlessness is reaching a crisis according to the French, among other classes of the workers, particularly the miners, who have been told by the mine owners that their wages cannot be increased because even now the price of German coal is almost double that of the English product. The miners nevertheless are continuing at many places to agitate for higher wages and intimating that if their condition becomes much worse they may try the French as employers.

So far no such action has been reported among the miners, but the French profess to see in such threats the promise of a favorable development for them if the situation of the miners becomes aggravated.

GIRL HOLDS JOB AT ENGINEERING

Another Pet Monopoly of Man Is Usurped By Woman.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 22.—It's a lot more fun to run turbines and dynamos, and study and operate machinery than it is to clerk in a store or teach school.

So announces Miss Clare Nicolet, 22-year-old mechanical engineer in the big power plant of the Kansas City Power & Light Company.

Mrs. Nicolet, without losing any of her feminine charm when off duty is as stern and efficient a mechanical engineer during working hours as any man.

It's A Climb.

Weighing only 95 pounds and not as tall as the average, she finds it neccessary to use a stepladder more than men. Otherwise, she is on an equal plane with them, she believes.

"The men in the power plant treat me with respect," she explains. "At first they were inclined to doubt my ability, but, after I had shown that I knew machinery, they put me on a level with themselves."

Miss Nicolet wears overalls when at work. Overalls and knickers on women no longer attract much attention, she says.

Hard to Start.

MissNicolet from girlhood interested herself in machinery. But she had trouble convincing others in her sincerity. Authorities at the University of Illinois were skeptical, but bowed to her desire for engineering as her career.

Her debut in the Kansas City power plant also was difficult, but she showed her employers and fellow employees what she knew and could do. Now she's in charge of certain units of the plant and can hold her job as long as she wants it, her superiors say.

"Of course, you get a little greasy in your work, but that's part of the fun," the young girl engineer remarks. "Then, when working hours are gone and you get into more dainty garments, you feel fine."

THREE BANKERS OF PROMINENCECALLED

Home Bank Failure Will be Investigated by Highest Banking Talent.

TORONO, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press).—Three Canadian bankers, whose reputation and record are written all over the country, were yesterday named by Canadian Bankers' Association to join with Curator A. B. Barker in the probe ordered to find out what is the true state of affairs at the Home Banks of Canada, which suspended payment last Friday night.

The bankers, who will be associated with Mr. Barker as an advisory committee, are: Clarence A. Bogert General Manager of the Dominion Bank A. E. Phipps, general manager of The Imperial Bank of Canada, and H. F. St. Jones, Assistant General Manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce. They are men of reputation, and depositors, shareholders, and creditors will look to them to uncover everything that contributed in any way to the collapse of the banking institution.

The three bankers called in yesterday will act very much as do inspectors named by the bankruptcy court, when a business house goes into liquidation, or proceedings are taken to wind it up.

Big Game Plentiful in Northern Ontario.

MONTREAL, Aug. 22.— (Canadian Press.)—From reports received by the Canadian National Railways headquarters here, it would appear that big game is plentiful along the lines of the Transcontinental and prospects for the hunting season, particularly in Northern Ontario, are exceptionally good. Harry N. Michael of Homestead, Pa., has just returned from the north country and has reported that west of Cochrane, at Pagura, and in the vicinity of Kowkash, Oghalla and Smith, he saw plenty of moose, red deer and black bear. Mr. Michael had been engaged in taking motion pictures of wild life in the Canadian woods.

HEAVY SALES OF BINDER TWINE

One Firm in Regina Has Already Sold Six Million Pounds—Heaviest Since 1915.

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press).—With the sole exception of 1915 the sales of binder twine in Saskatchewan are the heaviest in the history of the province and far ahead of last year, according to dealers. One firm has already sold six million pounds from the local branch This firm estimated a total consumption for the province this season at between fifty to sixty million pounds The price is down a half a cent a pound from last year's figures and the reduction over the past three years is seven cents a pound. The present average price is 13 1-2 cents.

Implement dealers also report a heavier demand for binders than was noted at this stage of the 1922 harvest, one of the best years in the history of the trade. At the same time they note a tendency among buyers to hold off purchases of threshing outfits. Officials of various companies believed sales of threshing outfits would become heavier later in the season, and that the year's sales would finally equal if not surpass those of 1922.

Manitoba in Favor of Voluntary Wheat Pool.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—That the farmers of Manitoba generally favor the launching of a campaign to establish a voluntary wheat pool, similar in constitution to that being set up in Alberta and Saskatchewan is the concensus of opinion of the twelve members of the Board of Directors of the United Farmers of Manitoba, who were in session all morning discussing the situation and the position of the organization as a result of the collapse of the Home Bank of Canada.

According to an announcement made when the Board adjourned for lunch, the question of finance was discussed and provision made for the future in this respect but to what extent and by whom was not disclosed.

Escaped Prisoner Is Still at Large.

SHERBROOKE, Que., Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press.)— John Cameron and Walter Simpson, who, together with Cowdick, broke away from the local jail last week, after making a vicious assault on the turnkey, are still at large. The local police department, successful in making the arrest and placing the miscreants in the provincial jail, are still hard at work on a number of different clues, although it is thought that the men are safely across the border by now. Two of the men were wanted in many of the largest cities of the Dominion.

Manitoba Farmers Are Not Overdrawn.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 22. — (Canadian Press.)—Reports published by a local newspaper Saturday that the United Farmers of Manitoba were overdrawn in their account with the Home Bank of Canada were denied yesterday by W. R. Wood, secretary, who also repudiated statements that the bank's failure would effect the financing of a wheat pool in this province.

"The United Farmers 'account in the Home Bank is not now and never has been overdrawn," declared Mr. Wood, "and there is no connection as far as I can discover between the failure of the bank and the wheat pool project."

British Harvesters Are in Need of Assistance.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—"A great many of the British harvesters are stranded here with not enough money to take them to the farms where they are to work," stated Captain W. Vaughan, Dominion secretary of the Imperial Veterans in Canada, here yesterday. Several men have already been given aid by the Imperial Veterans, and more are applying every day, he said.

Captain Vaughan ascribes this to the fact that the harvest workers were told they would need only $1 or $2 after paying their passage money, and he foresees a serious position for the men who were brought from the British Isles to help in the western provinces.

RESIGNATION OF THE PRESIDENT OF REICHBANK

Demands of the Socialists Have Forced Rudolf Havenstein to Resign — Need Financial Reform.

COLLAPSE OF MARK.

LONDON, Aug. 22.— (Canadian Press.)—Retuer's Berlin correspondent in a despatch last night credits Socialist parliamentary quarters with the statement that Rudolph Havenstein will resign shortly as head of the German Reichsbank. Havenstein is said to have been summoned to meet President Ebert and Chancellor Stresemann.

For several weeks there have been insistent demands by the United Socialists for the retirement of Herr Havenstein as president of the Reichsbank and managing directors of the institution on the ground that they have failed to devise financial reform measures which the Socialists believe would have prevented the mark's collapse.

Vorwaerts the Socialist organ on Aug. 17 declared it was intolerable that the Reichsbank administration methods could be pursued and persons allowed to remain in office "in face of the distrust of almost the entire Reichstag and wide circles of the German people." It added that unless Haveinstein and Otto von Glasenapp, vice-president of the Reichsbank, tendered their resignations within three days the Social Democratic party would demand the immediate convening of the Reichstag to deal with the matter.

Herr Havenstein has been head of the Reichsbank since 1908.

MICHIGAN TO REDUCE ITS WHEAT ACREAGE

Survey Indicates Cut of 15.5 Per Cent. This Fall.

LANSING, Mich., Aug. 22.—Michigan farmers will reduce their acreage of wheat 15.5 per cent. according to a survey completed by Verne H. Church, Federal statistician, and L. Whitney Watkins, State Agricultural Commissioner.

An inquiry relative to the acreage of wheat and rye to be sown this fall shows an intended reduction of 15.5 per cent. in wheat and 9 per cent. in rye, a report issued today declares.

The survey was undertaken in co-operation with the Federal Government at the suggestion of many farmers that they could better regulate their planting if they could be informed in advance as to the probable acreage.

THRESHING COMMENCED.

BRANDON, Man., Aug. 22. — (Canadian Press.)—Threshing in the Douglas district commenced Monday and first returns show a yield of 15 bushels to the acre, with the grade registering number 3 northern.

WORK REFUSED TO HARVESTERS FROM BRITAIN

Cannot Find Work Because They Lack Experience — Men Say They Were Brought Here Under False Pretences.

MUST WORK 30 DAYS.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Because they have had no experience in farm work, British harvesters have been refused employment by western Canadian farmers, and many of them who left here last week are now en route to Winnipeg, making their way back as best they can, and badly in need of assistance, according to the Winnipeg Tribune. The men, according to the story told the newspaper representative, said advertisements had been posted in the Old Country asking for 50,000 harvest hands, and that it was clearly stated that "no experience" was necessary. Now they charge they were brought to Canaad under false pretences.

"We have been induced under false pretences to come to Canada, and many of us gave up good jobs in the Old Country to come to this country," declared David Hendry, of Jamestown, Dumbarton, Scotland, who acted as spokesman for a party of the Britishers who returned yesterday from Carnduff, Sask. "The contract we signed to get the benefit of the special fare stipulates that we must do 30 days' work on farms in order to be entitled to the special rate back to England. We are willing to work, but we cannot fulfill the contract because the farmers will not give us work."

Hendry declared the farmers at Carnduff refused to hire them. The town clerk, after failing to get them positions, telephoned to the Employment Bureau at Regina, and, according to Hendry's story, an official there said: "The C. P. R. brought them out here and let the C. P. R. feed them." Others in the party corroborated the story. One man got a position near Portage la Prairie but was dismissed after working a day and a half.

While no official statement was available from railway officials here, some said the complaint of Hendry was not entirely correct, and, as far as they knew, no advertisements in the Old Country called for men without experience.

Empress of Scotland Laid Up For Repairs.

SOUTHAMPTON, Aug. 22. — (Canadian Press.)— The starboard engine of the Canadian Pacific line steamer Empress of Scotland, was disabled through striking a submerged wreck on the voyage from Hamburg to Southampton. The vessel has been docked here. She will be unable to proceed for Quebec to-day.

NEGOTIATIONS TO PREVENT STRIKE ENDED ABRUPTLY WHEN OFFICIALS OF THE UNIONS LEFT THE MEETING

Secrecy Maintained Regarding Menonites

WINNIPEG, August 22. Canadian Press. — An official of the local Dominion Immigration Department, when asked as to the movement of Mennonites, through Winnipeg Free Press yesterday afternoon, he did not know why secrecy was being asked in the matter, but that such was the case. Members of the staff of the Canadian Pacific Railway were also requested by the Government to suppress any information relating to the arrival of Mennonites in the province, the paper says.

SIR W. R. MEREDITH DIED LAST NIGHT

Chief Justice of Supreme Court of Ontario Passed Away While on Vacation

MONTREAL, August 22. Canadian Press. — Sir William Ralph Meredith, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Ontario, died last night at the Royal Victoria Hospital here, in his 84th year, following a week's illness, which developed while he was spending a vacation on the Maine coast with members of his family.

At that time Sir William was apparently in the best of health, looking well and taking an active part in all the attractions of the sea, including bathing. Owing however to some intestinal complications, it was deemed advisable to seek medical and surgical treatment, and he was therefore removed to the Royal Victoria Hospital, where he was placed under the care of Dr. C. B. Keenan, Dr. David Mackenzie and Dr. C. F. Martin.

It soon became evident that the condition of the patient was cause for some apprehension and a surgical operation was found necessary.

Although losing strength daily Sir William Meredith remained conscious and clear of intellect, maintaining until the last his usual courage and cheerfulness.

When the end came there were with him Lady Meredith, his daughter, Mrs. C. W. Tramsey, Toronto, Chief Justice R. M. Meredith, of London. Ont., and Sir Vincent and Lady Meredith of Montreal.

In the passing of Sir William Ralph Meredith, Canada loses one who was accounted as one of the ablest jurists in the Province of Ontario, and who had played a very prominent part in the affairs of the province and of the Dominion at large as a public man who had served in legislative life and on numerous commissions, which had to investigate and make recommedations on matters of public welfare.

Operators Unwilling to Concede Any Part of the Demands For Wage Increase and the Union Will Not Submit Its Demands to Arbitration — Coal Strike on Sept. 1 Is Now Almost Certain.

MINERS ARE CONFIDENT.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Aug. 22. —(Canadian Press). —Negotiations for a new wage contract in the anthracite industry ended abruptly today, leaving unrelieved the prospect of a suspension of hard coal mining in the U.S. Sept. 1.

Miners union officials who walked out of the joint meetings, said the efforts toward a peaceable adjustment of the conflict on the part of the industry itself had terminated because the operators were unwilling to concede any part of the demand for increased wages made by men. The operators asserted that the breaking point was the unwillingness of the union to submit its demands to the test of arbitration. Both sides, however, assented to the submission of a report on the situation to the United States Coal Commission, through James A. Gorman, secretary of the Joint Conference.

Neither group looked for any prevention of a protracted industrial struggle in the hard region after Sept. 1, by any other means than government intervention, through S. D. Warriner, chairman of the Operators' Policy Committee declared he "never lost hope" for peace.

John L. Lewis president of the United Mine Workers, made no attempt to gloss over the prospect, as he gave out a brief summary of what had preceded the sudden conclusion of the wage conferences, which began Monday.

"Time for mincing words has gone by," he said. "The mine workers are prepared to enter an industrial contest Sept. 1 and to administer to the operators the most complete trouncing of their career. Since the anthracite operators intended never to recede or compromise on any point of working conditions or wage matters except after a defeat in fight, our people will go into a fight.

"We make no request to the coal commission. We look for no help from any agency, governmental or otherwise. Our people have tried our arbitration; we never get the offer to have issues settled by it unless we are strong enough to win without it. But the miners workers have always found reason for dissatisfaction with arbitration awards in the past.

"Today Mr. Warriner told us that the operators 'would not and could not' grant any wage increases Sept. 1. There isn't any purpose in further negotiation after that. We feel that the exorbitant and unwarranted profits now taken in the industry would allow wage increases without any increase in the cost of coal to the consumer. But regardless of that, suspension of anthracite coal production will automatically ensue in the hard region on the morning of Sept. first."

Mr. Lewis reviewed the history of recent attempts to reach a settlement of wages and contract conditions and the coal commissions intervention. He remarked that the union's willingness to let the mines continue operation had been covered in a proposal made to the government agency in New York last week. It hinged on the agreement of the operators to install the "check-off" system of collecting union dues; to accept the conclusion that a wage increase was necessary; and to abolish any other than eight-hour day employment. That was the limit of concession the mine workers could make he insisted adding that "neither the coal commission nor the operators have paid any attention to the proposal."

Mr. Warriner, after the break-up gave a slightly different account of the day's proceedings, insisting that the split came "simply and soley on the question of arbitration." As a last move in the joint session, he said, the operators had renewed the offer to arbitrate every point in dispute, to keep the mines running, and to make wage advances retroactive in case they were awarded later than Sept. first.

"Mr. Lewis told us further negotiations would be futile," he declared "Yet what more, in the name of reason, can employers offer in order to avert a contest?"

A MISCHIEVOUS POLICY.

The Toronto Trades and Labour Council's resolution proposing the raising of a strike fund for political purposes through the medium of a levy upon the union membership in Canada is not finding favour even in labour circles, nor is there any reason why it should.

The Dominion Trades and Labour Congress, according to an announcement by President Tom Moore, will vigorously oppose the resolution, following the policy of moderation which has enabled the Congress to repeatedly prevent the endeavour of extremists to upset the progress of labour.

A political levy could not hope to succeed in Canada; such a principle has caused great damage to the cause of British unionism and has been proven to be impracticable and unwise, representing a heavy drain upon union funds without offering any adequate return for the outlay.

In the best interest of labour as well as in the general interest, the Examiner feels confident that President Moore is taking a sound stand in deciding to oppose the ill-considered and inopportune motion sponsored by the Toronto body.

There is no chance for such a plan to get anywhere in this country, because it starts on a false basis and if adopted would be certain to end in only one way—disappointment.

But it will not be adopted so long as moderation rules the higher council of labour.

THE HOME BANK.

There is an inclination on the part of some newspapers to characterize the failure of the Home Bank as poor advertising for Canada, indicating as they try to point out that the general economic and financial position of this country is not as sound as it should be.

The Examiner does not believe that the suspension of the bank indicates anything of the kind.

It seems, so far as can be judged now, to have been brought about by unbusinesslike management.

The bank apparently made doubtful loans and investments, and as a result of reposing its resources in dubious security has come a cropper, just as many a business enterprise has for similar reason failed.

There is no mystery about it—the thing could have happened at any time and bears little relation to general conditions.

For the patrons of the Home Bank who are losers by the failure there will be sympathy, but they have at least the satisfaction of knowing that the extent of their loss is limited by the laws of Canada—it could under other conditions have been quite easily larger.

There will be a demand, of course, as a result of the failure for further protection in the way of Government safeguards, and doubtless there is need for more adequate restrictions, and eventually they will be provided.

No reason, however, exists for fearing any widening circle of consequences as a result of the failure, which, as has been pointed out, had little relation with general business conditions and in which there is no threat against other financial enterprises.

It was the Home Bank that failed—not Canada.

THE FIRE WASTAGE.

The suspicion that the fire in the Wawa Hotel, Lake of Bays, in which eight lives were snuffed out, was caused by the action of a careless smoker in tossing away a cigar or cigarette stubb gives point to the address given the Provincial Federation of Fire Fighters at their recent convention by Mr. George F. Lewis, the Deputy Fire Marshal of Ontario.

There was nothing new in what Mr. Lewis said, beyond a series of new statistics that should be startling, but doubtless won't be, judging by the indifference with which such figures are usually greeted.

Mr. Lewis declared that the fire losses for Ontario during the first six months of 1923 were practically 50 per cent. greater than in 1922.

Barn fires increased in number by 90 and in amount by $162,986.

Fires in dwellings showed a jump of 885 in number and in amount of $283,272.

There were 80 more fires in stores, and the damage done showed an increase of $1,411,219.

Similarly, factory fires were more numerous by 67 and in amount increased by $1,327,206.

Altogether there were 1,122 more fires in the Province in the period from January to July, 1923, than there were in the same half year last year, and the damage done showed an increase of $3,184,683.

Mr. Lewis remarked last week that "some dire tragedy" must occur before people are brought to their senses.

Was the Wawa fire such a disaster, or, as a contemporary points out, will the careless smoker still throw his lighted cigarette and cigar ends to one side, will unlighted matches be thrown about loosely, will camp-fires continue to be left unextinguished and electric irons left with the connection still on?

A PLEA FOR PEAT.

The Provincial Government's reported intention of discontinuing its assistance to the peat industry in Ontario is disappointing to those who believe that the developments accomplished during the last few years should not be abruptly terminated.

Uncertainties in the anthracite coal market, with the prevailing high price, and a threatened scarcity of supplies, are substantial reasons advanced by those who contend that peat fuel may be economically substituted for hard coal in some of its special uses. For domestic furnaces during part of the winter, and for grates and cook stoves at all seasons, it is recommended as a cheap and valuable fuel not only in emergencies resulting from under production of hard coal but also under conditions of its normal supply.

The prospects of the peat industry in this province are summarized in the recent interim report of the Dominion Fuel Board as follows:

"The Board is of the opinion that peat should be utilized to supply part of the fuel needs of Central Canada, and if the results accomplished last year at Alfred (Ontario) are not sufficient to induce private capital to engage in the production of this fuel, further encouragement should be given the industry by the governments concerned."

The supply of peat in Central Canada is estimated at 9,300,000,000 tons equivalent to 5,400,000,000 tons of coal. Seven bogs within economic shipping distance of Toronto are said to be capable of yielding 26,500,000 tons.

Experiments at Alfred have been progressively successful, and a superior grade of peat was produced there last year at a cost that permitted its retail sale at $10 to compete with hard coal at $16.50 a ton.

The Ontario and Dominion Governments have both supported this development, and investigations into the possibilities of this industry have cost one-third of a million dollars, an expenditure that does not warrant the abandonment of the enterprise which while still depending upon subsidy is strongly advocated by the Dominion Fuel Board.

Premier Ferguson himself started the Peat Committee Investigation, and in Opposition supported its work. It is contended that he now has full opportunity of vindicating his judgment and benefitting his own province by further development of its peat resources to the end that private capital will be attracted to this industry for its permanent and profitable establishment.

Had the Dominion Fuel Board brought in an adverse report, the Provincial Government would have been fully justified in withdrawing its support from the peat industry, and there would probably have been no regrets that the plant at Alfred has remained idle all this year; but in the face of the uncertainties of the coal supply and of the hopeful opinions expressed by the Dominion Fuel Board the peat industry appears to merit a better fate than complete desertion.

The investment at Alfred and its results of last year strengthen the claim for perseverance in the development of Ontario's peat resources.

THE UGLY SIDE OF CREDIT.

The physician is guided in his diagnosis of disease by symptoms. When he finds certain abnormalities, especially pressure upon vital organs, he prescribes remedies which are meant to restore normal conditions. That is the basis of our modern system of medicine. We may very well take a lesson from it in the consideration of national, and community ills. First, let us clearly and accurately gauge the superficial indications, and then our logical course is to apply a cure which is sound and promising. In doing this we need not talk in any foolish or unwarranted way about "the whisper of death." Panic in a sick-room is certain to do no good, and it may do incalculable harm.

In a bulletin just issued by the Royal Bank, the misuse of credit is identified as the cause of feverish conditions in the Canadian body politic. From such a well-informed quarter an opinion on a matter of that nature cannot be lightly regarded. Here is the statement:

"An analysis of the progress which Canada has made since the close of the world war gives rise to certain well-founded misgivings with regard to a vitally important phase of our economic development, namely, the borrowing and spending of our municipal, civic and Provincial Governments.

"Not infrequently, the public press makes favorable comment upon the ease with which Provincial Governments, municipalities and cities obtain funds in foreign markets. No one would, for a moment, dispute the advantage of high credit standing, yet there is another side of the question and less consideration generally is given to this aspect, namely, to the danger which such ease in borrowing may involve. Speaking generally, one of the quickest methods of bringing an individual to financial ruin is by allowing him credit beyond that which he is warranted in having. A municipality or even a Province is not fundamentally different from an individual in this respect, ample evidence of which is provided by a glance over Canadian experience. Our railroad history probably furnishes the most obvious examples. The availability of unlimited credit for the construction of a mileage adequate to the needs of a population far in excess of that of the Dominion, produced consequences which are too well known to require comment. In precisely the same manner, if possibly to a lesser degree, many of our municipalities and cities have been able to borrow far beyond their legitimate requirements, and have undertaken much too ambitious projects. As a consequence, present prosperity is seriously interfered with by excessive taxation for the service of the debts, and, in at least a few cases, Canadian towns and cities have been forced into a state of bankruptcy."

It is the business of a bank to watch such symptoms. It holds constantly the pulse of the patient, and is on the alert for irregularities and signs of strain. In this instance we should be imprudent to ignore the warning of an important financial institution with respect to what our borrowing Parliaments, Legislatures and municipalities are doing. If they are going too far, and are interfering with prosperity, the people should know about it; for it is the people who will be the sufferers. All public liabilities are translated into taxes, and it is the tax result which appears to be causing alarm to the watchful banks. Two or three facts may help us to see the basis of this apprehension.

Since 1919 the debts of the various Provinces have increased by $335,895,200, or nearly 130 per cent. British Columbia heads the list with a growth of 239.1 per cent., and Ontario comes next with 236.5. This occurred co-incidentally with an addition of $1,280,251,739 to the debt of the Dominion. The municipalities were also busy issuing bonds. Ten of the leading cities, including Ottawa, added to their funded obligations by $85,616,153. The sum of all these increments is $1,701,763,092, or about $200 per head of the total population. Our entire national debt was less than one quarter of that sum ten years ago. The Provincial and municipal additions would account for $421,511,353, which might be regarded as having nothing to do with the war.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The "wheat pool" is by no means a certainty, but it looks like the main hope of the western grain growers.

If yesterday's rain was worth a "million dollars," to use the current expression, what would have been the value of a similar downpour three weeks ago?

Secretary Wallace of the United States Department of Agriculture declares that thousands of farmers across the line are facing bankruptcy because of the low price of wheat. Unfortunately, his description of conditions in the United States is duplicated in the Canadian West.

FARMERS and FINANCE

A generation ago the banking needs of the Canadian farmer were fairly simple. But today economic conditions make it advisable for him to co-operate more and more closely with his Bank.

In the Bank of Montreal the farmers of Canada have conveniently at their disposal complete banking facilities as well as the personal co-operation of experienced men.

STORIES OF ADVENTURE.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(Associated Press)—The summertime reader would rather have a true account of pirates or shooting seals in the Artic than an a love story, declares Nathan R. Levin, assistant librarian of the Chicago Public Library, who has been studying the tastes of the general reader for years.

"That does not mean that the love story has become unfashionable," Mr. Levin added. "It means rather that at vacation time everybody temporarily forgets his desire to get on in his own business or personal affairs and prefers to read about cinnamon-colored savages of the South Seas or trapping wombats in the wilds of Australia."

Your faith in Kellogg's Bran can never be misplaced—IT IS ALL BRAN!

Kellogg's Bran, cooked and krumbled, will permanently relieve the most severe cases of constipation because it is ALL BRAN—not a food mixture that cannot possibly have sufficient natural corrective properties. Once constipation gets into your system you must fight it to the finish. Kellogg's Bran is the weapon. It will win for you. Don't take half-way measures; don't temporize.

Kellogg's Bran is permanent relief for constipation if it is eaten regularly—at least two tablespoonfuls daily; in chronic cases, with each meal. And, Kellogg's is a taste-delight because it is delicious and comes to you as a highly palatable, desirable food, as well as a corrective.

You will greatly enjoy Kellogg's Bran as a cereal; its nut-like flavor improves any hot or cold cereal, and innumerable inviting bakery batches can be made with Kellogg's. Try some Kellogg's Bran pancakes. They're great! Or, raisin bread or gems! Kellogg recipes are printed on each package.

For health's sake, get the whole family eating Kellogg's Bran just as quickly as possible, because it is ALL BRAN and it will make over the health of every big and little member. Your physician will recommend Kellogg's Bran because it is positive and because it will sweep and cleanse and purify, and put color back into faded cheeks. It will help children grow big and strong; it will clear and tone and brace up the system of every one who eats it regularly. All grocers sell Kellogg's Bran because its use is universal!

COBOURG AND DISTRICT

COBOURG, Aug. 22. — Quite a number of young men from this locality have gone out West in the harvesters' excursion to help with the crop there—so many in fact that a number of farmers here are left short-handed at a time when they most need help.

Does Not Mind a "Spill."

A Ford car that was returning to Port Hope from Cobourg, conveying four people, ran into the ditch near the Home for the Aged. None of the occupants, fortunately, were seriously hurt. The car was soon righted by the united strength of the four people, and all were soon speeding along, none the worse for the mishap. The car, true to type, could not be kept in the background.

The Lalla Rookt Grotto excursion here from Rochester, N.Y., has become an annual established event, and the one on Tuesday passed off very pleasantly, notwithstanding adverse weather conditions. Quite a large crowd came over. Games of different kinds were played on the boat. Upon their arrival here the excursionists were met by the band.

Real Estate Transfers.

Samuel Clarke has sold a house and lot on Spring Street to Mr. Wm. H. Russell.

Eliza Robinson has sold part of Lot 7, Con. A, Handimand Township, to David and Emma Sylvester.

John Wilson has sold a house and lot in the village of Bewdley.

Mr. David Redden, of Seymour Township, is stated to have purchased Mr. John Mack's farm in Rawdon Township.

Farmers' Clubs Hold Picnic.

The Farmers' Clubs from Colborne, Brighton, Smithfield, Hilton, and Trenton held an excursion and grand gathering of the tillers of the soil at Twelve O'clock Point, at the entrance of the Murray Canal. The weather was ideal, and a great many took advantage of the opportunity of enjoying such a trip. The spot is an ideal one for picnic parties, and is accordingly quite popular.

Bathing was one of the big attractions, and the merry-go-round for the kiddies continued on the go all day.

Brockville brought in a large number of people, who came on a Presbyterian Church excursion from Deseronto.

At 2 p.m. the first fox trot was struck up, and the hall was filled to capacity in a very short time. Dancing began again in the evening at 8.30. There was much social converse among old friends for those who did not care to dance.

Altogether it was one of the very best reunions ever staged.

Church Union Discussed.

On the Camborne circuit and in the vicinity there is considerable talk going on about church union and over the probable division of the charges on the circuit and amalgamation with other churches. The circuit consists of Camborne, Plainville, Gore's Landing and Zion. It is quite generally conceded that the two churches at Coldsprings, the Congregtional and Presbyterian, will remain open for a time at least, and with Camborne and Bethel Grove form one cricuit.

Plainville, Gore's Landing and Harwood may form another circuit. But all of this is principally speculative as yet.

On Sunday last, Rev. Dr. Thomas, secretary of Social Service and Evangelism, preached on Camborne circuit.

Wayne—Parker.

The marriage took place on Saturday at the Baptist parsonage, Rev. J. N. Norton officiating, of Miss Mildred A. Parker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred G. Parker, Cobourg, to Mr. Earl H. Wayne, of Oshawa. The bride wore ivory canton crepe and was attended by Mrs. S. T. Swain as matron of honor. Mr. Swain was best man. The bride and groom left for a motor trip.

Yelland—Bryant.

At Toronto, on Aug. 11, Mr. Lloyd Yelland, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Yelland, Cobourg, was married to Miss Delia M. Bryant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Bryant, Oshawa.

HAPPIER, HEALTHIER WOMEN

by thousands are known to exist in this country because they have been relieved from pain and suffering by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Science in surgery and electricity have advanced greatly during the past fifty years, but treatment of disease by old-fashioned root and herb medicines has never been improved upon. The leader of them all is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which after fifty years of success is today recognized as the standard remedy for female ills and sold everywhere for that purpose. Replies to a questionnaire recently sent out to 50,000 women by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. of Cobourg, Ont. proved that it benefits 98 out of every 100 women who try it. Isn't this a marvellous record for any medicine to hold?

HEROES OF WAR STILL JOBLESS

King's Roll Scheme Fails To Obtain Employment For Men in England.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—The King's Roll may embody a fine ideal, but ideals can't always be made to work in industry, so the King's Roll is being repudiated. There are 38,250 disabled ex-service men remaining without employment, and captains of industry are declaring they have no use either for the King's Roll or the men.

Thus, the great voluntary effort initiated by King George three years ago to secure the absorbtion in industry of men injured in the war, gives promise of collapsing as far as its adoption in the industrial world is concerned. There are many reasons for this set-back, psychological as well as industrial. When the scheme was started, the after-war trade boom was at its height and promises to give employment to 5 per cent. disabled men, which is all the scheme requires to enable firms to put up the seal approved by the King, were readily given.

Report of Council.

Then came the slump. Many big business failures were scheduled, and conditions led to business men generally feeling more actually than ever before the effects of high taxation. The demand for economy involved curtailment of staff. King's Roll promises were abrogated. It was not reckoned they were to hold good at the direct expense of the employers, and business has not been sufficiently attractive since to warrant employers entertaining any idea of renewing the obligation. In point of fact they have refused to do so.

This situation is made clear in an interim report of the King's Roll National Council.

With regard to the severely disabled men, the Council holds that the Government should not delay granting more effective assistance to institutions catering for these men, and the recommendations they have scheduled are:

1. That the Ministry of Labor should revise the system of grants—(a) by obtaining power to provide for an increasing maintenance grant and, wherever necessary, a training grant; (b) by obtaining power to provide for a capital grant; (c) by announcing definitely the terms on which a grant may be obtained.

2. The grants should be based: (a) on the needs of the undertaking; (b) on the amount of support available from other sources; (c) on the fact that new workmen will frequently require training.

3. In making grants consideration should be given to the case of men of low pensionable assessment, but high industrial disability, as well as those men whose assessment for pension is at a high rate.

4. The Government Contracting Department should be instructed to give special facilities to these institutions for obtaining a share of Government contracts. King's Roll Committee should urge a similar policy on municipalities.

This probably represents the final effort in Great Britain of attempting to overcome, under voluntary regime, the problem which employment of the disabled ex-service men registers.

It was on the recommendation of a select committee of the House of Commons that the Council was established to further the interests of ex-service disabled men through the medium of the King's Roll scheme, and at practically its first meeting, in February, it ascertained that no less than 3,500 firms were at that period refusing to renew their undertaking. Things have not progressed in the meantime, regardless of the appeals made by Earl Haig and others. So, declares the Council:

"These figures generally support the contention of the select committee that the vitality of the roll is decreasing, and this indorses the necessity for the new campaign undertaken under the Council's auspices."

Little Progress Made.

It is a formidable organization the Council has the backing of, yet, notwithstanding extensive appeals. It has been unable to make material progress since the new campaign was started, last March. Apart from being able to command the support of the British Legion and its 2,500 branches in various parts of the country, 222 out of the 300 of the local authorities in England have set up special King's Roll committees. The central reserve strength of the movement is therefore immediately revealed in the local and country councils up and down the country.

Their position as civil authorities is clear. They are not up against the keen competition of commercialism. They come within quite a different category to the industrial concern. The taxpayers have to foot the bills of the municipalities, whereas the employer has to dive into his pocket book to make good any deficit, in addition to paying his taxes. Therefore, it is not surprising to find that 1,267 local Government authorities figure on the King's Roll, an increase of 54 since the campaign commenced. It is, on the contrary, surprising to find that 256 municipalities have flatly refused to indorse the scheme.

Many Are Handicapped.

Maybe the representatives on these bodies are business men who reckon they can not conscientiously commit the taxpayers to a policy they are not prepared to indorse in a private capacity, holding, perchance, that the disabled men should be amply remunerated by the Government to render their necessity to work to maintain life a negligible factor. But the problem is not so easily solved. The totally disabled are provided for. The bulk of these men are partially disabled, and, therefore, are handicapped in their chances of obtaining employment.

An effort is being made to force all municipalities to become party to the scheme. One member struck what he thought a bright idea. Why not a black list? But it was declared that would not do. The publication of a black list of local authorities who refused to subscribe to the scheme, it was held, could not be undertaken without causing hardship. Moreover, it would not contribute to the solution of the main problem. Moral suasion is the new move of the Council, but the moral end of it is probably open to different interpretation.

Local authorities have to spend vast sums of money annually on contracts for work placed with commercial undertakings, so it is hoped through the medium of these contracts to force the contracting firms to sign up the agreement with the King's Roll.

In other words, it is hoped to induce local authorities to formulate a policy under which they will declare to all contractors: "If you are not a member of the King's Roll it is useless to submit a contract for this job, because you won't get it."

At present there are only 208 municipalities which restrict their contracts to enrolled firms, while 167 declare they give the King's Roll firms preference commensurate with good money.

There are 2,821 local Government authorities in Great Britain, so the Council is fired with the ambition to force the ideas of all these authorities into the desired channel.

MEN OF RIPER YEARS MAKE GOOD STUDENTS

MONTEAGLE, Tenn., Aug. 22.—(Associated Press)—In the heart of the Tennessee mountains there is a school—the Du Bose Memorial School—where the students argue over the Pauline psychology while they sew buttons on their overalls; where a man chants Latin verbs to the swish of his broom, and the engineer at the sawmill talks classic Greek with his fellow workers.

Out in the truck garden cabbages are cultivated amid discussions of second century heresies, and fundamentalism versus modernism is threshed out over the milking of the cows. In one day these students buried the baby of a broken hearted mother, having first made the coffin, wrote Greek exercises, mended a wagon, and wound up by playing a winning game of baseball.

The school is an unique institution where men, long since past school age, but wishing to fit themselves for clerical orders, are trained for the ministry. They are poor men who come to this school, which is named after an Episcopal divine. There are two ex-sailors among them, one or two with army experience, some clerks, mechanics and farmers.

The school is co-operative. There are no tuition fees, and every one of the students works at some occupation about the farm and industrial plant for his keep and training. Rev. W. S. Claiborne, Archdeacon of the Episcopal Diocese of Tennessee, is the director of the work, immediately supervised by Rev. M. P. Logan, D.D., the warden.

Some of the men are married. The women sew, sweep, cook, mend, tend chickens, nurse any sick and are always busy. And all agree.

There are no hard and fast rules except that of co-operation. Perhaps never was a more uncertain adventure more self-sacrificingly translated into fact. Already men have gone out from the school and, in small spheres, become powers.

WEDDING BELLS

MACDONALD—JORY.

LAKEFIELD, August 22. — At 6.45 this morning in the Methodist church here, the marriage was solemnized by the Rev. C. S. Reddick, of Eva Mae, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Jory, and the Rev. Roy MacDonald. The young people were unattended.

The bride wore a suit of brown checked chiffon broadcloth, with brown hat trimmed with ostrich and brown shoes and stockings. Her bouquet was of ophelia roses, and maidenhair fern.

Mr. Kenneth S. Madill played Mendelssohn's wedding march, and during the signing of the register, Mrs. R. G. Madill of Ottawa, the bride's sister sang "Until."

The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large number of friends of the contracting parties.

Mr. and Mrs. MacDonald left on the 8.10 train for Toronto and Sarnia, en route to Meacham, Saskatchewan, where they will reside.

A large number of gifts, including several cheques and a beautiful linen table cloth, testified to the regard held for the young people by their many friends.

Last Wednesday evening a miscellaneous shower in honor of the bride was held at her home, when over fifty of her friends were present. The gifts were brought in, in a decorated wheelbarrow, by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Samuel Spence.

All Employees Share Profits and Control.

EMPORIA, Kans., Aug. 21. — (United Press). — William Allen White, head of the Emporia Gazette, has established American communism here in Kansas and has made it profitable.

A simple plan of taking everyone on the newspaper into partnership has reduced expenses to a minimum and made every man in the plant work vigorously not for the weekly pay check, but for the concern.

All of the employes, from the greenest cub and freshest "devil" to the boss himself, are members of the soviet. They not only share in the profits, but have an actual and powerful voice in anything that goes, on, from the political tone of the editorials to the buying of paper.

The plant is the practical application of theories long preached by White in his novels, editorials and magazines. He wasn't satisfied with just profit sharing.

"Unless employes have a part in the management of the business," he said, "profit sharing is only a farce. It is little better than a hike in wages, unless the workers help determine the policies and practices which makes the profits and losses."

So all the thirty-one employes have a vote. As a whole, they run the plant. For many years White stood out against the comic strip. They offended his newspaper ideals. Then in a meeting of the "soviet," the comic strip was recommended as a circulation builder. White vetoed it. It was passed a second and third time only to be vetoed again. The fourth time it was passed the editor gave in, and the increased street sales and home circulation proved the employes' contention.

Many problems are thus solved by the autocratic employes. There was the trouble of tardiness. A time clock was installed without the suggestion of the editor.

On a night between Christmas and January 1 of each year the Gazette force gathers at a dinner and at each plate is a check representing the employe's share in the fiscal profits. His share depends on the number of year's service on the force and upon the amount of profits.

Besides the profit sharing, to each ploye who has been with the Gazette a year White issues a certificate for $50. For those who have been employed more than a year, the certificates are not negotiable, but the employes receive interest on the amount varying from three to twelve per cent, according to the number of years service.

It is not an organisation for the betterment of living conditions of newspaper, according to William Allen White.

"There is nothing altruistic about it," he said. "It is slimy with self-interest. If contented cows give more and better milk, why shouldn't contented newspaper workers produce a larger per cent of cream."

SCIENTISTS COMING WITH MUSEUM RICHES

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—(Associated Press)—Four expeditions of curators in the service of science, who have been exploring uncharted wildernesses in several parts of the world, are expected to return soon to their home institution here, the Field Museum of Natural History. The Museum has seven parties in the field at present.

Dr. E. S. Riggs is penetrating the unknown interior of Argentina in search of prehistoric animals, declared by scientists to be a most perilous task. The investigator has to face hostile tribes, irresponsible workmen and the danger of climbing precipitous cliffs in search of specimens. Sometimes he must employ a small army to bring back his finds.

Dr Berthold Laufer, curator of the department of anthropology, is penetrating southern China in an effort to discover the century-old secrets of that land. He will make a study of the language and culture of strange aboriginal tribes said to have lived in China long before the Chinese came.

Dr. O. C. Farrington and a party is studying the diamond mines of Brazil. Dr. F. C. Cole is in Java, where he has been studying the customs and culture of the people. Contrary to the usual lot of the explorer, Dr. Cole is said by the curators to have been able to travel into the island's fastnesses by automobile with the greatest ease.

Dr. J. Allen Mason is in Colombia, where he has been studying the ancient civilization of that land, thought to have been destroyed centuries before the coming of the Spaniards. Another party is headed by Dr. W. H. Osgood, who will return soon from Peru and Chile, where he has been collecting rare tropical birds.

Please hold you breath during the coming elections in Ireland.

Scouring the Shores For a Missing Man.

SUDBURY, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press.) — Search parties are busy scouring the shore of Georgian Bay, between Point Aubaril and Key Harbor, for signs of Roy Smith, a Capreol man, who on Tuesday last left Point Aubaril in a gasoline launch and has not been heard of since.

Smith journeyed to Parry Sound on Saturday to get a motor boat which he had recently purchased. Nearing Point Aubaril the motor began to give trouble and Smith's companion, fearing that he would be delayed from reporting the following morning, left the boat to continue the trip by rail. No word has been received of Smith since and search has failed to show any sign of the boat or occupant.

SEE WORLD JOINED BY RADIO

By MILTON BRONNER

LONDON, Aug. 22. — A little room in which a few operators could sit, tap some keys and "talk" to every part of the civilized world. A little room in which magic would be worked annihilating space and time.

This as the wireless wonder dream discussed some 15 years ago between William Marconi, the wizard who invented wireless telegraphy and Godfrey Isaacs, the business genius who made Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company great. Unless all signs fail, the British government will shortly ratify a contract which will make this dream come true.

For 13 years Isaacs, who is a brother of Lord Reading viceroy of India, has given the rulers of Britain no rest. That dream haunted him and he haunted them.

He pounded away to make them see what a tremendous advantage in world business it would be to have a wireless chain encircling the globe. He waxed eloquent concerning the advisability of having all the great self-governing dominions linked up with London. He stressed the importance to Britain of having such communications in case of another world war.

Converted

And the other day a converted government announced in Parliament that it would probably sign up a contract for the creation of the wireless chain, the government and Marconi to pool their resources. The wireless telegraph service, with the British empire are to be conducted through stations provided by the company and the government in agreed proportions.

In the beginning the company is to provide two stations and the government one. Each station is to be maintained at the expense of the party providing it. The revenue from the stations is to be pooled and divided in agreed proportions, based upon the effective power of the station contributed by each.

The service is to be worked by the government through its post office operators. The rates are to be fixed by agreement and where ever possible they are to be lower than cable rates.

The government, after the plan has been worked for 10 years, is to have the right to buy the stations and work the empire service by itself.

World Center

Under this plan some place near London will be the wireless heart of the world. The great Canadian dominion will be reached by a direct line to Vancouver and another to Vancouver by way of Montreal. Still another Canadian connection will be between Glace Bay and England.

Africa will be reached by a line that will talk to Capetown in South Africa. Two mighty stretches will be covered between England and Melbourne in Australia, one direct, the other by way of India. And Melbourne will talk to Wellington, New Zealand, 1386 miles away.

The United States, Central and South America and the West Indies will be linked up with the Canadian plants. Asia will be linked up with India. Various African colonies will be able to talk with Capetown, and Australia will have communications across its continental expanse.

It will be the fourth time in history that the far-seeing British have encircled the globe. When coal became the great motive power, the British secured a chain of ports and harbors all over the world, where their trading vessels and their warships could coal under the British flag.

When the undersea cable was invented, the British hopped to it and established a net under the sea. Now that oil is the fuel of the future for ships, the British are establishing oil depots all over the world.

And lastly comes the wireless development.

ALLOWS PRISONER TO SET SENTENCE

Judge Who Knows the Court From Prisoners' Dock Originates System.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 22.—Cafeteria style justice!

Police Judge Joseph L. Heffernan has originated it here.

He permits prisoners to sentence themselves and their fellow offenders, too.

And why?

Well, he's said "Good morning judge" no less than a dozen times himself. He knows how it goes with the "erring brother."

Some folks don't put much stock in all this talk of environment being the influencing factor in crime. Heffernan does.

Gets New View.

That's why he lets the men from the lineup take his place. He wants to know how they treat their fellows in misfortune.

The experiment has proved successful. These prisoner-judges have been fair to their fellow offenders. And they've judiciously upheld the law. When sentences are necessary, they recommend them. Then the court officially imposes them.

"We're too much inclined to classify offenders as outcasts," Heffernan muses. "We view them as stigmatized beings, apart from and antagonistic to society. They're not. Society ought to have a sympathetic interest in them.

"Maybe I feel this more than some judges, because I've been in jail 12 times myself. My offenses, thank goodness, were minor ones, such as train riding. But in some sections of the country that's a high crime.

Sees Mercy Need.

"But did any judge every say to me: 'My boy, what is that hidden impulse that takes you away from a good home and a loving mother to roam over the face of the earth?'

"Not one, I was an offender, simply because I did not choose to stay in a rut a less adventurous society prescribed for me.

"When a man appears before me, I always ask him about himself, his home and his family, but above all about his work. What does he do for a living? That gives me a line on him.

"So far I have found few whose work I did not understand. I have worked in the steels mills, in railroad and construction camps, in pipe line and shovel gangs, in the galleys of Ohio River steamboats, in hotels from Atlantic City to Los Angeles. I have been a 'rough-neck' in the oil fields of Illinois and Oklahoma, and have sweated in the Mojave Desert and on the water front in San Francisco. I've been a bookkeeper and accountant, a newspaper man and a free-lance in Europe.

"Now I'm called upon to sit as judge overy my fellowman. And I'm thankful for the experience that has led me to understand their problems."

SCIENTIST TURN TO THE FIRST AMERICAN

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 22.—(United Press).—A real "cave-man" may have lived in prehistoric times in America, according to recent discoveries by a Smithsonian Institute investigator in Missouri.

Most everyone knows that, before the Indians, there were the mound-builders. But lack of any evidence of a real "primitive man," such as the Neanderthalers and the Cro-Magnons of Europe, has led geologists to believe that the Americas may be a newer contigent

Gerald Fowke, anthropologist, working under the direction of the Smithsonian Institute, however, has just returned from Stratman Cave, on the Gasconade River, in Maries County, with a flint cone from which arrow-heads had evidently been chipped, in a stratum many feet below the strata which carry evidences of the earliest Indians.

In the layer above the rock stratum in which the cone was found, Fowke found remains of what are thought to have been Indians, but of a more primitive type than any now known. The jaws were "prognathous," that is, the jaws protruded far forward from the head.

No other evidences of human activity were found in the stratum with the more ancient cone. Fowke said that examination by the ethnology experts of the Smithsonian had brought the statement that the cone, of "chert," a quartz-like stone, had undoubtedly been worked by humans. The chipping was quite regular.

"Nothing quite like it has ever been found at such a depth in this region, and the experts say it is doubtful if anything like it has been found in America," Fowke said.

There are hundreds of caves along the Gasconade in the Czarks, and Fowke has made excavations in many of them in recent years, in search of evidences of "the first American."

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

BOSSIE COW'S EAR

"Goodness, I was tired," he yawned.

"Anybody else lost?" asked the Twins when they had found Georgie Porgie Pee Wee and brought him back safely to Pee Wee Land under the burdocks.

"Well, I should say so!" answered King Snookums. "Jimmy Jumper went off riding on a grasshopper last night and hasn't been heard from since."

"Then we'll take our magic shoes and go and find him," said Nick. "Come on, Nancy."

So away they went.

First of all they went to the stubble field where the grasshoppers loved to play. And they asked all the grasshoppers if anybody had seen Jimmy Jumper, the lost Pee Wee boy.

"Yes, I did!" cried Stilty Springlegs, spitting tobacco juice on the ground beside him in his excitement. "He asked me to take him for a ride and I did. We had lots of fun jumping fences and playing leap-frog with the other grasshoppers, 'n' everything so I came home.

Next the Twins came to the pasture lot where the cows were.

"Did you see Jimmy Jumper anywhere?" Nancy asked Bossie Cow, who was chewing and chewing at nothing at all while she lay under a tree.

Bossie Cow shook her head before she answered. "No, I haven't, but if you get this bug out of my ear I'll help you hunt. It crawled in there last night just after milking time and I can't get it out—no matter how hard I shake my head."

"Sure we'll help you," cried Nick. "Now hold as still as you can while I get my lightning-bug flashlight. There! That's the way. Oh, my goodness alive! Look who's here!"

No wonder he was surprised. For out crawled Jimmy Jumper Pee Wee right out of Bossie Cow's ear!

"Goodness I was tired," he yawned. "That was the nicest, warmest, softest bed I've had for a coon's age!"

Peterkin and the Pole.

"Anybody else lost?' 'asked Nick.

King Snookums was just about to say no, that his subjects were all accounted for, when in rushed Mrs. Peterkin Pee Wee.

"Peterkin's gone!" she cried. "He got so warm, he said he was going to find the North Pole and off he started at ten o'clock this morning. Now it's two and he isn't home yet and I've had his dinner waiting since twelve o'clock. I had such a nice dinner, too! Apple seed pudding with dandelion juice and ant's egg omelette."

"We'll find him," said Nancy. "Don't you worry any more. But as he went away in daylight he couldn't have been riding a lightning bug."

"No, I forgot to tell you," said Mrs. Peterkin Pee Wee. "He was riding a fly."

"Then I believe I know exactly where to find him," said Nancy firmly. "We'll look in all the kitchens."

"But the kitchens are hot!" exclaimed Mrs. Peterkin. "And Peterkin was hunting for the North Pole. He wanted some place that was cool."

Nancy laughed: "I know a secret," she declared, nodding her wise little head.

Now Mrs. Brown was going to make ice-cream because it was Billy Brown's birthday and Farmer Brown had put a large cake of ice on the kitchen porch to smash up for the ice-cream freezer.

Nancy and Nick went straight toward the Browns' house to look for opor Peterkin Pee Wee.

At first they thought he wasn't there but they soon saw the ice and a hole melted in it you could stick your finger into, and peeked in.

And there was Peterkin Pee Wee melted down in, and almost frozen.

"I went to sleep on the North Pole," he yelled up at them. "And when I woke up I was away down here, Brr! Please throw me a rope and pull me out.' '

So Nick let down a piece of string and Peterkin caught hold and was hauled up safely and taken home to his worried wife.

"I'll hunt the South Pole next time!" he declared with chattering teeth.

PUGILISTS OF GENTLE SEX.

BERLIN, Aug. 22.—(Associated Press)—"Lady boxers" are star attractions at the cheaper variety houses in Berlin, and attract many tourists to these place of amusement. There are several groups of women pugilists which spar in various cabarets and music-halls, and they box with great vigor.

One of the best-known female boxers has a nose which is badly deformed from having been broken, and another has a cauliflower ear.

Most of the female pugilists are young and extremely active. They are about as scientific as many of the men who pose as professional boxers, for the art of boxing is not highly developed in Germany.

OPENS VAST IRON FIELDS.

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 22.—(Associated Press)—The electrification of the most northerly railroad in the world has just been completed and inaugurated. This electric railway has a length of 285 miles, and is the second longest in the world, being surpassed only by an electrified stretch of the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul Railroad in the United States.

The Swedish road links the iron ore mining districts of Lappland with the Svartoen and Narvik ports in the North, and, before being completely electrified, has carried 75,000,000 tons of iron ore valued at nearly $260,000,000.

ELECTION CAMPAIGN GOES ON VIGOROUSLY

DUBLIN, August 22.—(Canadian Press). — The election campaign is being conducted vigorously and peacefully throughout the Free State, except in a few cases of minor disturbances at meetings, taking the shape of rowdyism in which the candidates are pelted with eggs.

Justice Dodd in Court here yesterday granted leave to serve a writ of habeas corpus for the delivery within a fortnight of the anti-treatyite Donnelly, who was arrested in a raid on the Parties' office last Saturday.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Special PrizesDonated To The Fall Fair. Review of Baseball Situation

CAMPBELLFORD, August 22.—The Examiner has donated $5.00 to be offered as a special prize at the Campbellford Fair, and the directors have decided to award it to the best baby over eight months and under fifteen months old. Baby shows have always been a feature of the fall fair here, and a medical man of the required courage will be selected to pass in judgment on the infants.

Dr. W. A. Murphy has also offered a special cash prize for the best baby under eight months.

The directors have completed their annual canvass of the town for special prizes, and almost every citizen approached has responded with a cash donation. The total amount donated will run into hundreds of dollars, and every department, including grain, stock, floral displays, and fancy work, will be represented on the list which will soon be printed and ready for distribution.

The farmers of the surrounding district are noted far and wide as breeders of thoroughbred stock, and the merchants and other business men, who have offered special prizes to encourage this important industry have been generous in awards in this department

The list of prizes which will be awarded by the directors this year is longer and more generous than ever, as the increased grant from the County Council makes possible expansion in this regard.

Garnet and Thomas Kerr, who are in partnership near the town, have their fine herd of Ayrshires and Jerseys at the Brockville Fair this week, and ar expected to return with a share of the red ribbons.

Add Campbellford

Alex. Hume will send a number of his celebrated Ayrshires to the Toronto Exhibition, where he has been a prize winner for years.

William Stewart, another famous breeder of Ayrshires, will also compete at Toronto, and both Messrs. Hume and Stewart will have their stock at the Campbellford Fair. It is not yet known whether any of the breeders of Holsteins, who appear to be in the majority in this district, will compete at Toronto,but they will be represented at the local fair.

The list of special prizes includes liberal awards to lady drivers, speed to be considered in some of the classes. Altogether the claim of the directors that the coming fair will be better than any in the history of the Seymour Agricultural Society, would at this stage of the preparations, appear to be justified.

The Baseball Situation.

A change is definitely announced by Secretary Mulhall, of Castleton, secretary of the Northumberland League, and shortstop on the Warkworth team, with regard to the play-off between Warkworth and Trenton for first place in the League. Instead of two games, one at Trenton to-day and another at Warkworth on Saturday, as given out yesterday, the teams will decide the question of supremacy with a sudden death game at Colborne Friday afternoon.

It was rumored at Orland on Monday, and here yesterday, that Sam. Clarke, M.L.A., of Cobourg, donor of the Clarke Cup, the championship trophy of the League for which the two leading teams are now competing, would refuse to have the cup awarded to Trenton even if that team wins the play-off, as that town is outside Northumberland County. It is known that there has, in some quarters, been objection to Trenton as a member of the League on account of location. The Examiner attempted to get in telephonic communication with Mr. Clarke at his home in Cobourg last night, but was unable to reach him.

It is claimed by some members of the Campbellford team that if Mr. Clarke takes this stand that Warkworth automatically becomes League leaders, and as Campbellford would in that case be in second place, these two teams would be required to have another play-off series for the cup. In that event, it is safe to conjecture that every precaution would be taken in the selection of umpires.

Secretary Mulhall said to the Examiner last night, speaking over the 'phone from his home in Castleton, that he had heard nothing of Mr. Clarke's reported objection to the cup going to Trenton. Even if that course were taken and Trenton eliminated from the competition, he says the cup would, as the situation now stands, go to Warkworth without further play.

Campbellford will try to arrange an exhibition game with the winners of the cup. Members of the team are anxious for an opportunity to show that they are able to make a creditable showing against the leaders, given a clear field and no favors.

Brady pitched his team to victory in one of the play-off games with Warkworth, and would have won the deciding contest but for decisions by one of the umpires, which plainly robbed his team of one run and added three to the score of his opponents. Brady's pitching arm was injured in a game with Orland, when he was hit by a pitched ball, and his taking part in the play-off was made possible by the skill of Dr. W. A. Murphy, who treated him and set himself to the task of getting the young pitcher in shape again.

A Welcome Rain.

A rain which started early Tuesday morning continued nearly all day yesterday, and was very welcome, especially to the dairy farmers of the district, whose pasture land was brown on account of the long spell of dry weather. The rain, so long delayed, has not come too late to save the situation, and it is hoped that a new growth of grass will start.

Harvesting operations are well under way, but the work of gathering in the crop will be delayed for some days on account of yesterday's rain. Cutting is about completed but there are acres and acres of oats still standing in stooks in the fields. This crop this year is above the average, and the grain is plump and heavy. All the threshing outfits in the district are busy.

More New Houses.

Mayor Meyers has purchased a large brick house on Market Street, which he will remodel and convert into a double residence for tenants. The house will be connected with the water system of the town.

J. D. Cummings has disposed of a number of lots in this vicinity, upon which the owners will at once proceed to put up homes. Houses are still scarce and in demand, in spite of the fact that over 20 new residences have been put up since the opening of the building season.

LINIMENT FOUND TO BE POWERFUL GERMICIDE

Originally, Absorbine Jr. was sold only as a pain reliever and an embrocation. It was quickly discovered that the liniment was positive death to all forms of germ life, and it is now used as a mouth wash, for wound dressing and for all disinfecting purposes.

Another surprise was yet in store. A Wm. Pratt of Springfield, Mass., applied Absorbine Jr. to a varicose vein to relieve the intense pain. Not only did the pain leave, but he noticed every day the swollen vein becoming smaller. The treatment was kept up and, today, Mr. Pratt's legs, though he has never used anything else on them, are as smooth as when he was a boy. It has now been proved that Absorbine Jr. is an actual specific for varicose veins, leg ulcers, boils, pyorrhoea and a number of other ailments and injuries besides that for which it was first prepared. Nothing serves so many every day purposes and nothing is better entitled to its place in every home. When it is needed, it will be needed in a hurry. Don't wait for someone to be hurt. Get it at your druggist's today. $1.25 everywhere.

AGE AND YOUTH EXCHANGE IDEAS

Grandmother Teaches Handicraft of Past — Girls Reciprocate With Three R's.

TALLULAH FALLS, Ga., Aug. 22. — Youth and old age meet here—one to provide a belated education for the other, the other to leave a valuable heritage from the past.

Both teaching and learning for their own mutual benefit, attend the Tallulah Falls Industrial School, which is owned, managed and directed by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Aged women come down from their mountain homes to teach handicraft to the younger girls of the school, while the young generation reciprocates by teaching the three R's to the older folk.

Thus, from the picturesque past will remain such legacies as the knowledge of spinning and weaving, of making old hook rugs and patch work quilts—taught by the old women who have been induced to come down from the mountains for this purpose.

Customs Preserved.

"These grandmothers and great grandmothers are the conecting link between colonial and modern America," explains Mrs. T. T. Stevens, the treasurer of the school

"The mountaineers are the real descendants of the colonial settlers, who have retained the old customs and arts while living their secluded lives in the mountains, where some of them live almost as primitively as they did 200 years ago.

Mutual Help.

"They still know how to spin and card wool and weave it into the hand made fabrics so much in demand now. Through them we hope to restore to this generation the handicrafts which would otherwise be lost.

"The children who come to our school to learn modern ways of living do not feel so estranged from their people when they realize what a heritage of art is theirs.

"It is a beautiful sight to see a little girl trying to teach her grandmother to read in return for her grandmother's instruction in piecing a quilt."

YOUR AIR INTAKE

Rhinitis is an inflammation affecting the mucous membrane of the nose. It occurs in both acute and chronic forms. The acute catarrhal form of this inflammation is termed "coryza." It is probably the most prevalent and common of all human ills. You have had it, you may have it now, but whether or no—you will have it. Acute coryza is nothing more than a cold in the head.

The symptoms are due to the presence and development of several distinct micro-organisms—which is no cause for alarm. In ordinary cases, sneezing, nasal congestion and a discharge from the nostrils always occur.

No Cause for Worry.

The inflammation may extend to the throat and cause additional trouble. An attack of coryza sometimes results in partial or temporary deafness due to the blocking of the eustachian tube. This tube merely functions to equalize air pressure on the inner ear. It is nothing to worry about.

The treatment consists of large and frequent doses of good fresh air. A second step in the treatment is another double dose of the same thing. This medicine is free and will never do you any harm.

Rout Germ Army.

Drink plenty water. Keep the bowels open and take a brisk walk. Aspirin taken upon going to bed coupled with the drinking of some hot liquid will make you perspire. This will throw the ranks of germs into disorder and usually in full retreat.

We may now take into consideration some of the preventive measures for avoiding coryza. Don't bundle up like an Eskimo, but wear just enough clothing to keep you warm. Should you get your feet wet, change shoes and stockings as soon as possible.

Colds are easily transmitted, sometimes affecting a whole family at once. Keep away from people who have a cold. People who sneeze and cough should be avoided.

Exercise Necessary.

Above all remember this: Your resistance tells the tale. People who are particularly susceptible to this common annoyance should habituate themselves to exercise, deep breathing and fresh air. Adenoids or enlarged tonsils should be removed. The diet may be modified so as not to contain an excess of starchy foods.

Keep the body clean and accustom yourself to sleeping with the window open, winter and summer. Make a few rules for yourself along these lines and take pains to carry them out.

The improvement in your general physical condition will be surprising. By this you will stave off any future attack or at least reduce its duration and severity.

AN ERRONEOUS IDEA OF FREIGHT RATES

WINNIPEG, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—An erroneous idea concerning the operation of the inland water freight rates Act passed at the last session of Parliament prevailed among United States vessel owners, said Chairman Leslie Boyd, K.C., of the Board of Grain Commissioners here to-day. They believed the Act sanctioned the Board to cancel charters already in force and to set new rates.

Following conferences held with the vessel owners, by Mr. Boyd and G. S. Wrong, statistician of the Dominion government and explanations as to the working of the new Act, many of the owners indicated they would have their vessels in the Canadian grain carrying trade after they had completed their present contacts. Mr. Boyd is of the opinion that at least fifty United States vessels will be found taking grain cargoes from the head of the Lakes during the latter part of the season of navigation.

The commissioners were in session here yesterday, but further meetings with Canadian shippers will not be necessary at the present time as the situation is no longer critical, it is stated.

LABOR CONDITIONS IN WEST CHANGED

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 21.—(Canadian Press.) — With the weather clearing in many sections of the province, harvest labor conditions showed a complete change yesterday and the almost certainty of a shortage of men in a few days was being faced again. The situation which developed on Monday when there were few jobs to offer and the men were absolutely up against it, with no money in their pockets, has been relieved and if the weather continues fine the demand is expected to exceed the supply by the end of the week.

GERMANS STILL WORSHIP TITLES

"Doctor" Is Trade Mark of Gentility.

MUNICH, Aug. 22.—American tourists get many a smile out of the strings of titles shouted through German lobbies and cafes by pages in search of guests who are wanted on the telephone

"Frau Doctor Professor Director Schmidt, bitte," isn't an unusual mouthful for the pages. The "bitte" is "please," and all the rest of the titles are the property of Mrs. Schmidt's husband, and must be used by servants who want to keep in favor with the lady.

Women Dote on Titles.

Democracy has not discouraged the German love for titles. And women love them just as much as men, and insist upon having everything attached to their names which belongs to their husband.

"Frau Advokat Braun" is not a woman lawyer. She is Mrs. Lawyer Brown, the wife of Lawyer Brown. And "Frau Doktor Weiss" is the wife of Doctor White. If she happens to be a doctor herself she will probably be called "Frau Doktor Marie Weiss," or Mrs. Doctor Marie White

Doctors are so numerous in Germany that telephone directories have the appearance of faculty lists for a medical school in America.

Not All Medical.

But the doctors are not all medical. Everyone who has been awarded a doctorate of philosophy, or a doctorate of science, or a doctorate of law or theology, uses the "doctor." It is part of his, or her, stock in trade. It is a trade mark of gentility, a social asset which goes on hotel registers and calling cards and establishes the position of the family in any neighborhood.

The German family which hasn't a few doctors in it is out of luck. Folks starve and die for the title. It is cherished far more than depreciated marks. "Doctor" on the doorplate is a sign for all who enter to step lightly and in a highly dignified manner.

STORM DOES DAMAGE TO EXTENT OF $50,000

QUEBEC, Aug. 22.— (Canadian Press.)—Storm of cyclonic proportions destroyed thirty-three buildings, including houses, barns and sheds, in Ste. Creite De Levraid village, in Nicolet county, on Sunday night. Fortunately no lives were lost and no one was injured, but material damage is estimated at over $50,000. News of the disastrous hurricane did not reach Quebec until yesterday, as most of the telephone and telegraph poles in the entire district are down.

WILL NOT WITHDRAW FROM THE RUHR

France Insists on Being Paid First. Her Reply Made Public

PARIS, August 22. Canadian Press. — The French Government's reply to the recent British reparations note asserts that France refuses to withdraw from the Ruhr except she is paid, and that she rejects the plan for an international re-estimate of Germany's capacity to pay.

The reply made public at the foreign office this morning maintains that the French operation in the Ruhr is absolutely legal. It offers to consider the easiest method of exacting payment from Germany when resistance has ceased, and expresses a willingness to continue the recent discussions with Great Britain.

The French position remains unchanged, according to the official summary of the reply issued in English at the Foreign Office, prior to publication of the complete text.

Premier Poincare in the reply claims the priority for reparations over other war costs as represented by the inter-allied debts.

France never disputed debts contracted during the war either to England or to America, in the interest of the common victory, the note asserts.

France is also creditor of the other allies for five or six billion gold marks, the summary continues, but there can be no doubt that in the minds of those who drafted the treaty, damages to persons and property were to be granted priority over war costs."

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Teresa Desmond (Terry), exquisite and unbelievably innocent, has determined to leave her father. Terrence Desmond, the proprietor of a roadhouse, the Blue Moon. He is moody and selfish, bent on Terry's "bagging" a rich man. He introduces her to Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek, who falls in love with the girl, and on an auto ride makes unwelcome advances. She escapes from him and goes to Juliet Divine, the stage name of her beautiful half-sister, known as the Million Dollar Doll, whom she has not seen for years. 'Juliet's' career has been somewhat sketchy, but she has a genuine affection for Terry, whom she greatly resembles. Miles Sheridan, Terry's Dream Prince, furnished the money for Terry's education at a convent when she was a child, partly to atone for a past rudeness of his wife Betty Sheridan, who is now making him unhappy with her infidelity. Hartley Phillips, a member of the Four Hundred, calls on Julia to tell her that Sheridan, in order to facilitate his wife's obtaining a divorce, will pay the Million Dollar Doll twenty thousand dollars t take a yacht trip with him. Except for appearing with her in order to cause talk, he wants to have nothing to do with her. Terry confesses to Julia that Sheridan has always been her ideal.

Terry is made unhappy by the discovery that Jule is going to marry a South American, Manoel Fernandez, and go to live in Buenos Aires.

Julia tells Terry that it is in her power to help Sheridan.

CHAPTER XXI.

"Anything For His Good"

"Me?" Terry repeated, drowning in a sea of strange words, strange worldly wisdom.

"Yes. Even I am grateful to Sheridan for what he did for you. Heaven knows what he may have saved you from, having you sent to the convent and brought up away from home

"Of course, I'm not so keen on him as you are. But I'd have done a good deal, even if there hadn't been a cent in it for me, to help Miles Sheridan out of a scrape. You can't understand yet, but my turning down the job means that sure as fate some female devil will stick her claws into him for good and all.

"Hartley Phillips, his friend, was saying that very thing today. I'm the only girl he knows who wouldn't try to grab a rich young man in such a situation.

"What'll happen will be this: That little beast Betty'll divorce him, and the poor chap—your Prince —will be out of the frying pan into the fire. The woman who's seen on his yacht with him (the co-respondent she'll be called in law while the divorce case is on)—will have him at her mercy, unless he's sharp as brass tacks—which he isn't.

"The chivalrous way he's treating his wife, to say nothing of what he did for you, shows what he is at heart. And the woman—almost any woman but me—will take advantage. She'll make him marry her. His life will be ruined."

"Oh, how horrible" Terry cried. Her face was pale and her eyes dark with tragedy. "I—I could kill such a woman Julie, dearest Jule, can't you save him somehow?"

"I can't," said Julia. "But you can. That's what I've been trying to tell you all this time, without throwing it at your head in a chunk. You and I are one in this. We both want to help, not harm, Miles Sheridan. Will you be the girl on the yacht?"

"I? Why, he wouldn't have me," Terry stammered, when she got back her breath. "You said that you could do good because you're well known. I'm not known at all——"

"You don't get the idea. Of course, you'd have to pass yourself off for me, and be—Juliet Divine."

Terry looked overwhelmed. For an instant, Julia thought that the child was going to faint.

"She isn't up to it. I might have known and saved myself from wasting energy," the elder woman told herself, vexed almost to slapping point.

But Terry spoke, in a half whisper. "Could I do that?" she asked..

"Of course you could" Julia cheered up visibly. It did seem a shame to throw away such a God-sent chance. She had worked herself into a keen desire that the business should be carried through.

"What's the good of our being like two peas in the same pod, if we can't make use of it ever? If your convent conscience is shocked, you don't need to say you're Juliet Divine. Others will do the saying for you. They'll take you for granted. 'Tisn't as if you'd be among intimate friends of mine.

"Sheridan may have seen me on the stage, never off; and Hartley Phillips never came near enough to touch me with a ten-foot pole, till today. Why, the whole thing's easy as falling off a log Come and look in this big glass with me."

She slid off the divan, showing a yard of filmclad leg. Terry remained motionless, as if dazed. but Julia took an arm and marched her in front of a triple mirror. The black and the hazel eyes met in its clear depths. Suddenly the younger girl realized as she had not realized before, the likeness and the unlikeness between her and her sister.

It was true; she did make her sister look hard Compared with her eyes, Julia's might have been composed of bright glass, like those of a beautifully made doll. Compared with her complexion of a child, Julia's skin might have been skilfully enamelled. And Julia's thick hair, bleached from its original black to auburn, was of a more sophisticated color than the natural red of Terry's.

Still, the two faces were amazingly alike, even seen side by side. Terry admitted to herself that apart, she and Julia might be mistaken fone for the other, except by one who knew both well and saw them often—like Father, for instance.

"We might be twins " Julia laughed. "Do you warm to the work, honey?"

Terry shivered. "I'd hate and loathe deceiving him " she said.

Julia let go the girl's hand, almost flung it away from her. "Oh, damn You make me tired she snapped. "I've explained and argued till I'm blue in the face.

"If you don't want to save your wonderful hero, let him rip. He can go to hell for all I care. And you—can go back to Father "

Years ago, in rows with Terrence, Julia had thrown such words about. But after the gentle peace of the convent, Terry felt as if mud had been dashed in her face. Still, she did not shrink. Instead she was suddenly calm.

"You look almost ugly when you talk like that, Jule," she said, coldly. "And you didn't let me finish. I would hate deceiving Mr. Sheridan. All the same, I'd do even that for his good. I don't believe I could tell lies, because they never would come, somehow. But you say I wouldn't have to tell them.

"If he finds me out, I suppose he'll be awfully sorry. Not that it matters I'll bear anything, if you'll tell me just what to do, and how to behave, so I don't make some dreadful mistake, and hurt him."

"I'll coach you," Julia promised. "I'm glad to see you've got some of my pluck after all You're sure you won't change your mind—weaken?"

"I'm sure," said Terry.

"Good. Jolly good You'll kill two birds with one stone, my dear Save Sheridan—and provide for yourself. There'll be the trip—and the case afterwards. That's the medicine. But afterwards you'll be your own girl, and have the gain

"Phillips will come back in the morning to hear what I've decided. Of course, he doesn't know you exist—and mustn't. We—hark, there's the bell It will be Manoel.

"Now, honey, you mustn't mind, but I don't want him to see you—ever. Emmeline'll hide you tonight—in the kitchen or somewhere. And I'll arrange to put you in a real nice home till Sheridan's yacht is ready to start."

Wheat Yield Will Be Big in Alberta.

EDMONTON, Aug. 22.— (Canadian Press.) — Wheat cutting was general in some sections of central and northern Alberta during this week. The warm weather recently has resulted in grains rapidly ripening and ensuring large yields. The wheat yield will at least average thirty bushels to the acre and some will run as hight as forty, according to crop correspondents. Present estimates place the range at from thirty to thirty-five bushels an acre. Oats will yield as high as eighty bushels an acre with some even touching the 100 mark.

Already there has been some cutting of barley and rye while early wheat in some sections was cut during the latter part of last week.

NO FURTHER DROP.

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press.) — Following Monday's decline of 25 cents per cwt. in price of Canadian wholesale refined sugar, there was no further drop yesterday, although it is not thought that price-cutting is finished. This week's drop was attributed directly to drop in prices of refined at New York.

1,600 CASES OF WHISKEY.

Seized By Windsor Police in Big Haul Sunday.

WINDSOR, Aug. 22 — Sixteen hundred cases of whiskey, valued at $150,000, present prices, along with 10 10-gallon kegs of whiskey and 20 sacks containing an assortment of bottled goods seized by Windsor police Sunday afternoon, comprised the largest seizure of imported whiskey ever made on this border. The goods were found at the home of Harold Masse, Petite Cote.

Sgt. Begg acted when Charles H. Brent, proprietor of the Arcade Billiard Parlor, 369 Oullette avenue, gave the information that a large stock of illicit liquor was stored at Masse's home. He gave no reason for telling police and went with the officers, directing them to Masse's house. Masse refused to allow the officers to make the seizure, believing that the Windsor officers had no jurisdiction in Petite Cote. He telephoned Provincial Police and asked that an officer be sent out. On the arrival of a provincial constable Sgt. Begg proceeded with the seizure.

TENNIS TEAM FOR DAVIS CUP GAMES

U.S. Team Will Play Australia at Forest Hills, N. Y., on August 31 — Johnston and Tilden Again.

NEW YORK, August 22 (Canadian Press). — The United States team that will defend the Davis Cup, international team tennis trophy, will be composed of R. Norris Williams, 2nd, of Philadelphia, captain; William T Tilden, 2nd, of Philadelphia, U.S. national champion; William M. Johnston, of San Francisco, world's champion; and Vincent Richards, of Yonkers, N.Y.

This team which will oppose Australia, survivor of the 1923 preliminary play, in the challenge round at Forest Hills, N.Y., on 31st August and 1st and 3rd September, is the same as that which successfully defended the historic trophy against the Antipodeans last year.

The selection was made late yesterday by the Davis Cup Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

The committee's choice of Richards, No. 3 ranking star, occasioned some surprise because of the fact that the youngster had abandoned his national doubles title partnership with Tilden.

In the 1922 Davis Cup challenge round, the United States sustained its only defeat when Richards and Tilden were beaten in the doubles by Gerald Patterson and Pat O'Hara Wood

Johnston and Tilden, who probably will bear the brunt of the singles play, will represent this country for the fourth successive year. They have never been beaten in the ### Scouts Say Toole Loop Has Few Pitchers, Many Throwers.

There are pitchers and throwers, and according to one scout now looking over International league players, a good many qualify for the latter class.

"I have been around this season, talked with players and horned in on many a fanning bee, and about th only topic discussed by the flingers has been freak deliveries. They'll talk for hours about the knuckle ball, and the screw ball, but never a word have I heard about the one factor that goes to make a pitcher—control.

"Most of them I've seen evidently never heard of the word, and they'll get about as far as a class B club aid stay there until the arm is gone trying to throw the knuckle ball, the screw ball and the other 57 varieties of freak things they've heard about. Possibly it may be the managers' fault, but I would think that after they had passed eight or ten a game and been hit hard they would learn that control was the first requisite.

"In the old days when ball players didn't get present day salaries the youngsters listened when an old-timer spoke. Now they think they can throw the ball past 'em and get by. And look at the home runs.

"The pitcher who is winning today is the one who can vary the speed of the ball, get the batter off stride and, if he has control, make him hit at a ball that's not too good. ## SENOR LAVALLE TO TRAIN FIRPO

The Argentine Millionaire Sportsman Arrived at New York Yesterday — To Start Training at Once.

NEW YORK, August 22 (Canadian Press). — Horatio Lavalle, the millionaire Argentine sportsman and patron of Luis Firpo, arrived yesterday aboard the American Legion from Buenos Ayres to take charge of the South American pugilist's campaign of training for his title match with Jack Dempsey on 14th September at the Polo Grounds.

Senor Lavalle, accompanied by several other ring enthusiasts from the Argentine, was met by Firpo.

After a short conference with Tex Rickard, promoter of the championship match, at Madison Square Garden, Lavalle and Firpo departed for Atlantic City, where the challenger has established quarters.

Active workouts will be started today, it was said.

The story that Firpo served an apprenticeship as drug clerk in Buenos Ayres before beginning his ring career was exploded by other arrivals from the Argentine.

Before Firpo took up boxing, they said, he was simply a manual labourer . He has been a stevedore, a bootblack, and at one time washed bottles in a drug store, whence originated the drug clerk legend.

Lavalle, 28 years old, is millionaire owner of a wheat and grazing plantation near Buenos Ayres. He is a college graduate, and comes from one of the oldest Castilian families in the Argentine His grandfather was an army general.

Lavalle won the amateur lightweight championship of Latin America at the Brazilian Centennial Ex-

GOOD TRADES ARE NOT ALWAYS GOOD

Many of the Baseball Trades of 1923 Turned Out Different Than Was Expected.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—After having guessed good and wrong, several major league managers are prepared to argue that there are no brains, science or judgment in trading and it is just a question of luck in getting the good break on a swap.

The only consolation in discarding a worn-out king that fills a straight in another man's hand is that others have done it before, and the old baseball alibi covers the offense: "How can you beat it?"

The most outstanding example of a good trade that went wrong happened in the case of Ty Cobb and the failure of a deal to turn out as the Tiger leader had reason to expect it, blew what was generally regarded as a good chance for Detroit to win the pennant or be way up there.

Howard Ehmke wasn't doing much good with the Tigers. Cobb didn't like him, and the Detroit fans figured that the club could get along without him.

Cobb made then what looked like a slick move when he traded Ehmke and Hollings to the Boston Red Sox for Del Pratt and Rip Collins.

In return for what was regarded as excess baggage, Cobb got a good second baseman, whom he expected to fill a big hole and make the Tiger infield. And in Rip Collins he acquired a pitcher of ability, who looked to be just about ready for stardom.

As Detroit figured that Cobb has secured all the best of the deal, so the Boston fans thought that they had received the worst of it, and Harry Frazee was censured for the last over act in breaking up a great ball club just to fatten his pocketbook.

It wasn't long before the whole color changed. Pratt fell down at second base and Collins was a terrible "bust" as a pitcher. The Tigers collapsed and fell out of the running.

On the other hand, Ehmke pulled a sensational reversal of form with the Red Sox and turned into one of the best pitchers of the season.

Then there was the case of the Cleveland Indians, who turned "Stuffy" McInnis loose because he was thought not worth the big salary called for in his contract. Speaker had Guisto ready to step on first base and he was judged to be worth more in "Stuff's" place than in a seat on the bench. Guisto was given the regular assignment and he proved a "bust." His health went bad and Speaker had to shift Brower, an outfielder, to first.

McInnis also was intrumental in making the management of the St. Louis Browns look guilty of bad judgment. The Browns bosses knew that George Sisler was not going to be able to play and that they would need an experienced first baseman. They made not a sound while "Stuffy" was around looking for a job, and when he was grabbed by the Boston Braves, the Brown management had to take a castoff rookie from Brooklyn to fill Sisler's place.

HAVERS COLLECTS OTHER LAURELS

British Open Champion Adds to Reputation Since Troon Victory.

Arthur Havers has been proving himself worthy of his title—open golf champion of Great Britain.

Since he took the crown off Walter Hagen's brow at Troon, the young English professional has won several minor tournaments, broken some course records, picked up a pile of pounds and acquired a reputation of being one of the hardest, longest hitters the game has produced.

Following his rise to glory at Troon, Havers went over to the famous Scottish inland course, Gleneagles, and won the 1,000 guineas tournament from a select field. Soon afterwards he was in France, where he finished well in the open championships of that country, won by another Briton, James Ockneden. Since returning home, Havers has been hammering away in several tournaments, letting the records fall where they may.

Playing at St. Alban's, July 10, Havers won a $2,250 tournament, scoring 67 over the Verulam course. He did it largely with his driver, his tee shots screaming 300 yards and more down the fairways on nearly all the longer holes.

He played so smoothly that almost every hole with his hitting fell under the formula of a drive, a pitch and a put. He started with 3, 3, 2, four strokes under bogey. He carried the third green, 192 yards, with a mid-iron. At the seventh, 398 yards, his drive hit the face of a bunker guarding the green, and he got four. The eighth is a blind drive over a huge gravel pit, too, to cup, measuring 354. Havers' drive stopped just 30 paces from the pin. He was out in 32, and started back by driving beond the green of the 310-yard tenth, where he got a three.

The eleventh is 435 yards, yet the champion's tee shot was so monstrous he needed only a light mashie-niblick pitch onto the green. He kept up this pace to the end, saving at the long sixteenth—552 yards —where he topped his tee shot, bungled his brassie, and needed six to sink the ball.

Old Sandy Herd, who was 31 years old when Havers was born, got a 69 the same day over the same course, but nobody paid much attention. For golf may be the old man's game, but its honors go to the young.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORT

Cincinnati gained a full game on New York yesterday, and the Reds are now but tnree and a half games behind the league leaders. Hard luck earlier in the season caused Cincinnati to loose several games, but if the team can keep up its present pace it will give New York a great run for the money before the season is over.

The dropping of De Forest by Firpo spoils the chance of a dramatic side story of the Dempsey-Firpo bout. It will be remembered that De Forest trained Dempsey for the bout at Toledo, where Dempsey won the championship. Immediately after that Dempsey parted company with the great little trainer. It was in the back of De Forest's mind to get even by taining Firpo to beat Dempsey.

Jeffries quarreled with Billy Delaney, the trainer who made him. Delaney appeared in the Johnson corner at Reno to show his resentment. He was not at all displeased when Jeffries was beaten. Firpo's desertion of De Forest spoils the chances of this trainer to "get even" with Dempsey.

BRITISH WOMEN WON AT TENNIS

Defeated the U.S. Team in Four of Six Games Played at Newport—U. S. Players Easy Victims.

NEWPORT, R.I., Aug. 22. — (Canadian Press.)— Mrs. Geraldine Beamish and Mrs. R. C. Clayton, British woman's tennis team, defeated Miss Lillian Schaman and Miss Ceres Baker, representing the United States, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3, in the last of six international matches played on the Casino courts Monday and Tuesday. The victory gave Great Britain four victories in the matches played against two for the United States and also avenged the defeat suffered by the British in the international tournament.

Earlier in the day, the draw brought Mrs. Molla B. Mallory and Miss Eleanor Goss, together, Mrs. Mallory winning 11-9, 6-3.

In the match between two British women, Mrs. R. C. Clayton defeated Mrs. B. C. Covell, 6-1, 6-2.

The U.S. players were easy victims for the British women in the first set of the doubles. They were repeatedly caught out of position in mid-court. Mrs. Beamish's unique twisting, underhand service also bothered them.

After teaming together better in the second set they were again overwhelmed in the third by the consistently good game maintained by the British women Mrs. Clayton was brilliant in her volleying and net play and Mrs. Beamish was very good in back court.

MAKES TRIPLE PLAY AT THIRD, UNASSISTED

LANSING, Mich., Aug. 22.—Raymond E. Peterson, third baseman for the Motor Independents, one of the teams in Lansing's amateur city league, in a game against the Vans here Sunday afternoon made a triple play, unassisted. It is the first time such a play has been made at third base, it is believed, and one of the few plays of the kind ever made in baseball history. With the bases filled, Peterson snagged a fast drive to his corner, touched the runner coming from second, and then touched third base before the runner who had started for home plate could return to safety. The Vans won the game, 6 to 0.

RICKARD ALARMED BY FIRPO'S MANNER

Big South American Does Not Seem to Be Much Worried About His Tilt With Dempsey.

It is not for fear that Firpo will be knocked out or discredited in his bouts with set-ups that worries Tex Rickard, but it is the airy manner in which Firpo seems to regard the big bout with Jack Dempsey, the bout for which something like 80,000 customers will pay in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 writes W. O. Geehan. Dempsey already has settled down at his training camp, but the contender is still collecting for bouts with the soft ones. He even has planned to take on Floyd Johnson before starting to train for Dempsey.

All of this makes some of the customers begin to worry about the bout. They figure that Firpo must be insanely overconfident or that he does not regard his chances with Dempsey as particularly bright and consequently is getting the money while the getting remains good.

It is my belief that Firpo is serenely confident. This sort of thing is characteristic of the South American. They tell a story of his trip back to the United States from Mexico City. His secretary, Witmer, got into a stud poker game in which he was doing rather badly. Finally it came to a point where Witmer had a hundred dollars in a pot—a large sum to anybody working for Firpo. He was puzzled and turned to Firpo and asked advice in Spanish.

"What would you do if you were in this situation?" he asked.

"I never would get myself into such a situation," replied Firpo. And that was the consolation that the secretary received.

PIRATES RETURN MANY HURLERS

Expensive Minor League Stars Unable to Make Grade in National.

Pittsburgh Pirates have liquidated $50,000 worth of bad investments in pitching talents.

George Boehler, a former American League star, who spent considerable time in the minors, cost President Barney Dreyfuss $30,000 to pry him loose from Tulsa of the Western League.

The purchase was made on the strength of Boehler's great record last season. The pitcher showed anything but major league class, and has been released to Omaha, also of the Western League, on the pretence that he needs "more experience."

Myrl Brown, who decreased the Pirates' bank roll to the extent of $20,000 is another who proved a poor investment. He was purchased from Reading of the International League, proved a fizzle and has been shipped to Otto Miller's Atlanta Club in the Southern Association. The Pirates tried to unload Brown on a couple of Texas League Clubs, but they declined to take him, because it was understood that his arm had gone dead.

The relegation of these two pitchers to minor league clubs is a striking illustration of the folly of major league club magnates in making deals at high prices on the showing of players in the minors, without regard to their actual worth, based on reports of scouts who are afraid to say "No" when it comes to making a deal. Boehler has been stock in trade for minor league clubs with which he has been connected for several years, but it is not likely any more deals for him will be negotiated by major manager.

It is understood that Omaha will send Buckshot May to the Pirates in part payment for Boehler, while Brown goes to Atlanta in part payment for Eddie Moore, a young shortstop. Having discarded these two pitchers, the Pirates have recalled another in Arnold Stone, who has been with Hartford under option.

TENNIS

Great performers in any sport are rarely ever able judges of fellow performers nor can they qualify as prophets. The best boxers are poor judges of boxers. Some of the poorest judges of ball players that we know are men who are great stars. It is so in other sports and therefore William T. Tilden is not an exception.

Tilden wrote a book on tennis last winter. In this book he said that Miss Helen Wills might some day be the champion woman tennis player of the United States, but this day would not arrive in 1923, nor in 1924 or 1925. Maybe, in four or five years, Miss Wills would be able to defeat Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, but not in this nor in the next few seasons could she be expected to conquer Mrs. Mallory. Also, Tilden called Mrs. Mallory the greatest tennis player of her sex the world ever produced.

Tilden made two pronounced errors on a single page. It was a mistake to attempt to predict continued reign for Mrs. Mallory the way she performed last season and surely a mistake to say Miss Wills would require four or five years more before she could possibly defeat Mrs. Mallory. Last Saturday Mrs. Mallory took three games in the match that set Miss Wills on the tennis trone. But it was a far greater mistake to call Mrs. Mallory the greatest player of her sex the world has produced. No fair critic that ever saw Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen play would say as much.

* * *

Mrs. Mallory was not popular here, at least not in the last two years. Her behavior after being beaten in England by Mlle. Lenglen last season, destroyed any popularity that she may have still had at that time. Her expressed opinions and actions were far from keeping with good manners.

Miss Wills, young, pretty, appealing, carried unanimous support. Miss Wills is home-bred and Americans never felt quite right about claiming honors in women's tennis because of Mrs. Mallory's victories, for when Mrs. Mallory, as Molla Bjurstedt, began playing tennis in this country she could not speak the language of the land. The United States was, after all, merely her adopted country and claim for her progress could rightfully be advanced by Norway, instead of Long Island.

ONE DOCTOR PROMISES EVERLASTING GIRLHOOD

LONDON, Aug. 22.—(Associated Press)—The rejuvenation of women as well as men, and without the aid of the beauty doctor and the dressmaker, has been promised by Dr. Voronoff, the famous monkey gland expert. Dr. Voronoff explained during the recent International Surgical Congress that he was making experiments at the present time, and expected to be able to announce the secret of everlasting girlhood about November.

The announcement that he expected to make grandmothers into debutantes caused a sensation among the delegates, and many of them were frank in saying that they believed it utterly impossible. In fact some of them said he ought not to do it, one prominent social worker of London declaring:

"What the doctors should do is to find some means of preserving the strength of women of seventy, so that they could give the benefit of their ripe experience to those in need of it.

"Women who have grown old naturally prefer nature to take its own course. There are women who would giv anything to have their lost beauty and youth restored, but they are of the selfish type."

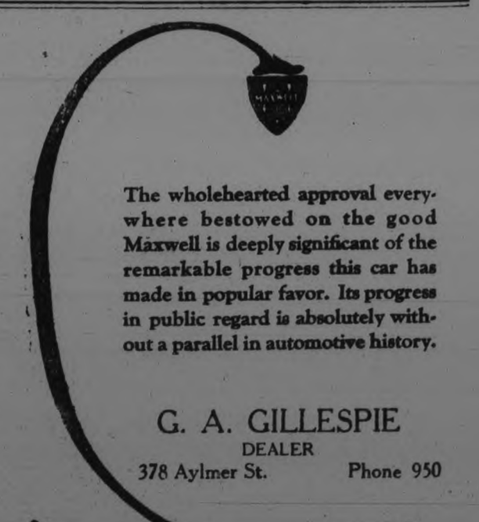
Dr. Voronoff refuses to discuss the subject further other than to say he has progressd to the extent that he is certain of success.

NEW GOVERNMENT PARK SOUGHT FOR WISCONSIN

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 22.—(Associated Press)—A new national park at Government Bluff in Door county is being sought by Wisconsin conservationists with the liklihood that a move will be made by Senator I. L. Lenroot, during the next session of congress, to have federal authorities turn the tract into a permanent federal preserve.

Already the government owns the 1,300 acres which Wisconsin is asking to have made into a park. It is located in a famous summer resort section of the state, within but a few miles of Peninsula state park.

Government Bluff rises majestically above Green Bay on Lake Michigan, to a height of 250 feet. It is wooded with virgin pines and evergreen, giant remnants of the once vast Wisconsin forests. Waters about the bluff are regarded as unrivalled for bass fishing.



The wholehearted approval everywhere bestowed on the good Maxwell is deeply significant of the remarkable progress this car has made in popular favor. Its progress in public regard is absolutely without a parallel in automotive history.

COAL ON HAND FOR 4 MONTHS

United States Government Says No Danger of Critical Shortage.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22. United Press. — Sufficient stocks of hard coal are in storage to supply normal requirements in the United States for more than four months, according to a survey made by a government department since the controversy between the anthracite miners and the operators reached the stage where a discontinuance of production seemed a possible outcome.

With the danger of a critical shortage avoided by possession of this stock the opinion was expressed in government circles to-day that the problem to be faced in the event of a tie up in the hard coal fields would be one of distribution.

The assurance from the White House that the public need fear no fuel crisis was interpreted as indicating that President Coolidge was ready to throw government aid in this direction in the event of an emergency.

Government Preparing.

Steps have already been taken to analyze the situation with a view to setting up any necessary government aid to the regular commercial distribution agencies.

Whether this would take the form of supervision of all supplies by the federal coal distributor or the re-establishment of committees similar to those instituted by Secretary Hoover in the case of the general coal strike last summer had not been decided to-day but the branches of the government that would be called upon in either eventuality were said to be preparing so they would be ready to intervene should their assistance become necessary.

HARD LUCK STORIES.

Some Western Harvesters are Disappointed with Pay.

HAMILTON, Aug. 22. — Hard-luck stories coming from the west, concerning the unhappy condition of men from England who joined the harvesters in the hope of raising $250 above expenses before winter were commented on to-day by W. J. Smith, of the Ontario government employment bureau. Mr. Smith ascribed the allure of these men to capture jobs at $4.50 and up a day to the fact that office workers, bookkeepers and others expect to get as high wages as experienced farm hands. The inevitable result is that they are disappointed.

There is still a great demand for harvesters, he said, and men who are able to operate threshing machines and other machines can draw down big wages.

'NES AYRES' LATEST STAR PICTURE MAKES BIG HIT EVERYWHERE

That Agnes Ayres is one of the most popular stars of the screen is amply evidenced by the great success of her new Paramount picture, "The Heart Raider," which will be the feature at the Capitol Theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday with Mahlon Hamilton as leading man.

The story is one of absorbing interest and there is much relishable comedy. At Palm Beach, Muriel Gray, played by Miss Ayres, is making an effort to create a favorable impression on John Dennis, a bachelor, portrayed by Mahlon Hamilton. But the latter believes that Muriel is rather frivolous, and his indifference wounds Muriel deeply. She is determined, however, to force Dennis to take her in his arms, and makes this her boast. Muriel at first is a miserable failure as a vamp, but finally makes good her boast.

There is an excellent supporting cast which includes Charles Ruggles, Frazer Coulter, Marie Burke and Charles Riegal. Wesley Ruggles directed the picture, the scenario for which was written by Jack Cunningham, who made the adaptation of the Emerson Hough novel, "The Covered Wagon." Charles Schoenbaum was the photographer.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Aug. 22.—Disruption of the anthracite conference, which was announced after the previous close, had an unsettling effect on the early dealings on the stock market and prices among the industrial leaders were generally lower. Baldwin lost a full point to 120 3-4, Gulf States Steel 3-4 to 79 1-2; Studebaker 1-2 to 105 1-8, and Bethlehem 3-8 to 52 1-2. However, President Coolidge's confidence that a settlement would be reached in the 9 days before the old wage agreement expires, served as an offsetting influence and the re-action in the general list made no threat of becoming serious.

Apprehension over the anthracite labour troubles quickly waned when the industrial leaders threw aside their early irregularity and swung into a renewal of the forward movement. Initial losses were readily wiped out and fresh ground was gained under the leadership of Steel Common, which went into new high ground for the week at 92 3-8 before 11 o'clock.

One reason why Wall Street is not paying over-much attention to a possible coal strike is because it expects one every year. But the country is better prepared for a coal strike this year than before. In addition the President pledges a fuel supply to all.

Opening prices included: Corn Products 127 1-2, off 1-4; Studebaker 105 1-8, off 1-2; Baldwin 120 3-4, off 1; Baltimore and Ohio 49 1-8, off 1-8; American Can 98 3-8, off 3-8; Pan-American B. 58 3-4, off 1-4; General Motors 15 1-8; United States' Steel 92 3-8, up 1-8; Pan-American 60 5-8; Bethlehem 52 1-2, off 3-8; Republic Iron and Steel 48 1-4, up 1-8; Union Pacific 130 5-8, off 1-4; Northern Pacific 57 5-8, off 1-8.

The market has not been very active and not particularly broad, but nevertheless it maintained a fairly firm tone throughout the morning.

RECORD YEAR FOR LUMBER EXPECTED.

Rush to the Camps Opens—Higher Wages this Year than Last.

QUEBEC August 22. — The rush to the lumber camps of Quebec and Ontario is already on, according to information available at the Provincial employment bureau, and a record year is expected in the lumber industry. At present as average of 150 to 200 men are leaving each week to work in lumber camps in North Eastern Ontario and in Northern Quebec, this being about the average sumber who sign up.

Reports received at the Provincial labor branch show that Ontario is getting a very high percentage of its lumberjacks from this province. In former years there has been a great demand from Quebec but never has it reached this height. The wages are running from $40 to $50 per month, which is an increase of $10 to $20 per month over last year.

Regarding general labor conditions, reports show that there has been a slight decerase is the activity which reigned in the construction business, but an improvement in trades and in the shoe isdustry with very little unemployment, and bright prospects for the fall and winter.

U. S. PLANE DIVES, TWO MEN DIE.

POPE FIELD, Camp Brag, N.Y., August 22. — Alfred de Mesuita, of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Durham, N.C., publisher of the Durham Sun and the Fayetville, N.C., Observer, and Sergt. Edmund Reese, of New York City, were killed here late on Monday in an aeroplane accident.

The plane went into a nose dive after taking off, bursting into flames after it struck the ground.

While the aeroplane was privately owned, an Army Board of Inquiry has been appointed to investigate the accident.

FRANCE BARS BIRTH OF A NATION.

PARIS, August 22. — "The Birth of a Nation," which opened for the first time in Paris on Friday night, and showed to crowded houses on Friday and Saturday, was closed on Sunday by the police.

David W. Griffith's big picture aroused the fervid objections of the French negroes, who number 60 per cent. of the population of the French Empire.

As the Foreign Ministry explained, this measure, like others taken in the past three months, is meant to give the French negroes full consciousness that they are the equals of their fellow-citizens of the white race in the eyes of the French Government.

HAD THE BLUES.

Strangely Colored Side-Show Freak Dies.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22. — Fred Walters whose bright blue skin had made him a living for many years in side shows, died yesterday in Bellevue hospital from heart disease. Doctors at the institution discovered to their amazement that not only his skin, but all of his organs and tissues, including the brain, heart and muscles, were of the same brilliant color.

Some forty years ago Walters is said to have worked in a mine in Australia and breathed into his body nitrate of silver which turned him blue.

ABSENCE FROM OFFICE SAVED DENTIST'S LIFE

MONTREAL, Aug. 22.—Dr. Samuel M. Feldman, dentist, 191 Mount Royal avenue west, owes his life to the fact that he was not working near his dentist's chair when a bullet crashed through the window of his surgery at 1.30 o'clock yesterday morning.

Dr. Feldman eported to the police of the St. Lawrence boulevard station late yesterday that the mysterious shooting occurred when he was at work in a little office adjoining the surgery. The latter room overlooks Fletcher's Field. The light was on in the surgery.

Suddenly the dentist heard a crash, and found a .32 bullet lodged in the rear wall of the surgery. After going through the window it must have passed directly over the chair.

The dentist stated this morning that he knew of no enemies. He believes that there was a gun-fight on Fletcher's Field and that a stray bullet chanced to go through his window.

The police can find no clue to a fight in the park.

It is foolish to lose time in supposing that the child will "Grow out of it."

The sensible time to stop eyestrain is before it amounts to anything.

CITY ANSWERS CALL TO FARM

Party of 53 Harvesters Today Brings Total To Over 200.

The C.P.R. station was again the scene of many farewells this morning when a party of 53 harvesters boarded the two special tourist coaches which will carry them to the western grain fields. This party brings the total from Peterborough to over 200.

Most of those who started on the trip to-day were young men, and there were almost as many army kit bags in evidence, as there were suitcases. One man's luggage consisted of a bread tin, and one or two appeared to be satisfied with eatables carried in boxes and haversacks. Two men from north of the city made an early start on the commissary, being seen comfortably lunching when the train pulled out.

Many From District

Eight men from Lakefield and five from Campbellford were in the party. They admitted that farmers in their districts needed men, but they said there is more money in harvesting in the west, and they might as well be there for the winter as here.

Bruce Snelgrove of Lakefield said he though he would have a better time in the west. Ernie Garde, also of the northern village, looked forward to hard work, and took an early opportunity to examine the sleeping facilities offered by the upper berth.

Crop harvested here

Thomas Williams of Monaghan had harvested his own grain on 200 acres, and is on his way to help with western harvest. He is looking forward to gaining some pointers in large scale farming.

Several others were in the same class. Work being completed in their districts they are now on their way to where operations have just started.

J. Skinner, uptown agent of the C.P.R. stated to-day that the number going this year is far ahead of last year. All tickets in the city office were sold, and late arrivals were compelled to obtain tickets in the station.

The cars will carry these harvesters direct to Winnipeg, where they will be distributed to the needy points.

Many from Peterborough

Arthur Franks and J. R. Boate of the city, were going simply for the employment. One young man declared his intention to make a stake to carry him through the winter. He had never been on a trip of this kind and was looking forward to a splendid time.

Robert Knox said he was taking the trip for the sake of the experience and the knowledge he would have of the country.

CLAIMS TO HAVE ISOLATED THE ELMENT HAFNIUM

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 22.—(Canadian Press.)—Professor Neils Bohr, noted Danish scientist and winner of the Nobel Prize for Physics in 1922, claims to have succeeded in isolating the element known as hafnium. The substance will, it is believed, be useful in the construction of audion lamps.

Hafnium was first discovered by Professor F. von Hevessy, who has been working for some years in the Danish Government's physics laboratories under the direction of Professor Bohr. Professor von Havessy was not able to isolate the new element, however, and appealed to the scientific world to join him in working out a formula that would give pure hafnium.

A despatch from London last February said that Dr. Alexander Scott, director of Scientific Research for the British Museum, announced to the Chemical Society that he had succeeded in isolating hafnium and exhibited samples. Subsequently the specimens were sent to Professor Bohr, who, after analysis, declared the substance was not hafnium.

GAS WILL DECIDE WARS OF FUTURE

Expert Declares Whole Armies Will Be Put to Sleep and Taken Prisoner.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—(Associated Press.)—Whole armies put to sleep and taken prisoner in gas war fare is by no means an impossibility 25 years hence, Col. Raymond F. Bacon, chief of the Technical Division of the Chemical Warfare Service, A. E. F., says in a description of the possibilities of the future art of war made public by the American Chemical Society.

The $2,000,000 spent on the research organization did more toward winning the war, Col. Bacon asserts than any other $200,000,000 spent in other ways. One of the greatest lessons of the war has so far gone almost unheeded, according to Col. Bacon, who continues "To say the use of gas in warfare must be abolished is almost the same as saying that no progress must be made in the art of warfare toward making it more efficient or more humane. If one reads of the great battles of history, one will find that the victorious general conquered his enemy usually because of the fact that he so chose his position as to have his flank protected by river, mountain range or some naturally strong barrier.

"Much of the stategy of these battles consisted in manoeuvering so as to obtain the advantage of position. With the use of gas it is possible to saturate a piece of ground so that no troops can cross it and thus make an artificial barrier for the flank or protect the lines of communication. Moreover, these artificial barriers can be kept barriers for just as short a time as the strategy of the particular battle demands. These are but hints, but show the tremendous unexploited possibilities of gas in warfare.

"One can easily imagine the situation at the time the fighting was hand to hand with the spear or the sword, and gunpowder as first introduced, which in those days perhaps permitted the antagonists to fight at a range of 100 or 200 yards. There must have been a great outcry as to prohibiting the horrible new mode of warfare, and it must have been felt that it was very unfair to stand off 200 yards rather than to meet in combat man to man.

"But no one looking back on that period would attempt to say that it was possible to have stayed the hand of progress and to have prevented by any legislation or agreement the use of gunpowder in warfare. Moreover the concensus of opinion to-day would be that the hand to hand fighting with spear and sword was more cruel and inhumane than the fighting with the gun and the bullet. Similarly at the present time we cannot effectually stay the progress of science, and to attempt to do so is not only unwise but is also preventing the possibilities of a really more humane type of war."

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of my dear wife, Emily Gelling, who died Aug. 22nd, 1922:

I loved her, yes, I loved her,
But Jesus loved her more,
And He has sweetly called her
To yonder shining shore.

The golden gates were opened,
A gentle voice said come,
And with farewells unspoken,
She calmly entered home.

Her weary hours and days of pain,
Her troubled nights are past.
Her ever patient worn-out frame,
Has found sweet rest at last.

IN MEMORIAM.

HARRISON — In ever-loving memory of our dear Gordon, ho passed away August 22nd, 1922.
It's just a year ago to-day,
Since our dear Gordon passed away.
The blow was great. the shock severe,
We little thought his death was near.
The silent grief that's in the hearts
No human life can trace,
For many an aching heart is hid
Behind a smiling face.
The golden gates were open,
A gentle voice said "Come."
And with farewell words unspoken,
He calmly entered home.

COMMISSION TO PARLEY NO MORE WITH COAL MEN

Tells Both Sides It Can Go No Further in Endeavor to Enforce Peace and Prevent Strike

SITUATION GRAVE

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Aug. 23. —Canadian Press. — Semi-official notice that the Federal government would not intervene further in the anthracite wage negotiations to prevent the stoppage of the miners on September 1st, reached Atlantic City to-day.

The news was conveyed to both the Policy Committee of mine operators and the officials of the Miners' Union, who broke off negotiations for a new wage contract Tuesday, and left unrelieved the prospect of a shut down in the industry next week.

The United States Coal Commission told both sides it could go no further in an endeavor to enforce peace since a renewal of the wage contract negotiatios, which was taken at its intervention last week, had merely served to precipitate another break.

SYMPATHETIC MOVE.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23. — The posibility of a sympathetic strike by the bituminous miners of the United States, if the hard coal miners quit, is foreseen in some quarters here. But the officials here take the view there will be no sympathetic strike, and are laying their plans in expectation of ample soft supply.

The railroad brotherhoods have advised the president that they will not strike in sympathy.

Should soft coal miners quit to aid the hard coal miners an extremely grave situation would result.

REFUSED TO CALL FOR A WINDING UP

Important Meetings In Toronto To-day Concerning Home Bank Affairs.

TORONTO, Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—Two actions of importance to Home Bank depositors were taken to-day. One an application of a creditor to have the Home bank wound up, the second a meeting of depositors of the bank at the Walker House to devise plans for protecting the depositor-creditor.

Refusing to act to-day in the direction of declaring the Home Bank liable to be wound up under the Winding Up Act, Mr. Justice Fisher at Osgoode Hall adjourned for two weeks the application of a Toronto creditor, Arthur Hawke, for such an order.

Several other similar applications are pending and the decision of the Judge will mean that they will all come before him two weeks hence, when the curator, A. B. Barker, will be present.

FRENCH CABINET BACKS POINCARE ON REPARATIONS

Discuss France's Plans Should Britain Decide On Separate Negotiations With Germany

BELGIUM IN ACCORD

PARIS, Aug. 23.—(United Press). — The Cabinet met at Rambouille to-day and approved the action of Premier Poincare in connection with his reply to Premier Baldwin's reparations note as published yesterday.

The Ministers then discussed France's programme in the event Britain decides upon separate negotiations with Germany.

Make Germany Pay.

There was every indication to-day that the entire nation is united in support of the Premier's "stand pat" policy. France is convinced Germany can pay, and she will stay in the Ruhr until the payments are made. Meanwhile the Government fully acknowledges the complete support from Belgium in the reply of the Belgian Government to the Curzon note.

Despatches from Brussels said the Cabinet approved the outline of the Belgian reply to England last night. Premier Theunis and Foreign Minister Jasper were starting work on the final draft to-day, and it was to be ready for forwarding to London next week.

Loan to Belgium.

The Franco-Belgian entente was considered as more closely drawn by the Belgian loan from this country, now practically concluded. The loan will be for 400,000,000 francs, and will pay six and a half per cent. interest. The issue price for 500 franc bonds will be 486. The bonds will be repayable in twenty years in four instalments five years apart.

COUNTRY PUPILS CANNOT BE TAKEN

No Accomodation For Outside Pupils Who Passed Entrance.

J. M. Greene, chairman of the Property Committee of the Board of Education, stated to-day that no extensions have been made to the schools in Peterboro in anticipation of increased enrollment in the session which opens on September 4. Painting and decoration have been the only improvements made on the buildings.

As to whether there would be accommodation for the pupils eligible through recent examinations for entrance to High School, Mr. Greene was unable to make a statement. The question cannot be decided until a successor to Joseph Wearing has been appointed at the October meeting of the Board, he said.

E. B. Fowler, chairman of the Board, said there will be no accommodation for scholars from outside the city in the first form of the Collegiate Institute. Accommodation must be secured for the city pupils, Mr. Fowler said.

CANADIANS FACE DELAY ABROAD

Would-Be Passengers of Damaged Canadian Pacific Boat Cannot Get Steamer For Passage.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Hundreds of would-be passengers on the damaged Canadian Pacific steamer Empress of Scotland have been stranded in London and Southampton through Tuesday's accident to the liner, which struck a submerged wreck on her way from Hamburg to Southampton and was so badly damaged that her sailing for Quebec was cancelled. The prospective passengers face an indefinite prolongation of their stay as there are no passages available on other ships.

Some of the first-class and second-class passengers are in Southampton hotels, but the majority of them returned to London. A few of the first class will sail on a Canadian boat from Liverpool Saturday. The majority will likely have to wait until the Empress of Scotland sails, probably in two or three weeks.

The second-class passengers are scattered over Southampton and nearby resorts, some even quartered in farm-houses. The third-class passengers are at Atlantic Park, near Southampton, former aviation centre, now an Euglish "Ellis Island." They will be cared for until another Canadian Pacific vessel is available.

The Empress of Scotland will be put in dry dock. It is believed she had a bad hole punched in her hull and that her starboard engine was damaged when she struck the wreck. One of her holds filled, but the pumps were able to keep the water under control. There was no disturbance among the 200 passengers from Hamburg.

The officals of the line are trying to charter a substitute steamer for the Empress of Scotland.

STRANGE SEA-MONSTER CAPTURED.

LONDON, Aug. 23.—(Associated Press)—A sea monster 30 feet long and weighing ten tons has been captured by fishermen off Cahireiveen, County Kerry, says the Daily Chronicle. The monster has several fins and a large tail and was only captured after a six-hour struggle, during which several of the boats were upset and all the nets bady damaged.

Experts who have seen the animal say that it is impossible to classify it, but suggest it is allied to the tunny.

Italy Purchasing Tracts in Africa For Her Settlers

ROME, Aug. 23. — (United Press).—Italy is hoping to solve her surplus population problem by the purchase from Portugal of huge tracts of fertile land in Africa.

Negotiations are now being concluded with the Portuguese Government for taking over the Benguella territory of 100,000 square kilometres in Angola, Western Africa. The district, with rich soil and a mild climate, will, it is believed, afford prosperous living conditions for one million immigrants, thereby solving Italy's emigration problem for five years.

NO SUCCESSOR APPOINTED YET

Death of Sir William Meredith Followed By Speculation As To Appointment.

OTTAWA, Aug. 23.— (Canadian Press.)—Speculation as to choice of successor of Sir William R. Meredith as Chief Justice of Ontario is now rife, but no appointment has yet been made. There were at the time of Sir William's death three Chief Justices in the Ontario courts, the other two being Sir William Mulock and Hon. R. M. Meredith. Under the new organization of the Ontario courts, only two posts of this rank are contemplated, Chief Justices of First and Second Division, respectively.

Mulock May Advance.

In July Sir William Mulock was appointed Chief Justice of the Second Division and it is not improbable that he may now be elevated to the head of the First Division, which carries with it the title of Chief Justice of Ontario. In that event, Hon. R. M. Meredith, who is now Chief Justice of Common Pleas, may succeed Sir William as Chief Justice of the Second Division. It is possible, however, that an appointment may be made outside of the ranks of existing Chief Justices.

TIRE SURPLUS PILES UP.

Sixty Manufacturers Report 7,040,600 Casings on Hand.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Due to the heavy overproduction of automobile tires in the first six months of the current year manufacturers have curtailed output according to trade reports. On June 30, 1923, sixty prominent manufacturers reporting to the Rubber Association of America had 7,040,600 casings on hand, the largest total for any month in approximately two years. The curtailment in production explains the recent reports coming from the larger manufacturing centres of reductions in working forces.

"Under more normal conditions a large part of the tires now in the hands of the tire manufacturers would be on the shelves of dealers and distributers," according to a review of the industry. "The price situation, however, has been so unsettled in recent months that retailers have been extremely cautious in their commitments, buying practically on a hand-to-mouth basis and showing little inclination to stock up as in previous years. This places a heavier burden on the manufacturers and for that reason their large inventories do not necessarily mean that actual consumption is smaller."

2 TRAFFICKERS IN DRUGS JAILED

One Caught Bending Over "Deck Factory" and Cocaine. Both Men Pleaded Guilty.

MONTREAL, Aug. 23.—Two drug traffickers went to jail for at least a year, when Recorder Geoffrion sentenced Victor Geoffrion and Joseph Kaper to twelve month in prison, a fine of $200 and costs or another two months, for having drugs. Kaper pleaded to be sent to St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary instead of to Bordeaux, but the judge replied: "I have no power to send you to the pen."

When Constables Rochaleau and Belanger of No. 4 Station, took Geoffrion in his Cadieux Street room, they uncovered the most business-like "deck" factory yet found by the police. Instead of the usual rough table and instruments, Geoffrion had a special smooth-topped table, with a powerful light hanging low over, and he wore a large shade to keep the light from his eyes. On the table were two decks of cocaine already made up, 58 deck papers ready for filling, a box holding about half an ounce of cocaine, a nail file, well worn and used as a drug shovel. As the man rose from the table he was seized with nine decks in his hand. He pleaded guilty in court.

Kaper was seized in his room on Clarke Street by Constables Coulombe and Sevigny, of Inspector Egan's squad. Searching the room the police found 19 decks in all, distributed between a hidden valise and a little cranny in a gas stove. Kaper also pleaded guilty.

SIGNAL HONOR FOR A LOCAL PHYSICIAN

Dr. T. W. H. Young Appointed Member of Important Medical Committee.

A signal honor has been bestowed upon Dr. T. W. H. Young, of this city, by the Council of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario. Dr. Young, with two other members of the Council, have been appointed a committee to rearrange the entire course of medical study for Ontario, including the matriculation standard.

This task requires a thorough knowledge of the sciences of medicine and surgery and of the pedagogics of all branches of medicine. His appointment is therefore a commentary on the ability of the Peterboro physician.

SLAVE STATE IS PROPHESIED BY CHESTERTON

All Conditions Are Now Right For a Lapse to Slavery, Distinguished Author Tells Congress.

THE WEALTHY FEW

LONDON, Aug. 23. — (United Press).—A world conference is reported for the creation of "a slave state," Gilbert K. Chesterton, author and master of paradox, told the Roman Catholic Congress at Birmingham.

The "slave state" will be a state of society growing out of the present industrial trend. Chesterton explained, as follows: "There are at this moment all the materials for the building up of a slave state. We have to-day all the wealth and employing power in comparatively few hands and a vast mass of people dependent upon these rich men. That vast mass of men is very turbulent, often desperate, often starving and constantly throwing civilization out of gear by strikes and revolts.

Compromise Means Slavery.

Somebody will suggest a compromise in which one class will guarantee decent hours, decent conditions, decent holidays, in return for which there will be insistence that men do not strike. The moment you have that you have slavery; you undertake to feed your slaves and your slaves undertake to obey. It might be a good bargain for them.

With compulsory arbitration of property, you institute slavery, you create a runaway slave law. I hate slavery and will resist it to the last, but it is not a thing the Catholic Church could say was poisoning the soul. How can the Catholic Church condemn slavery in so many words without condemning about half the political and social institutions of human industry?

Mr. Chesterton pleaded for an impartial history of the world, saying the most deplorable hypocrite in the face of God's earth was the modern scientific historian.

ADVERTISE FAIR OVER WIDE AREA

Many Enquiries From Exhibitors For Space In The Buildings

By the 1st of September, 15,000 large two-color circulars, advertising the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition, the dates of which are September 12th to 15th, will have been mailed to every rural route boxholder, as far east as Belleville, Oshawa in the west, Orillia in the north, and Port Hope to the south.

That the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition is being recognized as one of the leading Ontario exhibitions, is evident by the fact of the many inquiries from outside exhibitors for space. One of the latest inquiries was from Messrs. Beardmore & Company, Toronto, one of Canada's largest leather manufacturers.

Arrangements are being made for music continuously just inside the George Street entrance, as well as in front of the grand stand, and plans are now being prepared for the erection of an attractive band stand at this entrance to accommodate the musicians, and to give the patrons a better chance to enjoy the music.

Secretary Hall reports an unprecedented inquiry for prize lists, so that everything points to the biggest and best exhibition Peterboro has ever had.

CITY IS CLEANER NOW THAN FOR MANY YEARS

"The city is cleaner now than it has been since I came here," Dr. T. W. H. Young, Medical Officer of Health, told the Examiner to-day.

There are no cards displayed for contagious diseases, and the Isolation Hospital is empty of patients.

More than 80 old houses have been equipped with sewer connections this year, replacing the old unsanitary out-door closets.

This is felt by Doctor Young to be a big step towards sustained good health in the city.

To Address Local Citizens On The Question of Fuel

Messrs. E. L. McIntyre of Toronto, chairman of the Special Fuel Committee of the C.M.A., and Howard Stutchbury of Edmonton, Trade Commissioner for the Province of Alberta, will be in this city during their tour of the Province to-morrow, August 24th and will speak to the manufacturers, City Council, Chamber of Commerce, and coal dealers at 11 a.m. in the Chamber of Commerce rooms on the question of fuel.

This question in Ontario is a serious one, and the Chamber of Commerce has, for years taken an active part in the effort to solve the problem. The use of domestic fuels forms an important part of the 'Produced in Canada' movement, and members generally throughout Canada are co-operating in every way possible.

FIRST OF PEACH CROP ON MARKET

Corn Is Scarce and Unsatisfactory and Fotatoes Steady in Price

The advance agents of the Niagara peach crop reached Peterboro this week in the "Yellow Flesh" variety, selling at from 85c to $1.00 for eleven-quart baskets. The quality is good and the crop promises well.

Corn on the cob at 35c a dozen is scarce and small, and comparatively dear. The early cabbage is scarce and has been described as wormy. It sells at from 10c to 25c a head. The later stock has been revived by the recent rains, and is expected to take its regular place on the market. Cauliflower looks to be a poor crop at present but may recover; the heads now selling bring fro. 15c to 25c.

Plums are fairly plentiful at from 75c to $1.10 a basket, and are reaching the height of their season, whereas peaches have three or four weeks ahead of them.

Blueberries from Sudbury and North Bay are 25c and 30c a quart or $2.25 and $2.50 a basket. The The quality is good, and this supply is the last of the berry varieties.

Apples are rather scarce, from 60c to $1 a peck, but tomatoes are coming forward more freely at 65c and 75c a basket. The local crop has been slow in ripening, but the vines are said to be heavily loaded.

California grapes at 40c a pound are almost in the luxury class, but have been selling steadily. Cantaloupes are from 15c to 40c each, and bananas are rather high at 40c to 60c a dozen. Dealers say that the demand for fruit and vegetables this summer has been unusually heavy, indicating that the potato is meeting with more and more opposition where it used to have the board all to itself. It that the early supply is light, and the price is holding at 60c a peck.

The small vegetables are abundant, and at the usual standard price of 5c a bunch.

REPORT LIGHT FROSTS FROM SOME SECTIONS

CHICAGO, August 23. Canadian Press — Although warmer weather was promised in the forecasts today, Eastern, Southern and Mid-Western sections of the country continued to shiver and records for cold August weather with light frosts were reported from sections gripped by cool waves.

Flocks of migrating purple martins and teal reported flying southward over Chicago, were said by those versed in bird lore to indicate an early winter.

SLIPPED DOWN SHAFT DIED INSTANTANEOUSLY

HAMILTON, Aug. 23. Canadian Press. — John Grabeck, aged 35, who resided at Tuckett's farm, was fatally hurt when he slipped and fell down an elevator shaft at the plant of the Steel Company of Canada. He had been working at the top of the shaft, and dropped 15 feet; his head was badly smashed and death was almost instantaneous.

TO BATHE OR NOT TO BATHE THE QUESTION

Who Owns Certain Lake Frontage at Chemong Park a Vexed Question Just Now.

PERSONAL MENTION

"To bathe or not to bathe," is the dilemma of certain residents of Chemong Park at the present time. At least the question of whether they shall bathe in a certain portion of the lake or not is an agitated one among a few of the cottagers just now. Whether the lake frontage belongs to the general public, whether it belongs to private owners, or whether it constitutes a sort of No Man's Land, dangerous to all alike, there's the difficulty.

Like an echo from the long ago, comes the memory of a new resident at Chemong who craved privacy, and proceeded to fence in his portion of the water-front from trespassing figures. During the dark hours, certain men made a nocturnal visit and demolished his fences, for the residents of Chemong Park are not in sympathy with the 'close corporation' style of neighbor.

It appears that, when the Park was first mapped out, a portion of the lake front, extending inland for thirty feet was set aside for the use of the general public. On an old pencil map of the Park, this portion is marked the Esplanade, and was open to all comers. Lot holders on the lake front had no more right to his thirty feet than anyone else. Their boundaries ended where the strip began. At the end of every four lots, also to further facilitate general use of the bathing-beach, a narrow "road allowance" was marked off, to afford access to the water for residents on the upper levels.

The present contention, however, of some of the lot-holders is that the Government dams installed farther up during the forty-five years or so since the Park was mapped out, have raised the water levels to such an extent as to completely submerge and wash away the original thirty-foot strip.

A Sunday Dip

Now comes a summer resident of the Park, who essays a Sunday dip in the clear waters of the lake. He makes temporary use of the boat-house platform of another resident, living on the hill, who promptly makes objection to such privileges, saying that the bather has no right there at all.

And here a delicate question is raised by certain other residents, who make the assertion that the owner of the boat-house, not living on the water-front, has no right to have a boat-house at that point. The problem is a triangular one. (1) Has a man who has a permanent boat-house located on disputed territory, a right to object to the temporary presence of a bather on that erritory (2) Are they both using the old Esplanade (3) Are they both on private property?

Evidently the boat-house proprietor doesn't believe in the "human form divine" theory, or perhaps he has become soured in mind through observing the various manifestations of that form that take to the water during the hot days of the summer.

At any rate, there is needed to settle the question, a gentleman with a surveying rod who can determine just which is fish and which is flesh and whether the outer fringes of the lot-holders' domains are becoming contaminated by the free-for-all portion of the lake front. Probably the visiting bather may find himself compelled to take a boat and far forth in it to find the portion of beach which might still have resisted the attack of encroaching waters, or he may be able, after expert advice has been had, to keep "one foot on the land, and one on the sea," in perfect legal safety, knowing that the Esplanade, although submerged, still remains somewhere under the water in the vicinity of the Park.

Weather is Cool

The cool weather of the past few days sent some of the cottage-holders scurrying into town, and the rest of them closed their doors and windows and lit the fires in their stoves. "All the comforts of home" is the slogan of Chemong Park at most times and one lady improved the chilly but shining hour by doing up a quantity of tomato catsup for winter use in town.

There have been various excursions up to the Lakes during the past few days. On Monday, the united members of the congregations of the Methodist, Presbyterian and Baptist churches of Bobcaygeon had their picnic, on Tuesday the Gilmour Memorial Church had its annual lake outing, and yesterday, the township of Ennismore set out for a boat excursion, attended by some of the residents of Chemong Park. The high wind of Tuesday, raised the waters of the lake to such seawave dimensions as to forbid the taking of the boat through the gap at the bridge on its return journey. Passengers were landed on the bridge itself by means of a long, teetering plank.

Visitors to Park

Visitors to the Park are not as numerous as in the warmer weather

Thought Canada Covered with Gold So Stowaway Came to Gather Some

TORONTO, August 23. Canadian Press. — "I thought Canada was covered with gold," declared Frank Moran, a 13 year old stowaway from Northampton, who appeared before Judge Mott to-day in the Juvenile Court, charged with vagrancy. The boy was apprehended early this morning, and sent to a detention home to await the opening of the Juvenile Court.

Moran's tale is one of wanderings and adventures. According to his story he left Liverpool as a stowaway on the steamship Montcalm last May, when he hid under some bunks and was not discovered until the steamer was two days out.

On reaching Canada he went from town to town, and from city to city, "oppin' freights," to use his own words, until he arrived in Toronto yesterday with two cents in his pockets.

The names of the cities and the towns he has visited are legion. He mentions Montreal, Ottawa, Brockville, Prescott, Port Hope and Brantford. His case was remanded for a week.

One Thousand Persons Homeless Through Invasion of Flood Waters

FOWLER, Colo., Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.)— Approximately 1,000 persons are homeless to-day and damage estimated at $6,000,000 has been done by flood waters, which rushed down the valleys of the Apishapa and Arkansas rivers yesterday and to-day, following the breaking of an irrigation project dam near here.

Five hundred persons have moved out of the danger zone in North La Junta, according to word received here, and approximately that number fled from their homes in the valley below the dam.

Observers saw a dozen houses and many carcasses of cattle and horses as well as huge trees, tumbling along on the crest of the flood after the dam broke yesterday.

BIG POWER PLANT NEAR SHERBROOKE

Work Will Be Started Immediately on Plant to Develop 30,000 Horse-Power at Hemmings Falls.

SHERBROOKE, Que., Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press).— The development of 30,000 horsepower at Hemmings Falls, On the St. Francis River, near Drummondville, has now definitely been decided upon by the Southern Canada Power Co. Ltd. and the contract for the construction work in connection with this development has just been awarded to the Foundation Company, Limited, of Canada. The Engineers of Southern Canada Power Company have been working on plans for the development of the power site at Hemmings Falls for the past few months, and following the granting of the contract, it is understood the preliminary work will commence at once.

Nothing Revealed of Cabinet Meeting.

OTTAWA, Aug. 23.— (Canadian Press.)—Nothing was given out for publication following yesterday afternoon's meeting of the Cabinet council. Premier King intimated that any appointments made could not be announced until such time as the orders in council were signed by the governor-general who is still in the Maritime provinces.

Asked whether the Federal government proposed to take any action in connection with the suspension of the Home Bank, the premier intimated that nothing could be done untitl the Curator, who is in charge of the bank's affairs, submits his report.

It is not known whether this cabinet at its sessions, yesterday, dealt with the various appointments which are still to be made. A registrar must be chosen to act under the combines investigation act, two vacancies in the Senate must be filled, one in the exchequer court, one on the railway commission as well as a couple of Judicial offices. It is considered quite possible that a commission of inquiry into the steel-coal industry in Cape Breton may be established.

The Cabinet Council meets again to-day.

FARM CONDITIONS IN MIDDLE WEST STATES ARE FAR FROM GOOD

Agrarian Population Very Dissatisfied and Many Are Planning to Move to the Prairie Provinces of Canada.

COLONIZATION WORK.

OTTAWA, Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—Farming conditions in the middle western states are not as satisfactory as in the prairie provinces, in the judgment of W. J. Black, Deputy Minister of Immigration in the Canadian government who returned to Ottawa yesterday, after attending a meeting of the Canada Colonization Association, at Winnipeg, and making a study of problems affecting his department.

While in the west, Mr. Black paid a visit to St. Paul, where he attempted to get in touch with the outlook of the farmer in the middle western states. He found hat the agrarian, population there was even more dissatisfied with its lot than was the case in Canada that there was the same restless desire to move to other states or across the boundary line to begin over again in new surroundings and that there seemed every prospect that American farmers would come to the western provinces in more than sufficient numbers to balance any loss sustained through removals from that part of the country.

Commenting upon the work of the Canadian Colonization Association the Deputy Minister of Immigration said that the efforts of this organization had, up to the present time been chiefly directed towards settling farmers from the United States upon western farms. As time went on he expected that the activities of the association would be carried on upon a broader scope and would include Old Country immigrants as well as Americans.

Every effort would be made by the colonization association, Mr. Black stated, to find work to tide British harvest hands over the winter so that they could settle permanently in the country. Many of them, he claimed had some money which they were ready to invest in farm lands and every assistance would be rendered this class by immigration and colonization officials.

Asked about the operation of the empire settlement act the deputy minister said those sections of the legislation pertaining to juveniles and domestic help were working smoothly but that the nominating regulation had not been long in force to judge of its effect upon immigration.

Under the Empire settlement Act, Mr. Black explained, eighty dollars was advanced as passage money for boys and girls in the Old Country to come to Canada. Of this amount $40 was subscribed by the Dominion and $40 by Imperial authorities. The money advanced for passage in the case of domestic labor took the form of a loan. Under the third class prospective immigrants were nominated by citizens of Canada. It was stipulated that they settle upon the land and 75 per cent of their passage money was advanced to them.

"No grants or loans were made to harvest hands by the government" the Deputy Minister said. There was an impression in some quarters, he felt that such men had received financial assistance from the Canadian authorities but this was incorrect.

Only Two Harvesters Are Still Out of Work.

OTTAWA, Aug. 23.— (Canadian Press.)—All the Old Country harvesters with the exception of two, who have been stranded in Winnipeg, have been placed, according to information received by the department of immigration. A high official of the department was asked yesterday afternoon whether or not there would be an investigation into the circumstances suggesting the stranding of the men and he replied that there appeared to be no need for such an investigation under the circumstances. A few of the men who were without money to go to outside points were being taken care of by arrangement between the department and the railways.

The department here states that there has been a great deal of exaggeration connected wtih the affair. Any difficulties experienced by the men were of a very temporary nature, it is stated, and were partly due to the fact that it is impossible to forecast just when the harvesting work will begin.

Belgian Cabinet Approved Reply

BRUSSELS, Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.)— The Belgian government's reply to the British government's reparations note will not be sent to London before Saturday or Monday. A cabinet meeting yesterday afternoon approved the main line of the note.

It is understood that the communication will strictly maintain Belgium's viewpoint on the question of priority in payments. It will also set forth with great detail proposals to exploit German state undertakings and will suggest some sort of an inter-allied conference.

SMUTS SPEECH A WARNING OF WAR

General Hertzog Sees a Message in Speech Made at Bloemfontein Recently

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press Cable). General Hertzog leader of the nationalists, in a statement commenting on Premier Smuts' speech at the South African party's congress at Bloomfontein in which he appealed for South Africa to stand in sympathy with Great Britain in her effort to save Europe from destruction declared: "A new European war stares us in the face, this time with France. That is the message which Premier Smuts gave us last week."

General Hertzog says that although the premier of South Africa knew that Europe was moving towards war he neglected the opportunity of obtaining a mandate from parliament as to whether the Union of South Africa should participate in the war if it came but left the question to be dealt with at the imperial conference. He protests at considerable length against "this flagrantly unconstitutional action," and warm Premier Smuts that this will lead to a return of discord and bitterness in the Union of South Africa.

BEER WILL HELP TEMPERANCE ACT

Most People Satisfied With Good Beer--Would Ignore Intoxicants.

ST LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 23.—(United Press).—Beer will help enforce the Eighteenth Amendment, according to Congressman R. C. Dyer, St. Louis.

With this in view, Congressman Dyer plans to introduce at the session of Congress next December a resolution to amend the Volstead Prohibition Enforcement Act by authorizing the manufacture of beer with an alcoholic content of three and one-half per cent.

"Most people will be satisfied with good beer," is the way Dyer put it. "They would then help enforce the law as to intoxicating liquors."

Dyer's amendment would fix the alcoholic content of beverages at 2.75 per cent. by weight, which would amount to about 3.50 per cent. by volume.

"This quantity of alcohol in beer is not intoxicating, and I have abundant proof of that assertion from hearings held before the House Judiciary Committee, of which I am a member," he said. This committee will receive the resolution for consideration after its introduction.

A similar resolution will be introduced in the Senate.

"All this turmoil, dissatisfaction and unrest should convince a Congressman that a change is desired. The law is not being enforced, even though a horde of prohibition agents is at large. This failure in enforcement is inducing disrespect of law and making more law violators."

POSTCARD 14 YEARS IN MAILS

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 23.—(Associated Press)—A postcard, mailed from Astoria, Long Island, fourteen years ago, has just reached its destination at Wilmerding, near here.

The card was mailed by Mrs. Margaret Crawford to her brother Jackson Kerr, and was postmarked "Astoria, March 16, 1909."

Postal authorities said they believe the card had slipped into a crevice or some other nook at Astoria, and when found recently by a clerk was sent to Wilmerding.

INCREASE ASKED IN ELEVATOR CHARGES

Terminal Elevators Wish to Charge Half a Cent More Per 100 Pounds For Mixed Grains.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 23. — (Canadian Press.) —An increase of one-half cent per 100 pounds on the elevator charges on mixed grains was asked for by terminal elevator operators at the head of the lakes when their representatives appeared before a session of the grain commissioners here yesterday. Handling charge on mixed grain, receiving, elevating, storing, spouting and insurance against fire for the first fifteen days is at present two cents a hundred pounds. Leslie Boyd, K.C., chairman said the board would consider the application. There were no representations made with regard to other elevator charges.

Chief Commissioner Boyd announced that the present regulations governing screenings would be suspended and a new one drafted embodying the experience derived from tests conducted by the board recently.

J. A. Maharg, chairman of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool, in a telegram to Mr. Boyd, asked that consideration of country elevator charges be deferred as his organization had some important recommendations to submit and it was decided to hold a special session on August 30 at which these rates will be dealt with.

WOMAN SCIEHTIST OPENS A CLINIC

Doctor Rhoda Erdmann in Charge of Institute For Cell Research.

BERLIN, Aug. 23.—(Associated Press)—Doctor Rhoda Erdmann, who was formerly connected with the labratories of the Rockfeller Institute and Yale University, and was compelled by the war to give up her work there in the investigation of the creation of primitive life by artificial means, is in charge of an institute for cell research which has lately been opened in the Institute for Cancer Research in connection with the Berlin University Infirmary.

In 1919 Doctor Erdmann returned to Berlin and became a lecturer in the university. She also began investigations in the cultivation of tissues in continuation of the work done by Leo Loeb and others in the development of parts of the embryo removed from it under the microscope.

By degrees the work of Doctor Erdmann has progressed until it has now been officially inaugurated as a distinct institute. Doctor Erdmann has been helped by the American Emergency Society in financing and organizing her important work. She studied zoology under the late Professor Koch and is directing her investigations especially along lines followed by Professor Alexis Carrel. Arches of Peking

PEKING, Aug. 23.—(Associated Press)—The "pailous," ornamental archlike affairs of wooden beams with carvings and scrolls painted in blues, greens and reds and which lend an added quaintness to Peking's streets, are threatened with destruction through construction of street railways in the capital.

The "pailous" span the principal streets at intervals. Their bases restrict the roadway and would interfere with the proposed surface lines. The municipal authorities are putting up a fight for their preservation or rebiulding where it is absolutely essential that they be pulled down, but the tramway company opposes this idea on the ground of expense.

PRISONERS RESCUED FROM BLAZING JAIL

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti, Aug. 23.—(Associated Press)—The initiative and courage of two privates of the Marine Corps saved the lives recently of 14 Hawaiin prisoners who were trapped in a blazing prison in the village of Cronx des Boquets. Official commendation of the two men in question, Melvin J. B. Griggs of Cincinnati, Ohio, and Russell M. Anderson of Ellsville, Mississippi, was forwarded to the Navy Department by Brig. Gen. John H. Russell, the American High Commissioner to Haiti, and by their brigade commander, Col. Theodore P. Kane.

The prison of Croix des Boquets is constructed of heavy cement walls covered with a thatched roof. A spark from the prison kitchen ignited the roof, and the guards were successful in liberating the women prisoners. In the endeavor to release the fourteen men confined in separate quarters the key became jammed in the lock, and efforts to break the lock with a stone by the native guards were unavailing.

Griggs and Anderson, riding in the vicinity, were attracted by the blaze and rushed to the spot. While Haitains dashed water against the bazing prison, the Americans broke through the wall of fire that blocked the prison door, and smashed the lock with an iron bar. Then they entered the prison and dragged the half-suffocated prisoners to safety. Both men were slightly burned while risking their lives.

INITIAL STEP TO INSURE SUPPLY OF FUEL IN U.S.

Governors of All Eastern States Will Hold Conference With Heads of Railroad Traffic Departments

TO USE SUBSTITUTES.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—Perfection of a system of distribution designed to insure an adequate supply of substitute fuel will be the first object of the U. S. government in case of stoppage of production in the anthracite fields.

The initial step to this end was taken when F. R. Wadleigh, the Federal Fuel Distributor, invited governors of anthracite-consuming states to send representatives to a meeting at New York Aug. 28 to assist in formulating an emergency distributing system. The telegram which went to the executives of the eleven states forming the New England and middle Atlantic tier to and including Maryland, was despatched after a conference between President Coolidge, acting chairman Aitchison of the I.C.C. and Mr. Wadleigh at the White House.

It was announced that the I.C.C. and traffic departments of the principal eastern railroads would be represented at the New York meeting in order that any plan might be worked out to the last detail.

A tentative plan for the institution of central distributing agencies in each state, with supervisory headquarters in Washington to insure priority of transportation, has been worked out by Mr. Wadleigh and will be laid before the conference.

Announcing the call to the governors, Mr. Wadleigh said:

"It is hoped that every state will be represented so that full discussion may be had and definite action taken in order to insure the distribution into the respective states of sufficient amounts of coal and coke to the end that the public may suffer no inconvenience, owing to a lack of fuel for heating its homes, offices, etc.

"An important subject to be discussed will be the matter of education of the consumer in the use of fuels other than anthracite as it is felt that a systematic plan of public instruction can be made of great service in the practical and efficient use of such fuels and will thereby reduce the actual cost of heating with resultant savings to the individual consumer and the community."

Peterboro Band Appreciated on Tour.

FENELON FALLS, Aug. 23.— The Peterborough Salvation Army band, which arrived at the Falls on the afternoon train on Saturday, played a few selections immediately after their arrival, and were then escorted to the Army hall, where a banquet had been prepared for them by the officers and members of the local corps. In the evening they held an open-air concert at the Kawartha Hotel grounds.

On Sunday morning another large open-air meeting was held at the Brooks House. The first half of the band under band-master Robinson then proceeded to St. James' Church, where they supplied the musical part of the service; the second half of the band, under Deputy Band master Smith, furnished the music at the Methodist Church service which was in charge of Brigadier Moore.

In the afternoon a monster musical festival was held at the Kawartha Hotel, followed by an open-air at 6.15, after which the band went to the Methodist Church where service as conducted by Brigadier Moore. After the Church services, on open air concert was given at the Kawartha grounds.

The playing of the band at each and all of the services and open-air festivals was of the very best, and was greatly enjoyed by the very large crowds which attended, some coming quite long distances; including Bobcaygeon Woodville, Coboconk, etc., to hear the famous band.

ALL VERY QUIET IN POLITICAL LONDON

Hard to Get An Official Expression of Opinion Regarding the French Note — May Have Another Conference.

LONDON, Aug 23. — (Canadian Press.)—London in August is comparatively dead politically and diplomatically. Hence it is difficult to gather any official opinion on the latest note of M. Poincare, the French premier, with regard to the German situation. A point much discussed in London last evening is whether the note will lead to another Allied conference in Paris or elsewhere in an endeavour finally to settle the reparations problem.

The general view here is that this was one of the principal objects, M. Poincare was aiming at in his latest expositions of France's policy, but in this connection it was pointed out last night that Premier Baldwin in recent statements in parliament and elsewhere made the assertion that the British government was not in a mood for much further delay in settling the issue.

John R. Clynes, former Food Controller and one of the leading labor members of parliament last night expressed the opinion that taken as a test of France's desire to get a reparations settlement instead of permanent dominion over a large part of German territory, M. Poincare's note was disappointing.

The Belgian government's reply is expected to reach London to-day and in view of Belgium's previous efforts to reconcile Anglo-French differences hope is entertained that Belgium's new views may further modify the situation.

What seems certain is that there will be no notable developments for several days. No steps seem to have been taken to call a cabinet council, and while Lord Curzon, the Foreign Secretary, remains in France, it is hardly possible that any marked steps can be taken.

There was a general admission last night that the tone of M. Poincare's note was much more conciliatory than had been expected and that he showed in it anxiety to maintain the entente unbroken. But as far as the substance of the note was concerned and especially with regard to the Ruhr, his attitude was unyielding.

Unless the British government should accept a suggestion for another Allied conference, it seems that the negotiations will continue, despite Premier Baldwin's recent statement deprecating indefinite discussion, for it is considered that the Poincare note is clearly of a kind calling for a rejoinder.

Alberta Pool a Model For Saskatchewan.

REGINA, Sask., Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.)— Col. C. E. Gregory, counsel for the Saskatchewan wheat pool, stated yesterday that there would be very little difference between the Saskatchewan wheat pool contract and that of the Alberta already published. "The general principles of the contract are the same in both forms," Col. Gregory stated, "and in general the Alberta contract has been followed almost word for word."

It is expected that the contract will be ready for publication to-day. Col. Gregory gives the following as his opinion of the contract:

"I have gone over the proposed wheat pool contract, as finally revised, clause by clause and am of the opinion that it is an equitable one, fulfilling the requirements of the situation and enforcible in the courts of Saskatchewan."

None of the heirs appealed against the will.

FRENCH REPLY STRIKES POPULAR CHORD WITH THE PRESS AND PUBLIC

West Still Needs Many Harvesters

WINNIPEG, Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.)—Railway officials are in conference here yesterday making a survey of the probable need for more harvesters in the west. It is not expected that the 63,000 men asked for a month ago, will be required, although it is felt that there is still room for a few more thousand. Since the movement of harvesters to the west started 36,725 men have been brought in from eastern Canada and the British Isles.

Plenty of Work For All British Harvesters.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.) —"Probably there were a few British harvesters stranded temporarily— just as there have been some stranded here—but they are at work now if they want to be," declared William Carnill, superintendent of the Calgary labor office and in charge of Alberta harvest employment here, who along with the Saskatchewan representative yesterday said reports that the men were stranded and without jobs were without foundation. According to the Alberta and Saskatchewan officials 8,000 men are still needed. They declared jobs are waiting for them, regardless of previous experience, and all other considerations except their ability to stand the test of hard work. "As for experience being a requisite to a job don't believe it," said Mr. Carnill. "Thousands of men take on the harvest for the first time every year and thousands of them make good at it. Of course there are failures in every lot."

Poincare's Attitude Meets With Enthusiastic Support in France—British Papers Differ Regarding Policy Towards Germany.

MORE DISCUSSION.

PARIS, August 23. Canadian Press — Premier Poincare's reply to Marquis Curzon's note seems to suit the French press and to strike a popular chord in public opinion. Few of the members of Parliament are now in Paris, most of them being occupied in meetings of the general councils of the various departments, but those who are in the lobbies of the Chamber yesterday afternoon united in approving the Premier's stand.

The part of the note that appealed most to the political leaders was that in which M. Poincare asked Lord Curzon whether France should be treated by her allies more severely than Great Britain wanted to treat Germany, their common enemy.

Great stress was also laid on the assertion that, if the British theory prevailed the Germans would emerge from the calamity of their own making with no interior debt, and a foreign debt of only 50 billion marks, with an annual interest charge very much less than that France is obliged to bear. At the same time it was declared Germany had profited from the stoppage of work in the Ruhr by putting her industries in such shape that when a settlement was finally reached she would be able to compete more sharply than ever with those countries which suffered damage at her hands.

for Community Action in Control of European Corn Borer

No single farmer can expect to keep his corn crop free of the European Corn Borer unless all his neighbours are also fighting the pest. For this reason some sort of co-operation is essential. You can organize your whole neighborhood by arranging a mutual plan of campaign whereby each farmer undertakes to account for the Corn Borers on his own farm.

This plan will assist in bringing the Corn Borer under control, but without such co-operation, satisfactory results will not be obtained.

A Very Important Point

Cut corn crop low and as soon as it is ready. Burn all corn stalks. Garden sweet corn should all be pulled early and burnt.

Plough down all corn stubble very carefully. Seed to winter wheat where possible. Write for pamphlet, post free.

THE FUEL SITUATION.

With American cities arranging for a supply of Welsh coal, the fuel situation in so far as Ontario is concerned is not reassuring enough to justify the do-nothing attitude of the local authorities towards this problem.

There seems little hope of the anthracite operators and the miners reaching an agreement—and unless the American Government can devise means to avert a strike the production of anthracite will cease at the end of this month.

The Ontario consumer is being told to buy his coal now—advice that is meaningless in most cases.

Beyond this warning, however, there is nothing offered in the way of a solution of the problem, and individual municipalities are being left to find their own way out—which means that in many centres, Peterborough included, the burden is simply passed over to the citizens.

Western Ontario municipalities are showing more progress, and later, on the result of this civic enterprise, will be appreciated by the public.

Arrangements are being made for the importation of Alberta coal, some of which is already arriving, and it is announced that it will be sold in one-ton lots at a price lower than that of American anthracite.

The Alberta coal has been found to give good results, and if it is possible to secure a supply that can be sold around the same price as the American article, it is high time that some effort was being made to see what Peterborough can do to supplement her fuel reserve from this source.

FREAK LEGISLATION.

Of the passing of freak legislation by the Legislatures of many of the States of the neighboring Republic there seems to be no end.

The action of the Lower House of the Georgia Legislature in passing a bill imposing a tax of $2,500 on each six performances of opera in cities of that State with more than 100,000 population and $1,000 on each six performances in smaller cities, is an example of this freak law-making and half-baked legislation.

Taxing grand opera as if it were a crime, instead of a demonstration of art and culture, is a folly that can only be explained by charging it to the anxiety of rural representatives to prevent their city cousins from indulging in such luxuries as superior music.

That is to say, the sponsors of the measure were not so concerned with creating revenue as they were in trying to fix a tax that would drive opera out of Georgia.

If the Upper House and the Governor approve of the measure it will be a sad commentary upon the good sense and culture of the Southern State.

There have been Legislatures in Canada which have been guilty of unwise and aimless legislation, but the Examiner fails to recall any measure passed on this side of the line quite equalling the Georgia bill, which apparently seeks to put a prohibitive tax upon an enterprise that contributes to the education of every community in which it may be located.

WILLINGNESS VS. ABILITY TO PAY.

While the report of Mr. Basil Miles to the International Chamber of Commerce confirms the admitted fact that France is not getting out of the Ruhr all the material returns for which she had hoped, it also emphasizes the ability of the Ruhr region, and of all of Germany, to make a quick recovery as soon as the deadlock is ended and the finances are placed on a sound basis. French expectations have undoubtedly been somewhat disappointed, in spite of the fact that France went into the Ruhr as a means to bringing Germany to a sense of her responsibilities rather than as a method of increasing the deliveries in cash and kind for the account of reparations.

Mr. Miles, who is a trained observer with years of experience in studying and investigating international problems, makes particular reference to the reaction of the employers in the Ruhr to the French occupation. Unwilling to work for the French, they have devoted their energies to betterments and improvements.

Accordingly, the factories and plants are being carefully overhauled, new veins of coal are being opened, factory extensions are being pushed forward, and housing schemes for workmen enlarged. A particularly striking example of new development on a large scale is the enormous 1,100-foot lock in the Dortmund-Herne Canal at Ruhrort to cost, it is said, 300,000,000 gold marks.

These and many other similar details have been previously reported not only from the Ruhr but also from the rest of Germany. Improving and renovating are among the few effective methods of saving which can be employed under existing monetary conditions. Mr. Miles' conclusions, so far as the Ruhr is concerned, is that given six months or a year of freedom from allied control the Ruhr, as a result of the improvements now being made, will be able to produce more than at any time heretofore.—New York Times.

A VISION OF 2023.

Among our futile fancies are those that wander off to adventure about the world as it may be after we have left it and are forgotten.

Less depressing and perhaps less profitable to the spirit are excursions into the past. To us who live precariously from day to day, it, too, is a dim, far off country, well spoken off by those who were there, but unconvincing. They would persuade us that their little day was the fullest and the best, even as we shall vainly extol ours to those who come after us.

The hollowness of our satisfaction with life as we are making it is disclosed to us by Dr. Charles P. Steinmetz, the electrical wizard of Schnectady. A century hence this world, which we as transients call ours, will present an amazing transformation.

To the people of 2023, unreal as they seem to us, we shall appear more helpless in the struggle for advancement than do our ancestors who saw the first steamboats appear to us.

And the transforming agent will be electricity, which Dr. Steinmetz prophesies will be at the service of the humblest. Brows will sweat then less than now, for men will work only four hours a day, and the working year will be but two hundred days. Dull monotonous labour, back-breaking drudgery will be reduced to a comfortable minimum, and with leisure there will not be a multiplicity of new, idle, wasteful diversions, but educational interests will be stimulated in every direction and "man will become a highly informed and much more intelligent and self-expressive creature than he is in the mass today."

The four-hour day! We have been cheated by the fates, and begin to feel like those labourers who worked through the toil and the heat of the day for the very same wage as those who were hired an hour before the whistle blew.

There, Death, is thy sting.

OLD BOY CELEBRATIONS.

In view of the fact that "Old Boy" celebrations are still popular in this section of Ontario, the following article from the current issue of the Financial Post is of interest:

"The failure of recent old boys' gatherings would seem to indicate that the popularity of these events has run its course.

"Merchants, who from time to time have been called upon to donate generously towards the preliminary expenses, hoping that when the event was staged they would get their money back plus a substantial profit, have found of late that things were not working out as they used to. In other words, one very essential element has been conspicuous by its absence—the old boys with their buying power.

"The recent celebration at London and the 1922 celebration at Windsor stand out as the most conspicuous cases. There has been a great deal of fun produced, but little business. The old boys did not come home because there were no cheap fares on the railways, and the old girls and boys at home quit buying to celebrate. The result is that merchants found that the celebration made for a decline in regular business rather than a generous boost in turnover."

True to its mission, the Post views the institution solely from a financial standpoint, says the Belleville Intelligencer. The article will certainly disturb the "old" boys and girls in whose hearts there dwells that age-old love of home and their "ain folk."

If the mercenary spirit is as dominant in these celebrations as the Financial Post would have us believe, another cherished illusion has been rudely dispelled, the clay feet of another idol have been exposed.

Personally, we believe that the Post "is talking through its hat" and that the business men of the average village or city are as eager to welcome the "old" boys and girls as the latter are to visit the old home town, and, further, we believe that the said business men would be willing to "go down into their pockets" if necessary to insure the success of such celebrations. In Ontario at least, romance is not dead.

TAXATION AND FAILURES.

Taxation has been a theme upon which we have written over and over again, and it is a subject of vast importance to Canada. Fortunately the public is taking deeper interest in it: this was well shown in the Ontario elections, in which taxation formed a great issue, and it is said to have been almost the sole issue in the Prince Edward Island elections. There is no doubt that it will form the chief indictment against the Dominion Government when it dares to go to the country, and this administration will meet the same fate as these two defeated Governments did in consequence of extravagance and consequent taxation.

The Financial Post recently very wisely drew attention to one result of taxation which is not very generally noticed; that is the connection there is between high taxes and failures. A comparison is made between Canada and the United States in this respect. This shows that during the six months ending in June the number of business failures in Canada was 1,990, or one for every 4,523 of the population. In the United States during the same period the number of failures was 9,925, or one for every 11,080. In the United States the Director of the Budget has issued a statement to the effect that the Federal revenue during the current fiscal year will probably be about $150,000,000 below that of last year. In Canada the increase in customs and excise collections during the first quarter of the fiscal year has been from $81,741,000, the figures for the same quarter last year to $99,367,000.

This means that taxation in Canada is taking away more money which could have gone into promoting business of all kinds than the United States, in other words, it is taking capital. As the Financial Post says: "The foregoing figures seem to indicate that the American Government is leaving with the general buying public more money with which to buy. In this country the reverse is the case. The Director of the Budget in the United States estimates the Federal revenue for this year at a little over $3,500,000,000, and as there was a surplus last year of $100,000,000, the Federal Government took in taxes about $33 per head. In Canada the Federal Government took in taxes approximately $394,000,000, or $44 per head, that is one-third more than was taken on the other side of the line."

Some people imagine that an increase in revenue means greater prosperity, quite forgetting that it is taxation which produces the revenue, and that, as we have shown, this may have, and in fact, has evil results. And the worst of it is that even with this high taxation the Dominion Government is not paying its way; there was a deficit of nearly $50,000,000 in the last Budget. This is inexcusable: Great Britain, in spite of her taxation, had a surplus. So did New Zealand, and so did the United States. It is evident that what Canada needs is a Government which will make a real effort to reduce expenditure and practise the strictest economy.—Kingston Standard.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Three times in a week Montreal police have either killed or wounded a suspected thief resisting arrest. This drastic treatment is likely to take much of the allurement out of the profession.

Better protection against fire is being called for at summer resort hotels. Yet only a short time ago a representative of the Fire Marshall's Department eulogized the precautions taken at the Wawa Hotel.

The anthracite miners want a 20 per cent. wage increase, and the operators say they won't pay it. Of course not—that is where the consumer comes it.

Sir Frederick Stupart declares the new ice age may be coming, but is not likely to arrive for the next twenty or forty thousand years. And a lot of people will start in worrying for fear the minimum figure is the more accurate.

TORONTO CATTLE.

TORONTO, Aug. 23.—The cattle market opened very dull and draggy yesterday morning. Prices dropped about 25 cents on all grades. The receipts included 460 western cattle and there were about 1,300 cattle held over from Tuesday. Exporters bought three loads at $7.30 to $7.50, and best butchers sold at $6.50 to $7.00. Trade in butcher cows is dull. Good cows bring $4.00 to $5.00. Bulls are selling at $4.00 to $4.50. Good Holstein milkers and springers are in demand, and sell up to $110.

There are many heavy cattle on the market, that have been shipped in because of the lack of pasture and water. They are not good enough for export, and are too rough and heavy for domestic trade. The abbatoirs are buying them in at about 50 to 75 cents under last week's price, from $5.75 to $6.50 per hundred. Choice handyweight butcher steers and heifers of about 900 lbs. continue to hold about steady and are in demand.

Calves held about steady at $10.00 to $11.50. The demand in the Buffalo market is still keeping up the prices. Owing to the cool weather heavier calves sold well.

The receipts of sheep were over 3,000 again today. Farmers are shipping in the buck lambs before the cut in price of $1.50 which takes effect after this week. A large percentage of this morning's run was buck. They sold generally at about $10.50, but some good lots sold up to $11.50.

Hogs held firm at $10.85 for thick smooth fed and watered.

CHICAGO WHEAT.

CHICAGO, August 23 (Canadian Press). — Buying of December corn just before the close started a covering movement on the part of shorts and served to increase the demand for grain from other sources. As a result wheat prices rallied and closed near the top prices of the day, final figures showing a net gain of 3-8c to 3-4c, with December 105 to 105 1-8, and May 110 1-2 to 110 5-8.

Corn was up 1-4c to 1 7-8c; oats 1 1-8c to 1 1-2c higher, and provisions unchanged to 15c lower.

OMEMEE CORRESPONDENCE

OMEMEE, Aug. 23.—The copious rainfall of Tuesday has cast a smile over the community in general. While a number of farmers have completed harvesting, there are many who still have a large percentage of their grain to garner in.

Grain threshing is in full swing, and the prospects for an average output are not as gloomy as was at one time anticipated. The alsike in this district has been a splendid yield, while the market price, which was $6 per bushel, has taken a slight drop.

Corn and potatoes, and in fact all garden vegetables, are a scarcity, as a result of the dry weather, and it is hoped this long-expected rain has arrived before it is too late to promote their growth.

Church Parade.

About sixty-five members of the Royal Black Preceptory attended divine worship in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday evening. Many visitors from Dunsford, Millbrook, Lindsay and Peterboro lodges were present. The parade from the lodge rooms was led by Messrs. W. D. Stinson and R. J. Patterson, and was greeted at the church entrance by the Rev. J. Black, pastor of the church, who later welcomed the Order in a few well-chosen words to this service. He took for his text the words of Scripture found in Judges vii., 4: "God's message to Gideon," pointing out the willingness for service.

At the close of the service the local Orangemen served lunch to the visiting brethren and their wives in the lodge room.

FRENCH REPLY

Discussion to Continue

Comment in official quarters indicates plainly that Premier Poincare anticipates a continuation of the discussion with the British cabinet. In political circles outside the government there is not so much confidence that London will desire to go on with the discussion, but nowhere among public men or in the press does there appear any great apprehension as to the consequences of eventual separate action by the British government.

U. S. participation in any international expert conference to fix Germany's capacity to pay is regarded as altogether unlikely, and it is not thought the British will desire to take the risk of proposing reference to the Ruhr occupation question to the International Court at the Hague in the face of France's refusals to accept the jurisdiction of the court in question.

LONDON, August 23. — The morning newspapers commenting on Premier Poincare's note readily acknowledge and express appreciation of his courteous and friendly tone. A majority of them, however, are disappointed over the substance of the note and declare that, in effect, it leaves things just where they were.

The Daily Telegraph, after a long analysis of the note, comes to the conclusion that there is little hope for an agreement between Great Britain and France, either with regard to the Ruhr or the amount of reparations or the question of interallied debts. "For all practical purposes," says this newspaper, "the note leaves things precisely as they were and advertes no approximation to a common ground on which Great Britain and France can hope to renew the united action which both nations deeply desire."

The Daily Chronicle thinks that, taken at its face value, the note would put an end to all hopes of common action between Great Britain and France, but believing that M. Poincare's words are addressed to French critics rather than to Great Britain it thinks it is possible to read between the lines some indication of French willingness to come to terms.

Only Alternatives.

"But," the Daily Chronicle adds, "the French must either come to terms with us at once, before we are all involved in disaster, or we must part company at once."

The Daily News thinks the tenor of the note shows that the outspokenness of the last British note had an excellent effect in clearing the air and believes it is to be inferred that France now will think twice before taking further drastic steps.

"But," the newspaper adds, "we cannot see that in substance the note carried the world nearer a solution of the reparations problem or points the way to the rescue of Central Europe from total ruin. M. Poincare forgets nothing, admits nothing and proposes nothing than what had been proposed with less urbanity before."

"The note," says the Westminster Gazette, "serves only to demonstrate how impossible it is to reconcile the British policy toward Germany with the policy of the French Government. . . . The note imposes on the British Government the duty of facing the necessity of separate action at which it hinted in its last communication to France. We have striven hard or a settlement with the entente. We must now work for it without any hampering qualifications, and in this we shall be taking a step in the interests of neutral nations who are suffering from France's Ruhr policy, and who are all looking to us for a firm lead."

Support for France.

The Daily Mail, pursuing its undeviating advocacy of the French viewpoint, says the note gives the British government a great opportunity. "If this opportunity is seized," the newspaper adds, "the mischief of the past three years can be undone and the entente restored. A restoration of the entente means the early capitulation of Germany and the restoration of peace in Europe."

The Daily Mail urges the British and French governments to get together and rid themselves of the points at issue by sober and sensible discussion.

The Morning Post, which is also strongly pro-French in its sympathy argues that the time has come to cease exchanging notes. It hopes a period of serious business will soon begin, warmly praising M. Poincare's note, the newspaper says it shows the two governments have so much in common that when a meeting between Premier Baldwin and M. Poincare, which the newspaper advocates, occurs, they may succeed in reaching that common formula which alone can save Europe from ruin.

WARSAW CROPS TURN OUT WELL

Hay Crop Was Good — Other Grains Better Than Expected.

WARSAW, Aug. 22.—S. Whatley, E. Payne and Wm. Crowe are kept busy threshing. Many farmers had their peas threshed in the field. The hay crop was so good many have to thresh before they can put in all the grain.

On the whole, grain is turning out better than was expected, especially with earlier sowing on well prepared land and with treated seed. Rust and smut are generally reported bad, where seed grain was not treated.

In low places and following late sowing there is a good deal of light grain, which will be used as feed.

While many farmers have their grain well harvested, there are some who have but little drawn in and there are even a few fields of peas out.

Recent rains gave root crops, corn, potatoes and etc., a refreshing drink and did not hinder grain harvests. Tuesday's rain gave the land the first soaking since early summer and there is now a tinge of green on the pastures.

Thrown From Wagon.

SHOWERS.

Thus ran the old adage,
In days that are gone,
"Happy is the bride Whom the sun shines upon."

But time brings strange changes,
And at this present hour,
"It's happy the bride,
Upon whom falls the shower."

And the greater the shower,
E'en the dullest may see,
That all the more happy,
The fair bride ought to be.

But, of course, on the kind
Of the shower much depends,
Whether down from dark drizzling
Skies it descends.

Or falls like soft petals
From sweet-scented flowers,
Friendship's kind loving tokens—
Miscellaneous showers.

PTOMAINE POISONING

It may be that many laymen are not informed as to the real nature of ptomaine poisoning. The word, ptomaine—or more properly ptomatine — is derived from the Greek, meaning fallen body, or corpse. Some physicians argue that the word should not be used in connection with food poisoning. They claim real ptomaines form only in human bodies after death, and at present are only two in number.

Scientists who made a special study of such bacterial poisons are called toxicologists.

Twenty-five years ago, many of the important laboratories, in our great cities and also at the universities, were eagerly carrying out the study of ptomaines. This was on account of the expressed hope that science might clear up the true chemistry of bacterial poisoning. Not much interest is being manifested to-day. This is owing to the fact that ptomaines were found to be not very toxic. On the other hand, very poisonous ptomaines may be formed by non-pathogenic bacteria. What this means to the layman is that there is really comparatively little food poisoning caused by the presence of ptomaines.

The poisoning from which persons suffer who are commonly said to have this trouble is contracted by eating food that is partially spoiled or decomposed. This may be improperly preserved canned meats, tinned fish or other fish, sausage, cheese, ice cream or milk. Under different conditions the same organisms may produce totally different types of ptomaines. This is an important fact, when seeking to find the real cause, in a patient.

The symptoms show in one who has been attacked by ptomaine poisoning in a very short time. The system endeavors to throw it off and dizziness is followed by severe headache, chilliness and sharp abdominal pains. In some cases violent vomiting occurs and the patient becomes partially unconscious and sometimes in severe cases coma and death.

In the treatment of ptomaine sufferers, the usual treatment of getting the material out of the stomach before it can enter the system is followed. Use stomach pump at once and empty the gastro-intestinal tract. The physician will then be careful to see that no bacterial growth is present or remains.

In a mild case, that is taken in time, the recovery is often rapid. But great care is required in more severe cases to make sure that the patient does not suffer from complications of the ptomaine. This may cause serious trouble and a long sickness.

Drinks For Children

The hostess who would entertain small folk is sometimes rather at a loss when it comes time for refreshments.

Lemonade won't combine with ice cream or milk in any form and plain water doesn't seem very partyfied. Milk with simple cakes is always permissible, but not especially "different."

These chocolate drinks are very nourishing and sure to please. Graham crackers made into sandwiches with a thin filling of jelly, or bran bread and butter sandwiches would satisfy growing appetites and "go" beautifully with the drinks.

Cream Chocolate.

One-half cake chocolate, 1½ cups sugar, 2 cups water, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 quarts milk, ½ pint whipping cream, 2 teaspoons vanilla.

Grate chocolate. Mix salt, sugar and chocolate. Add boiling water to make a smooth paste and slowly stir into the 2 cups of boiling water. Boil, without stirring, until thick. Cool slightly and add vanilla.

Half fill glasses with cracked ice, add 3 tablespoons chocolate syrup and fill glasses with milk. Top with a small spoonful of whipped cream slightly sweetened and flavored with vanilla.

Children always love to drink through a "straw" and these are an economical device calculated to save napkins.

Chilled cocoa is another nourishing drink not quite so rich as the chocolate cream. Chocolate contains a large amount of fat while cocoa is deficient in this.

Chilled Cocoa.

Four tablespoons cocoa, 1 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 quarts milk, 2 teaspoons vanilla.

Mix cocoa, sugar and salt to a smooth syrup with boiling water. Heat milk and add cocoa mixture. Bring to the boiling point, stirring to prevent sticking, but do not let boil. Beat four or five minutes with a dover beater. Cool rapidly in the sauce pan in a large pan of cold water. Add vanilla and pour onto chipped ice.

A spoonful of whipped cream can top the glass. A "pinch" of dry cocoa is sifted over the top.

This drink may be more elaborate than is usually served at a party from "two to four," but it is so satisfactory for children that it might appeal for some small guests' luncheon.

Chocolate Flip.

One egg, 1 teaspoon cocoa, 2 teaspoons sugar, few grains salt, 1½ cups milk.

Mix sugar, cocoa and salt. Separate white and yolk of egg and beat white till stiff. Beat in cocoa mixture. Add milk to yolk and beat till well mixed. Combine mixtures, pouring the milk onto the white. Mix well and serve. This will make two glasses. If the milk is very cold it will be unnecessary to put ice in the glasses.

VOICE OF PEOPLE

CHURCH UNION.

Editor Examiner:

Sir,—The Presbyterian Witness is broadcasting its Church Union editorials, in advance, all over Canada. Will you therefore kindly permit a few words, first on the Witness, then on its statements.

During the past three years or so The Witness has cost the Presbyterian Church some forty-five thousand dollars, and has thus helped to cause the deficit in her Mission Funds. Another fatcor in that deficit is the attempted coercion, miscalled "Union." There are many who will not give to the church so long as there is attempt to blot out that church by act of Parliament.

In this hisstate of affairs, with missionaries sending home piteous appeals for means to retain their native workers, the Witness, under official direction instead of bending all its energies to the removal of that deficit, and to helping the church which has expended upon it so great a sum, is being devoted to the coercion which is bringing to the church nothing but ill, bringing deficit, division and distrust, and which, continued, will bring disaster.

May I now turn from the Witness to its statements regarding the doctrine and policy of the proposed new church. As to doctrine, the Witness claims that there is full and ample statement of Christian truth in the basis of Union. But the witness omits to state that no one is pledged to acceptance of that basis of Union. In the Presbyterian Church, both ministers and elders, in their ordination vows, profess to accept the standards of the Presbyterian church as "founded on and agreeable to the Word of God" and promise "faithfully to adhere thereto." The people thus know where their ministers and elders stand in relation to Scripture Truth.

But in the proposed New Church the Ordination vows of ministers make no reference whatever to the basis of Union or to its doctrine. In the first draft of that basis there was, among the Ordination vows, one question, as follows,—"Do you believe the Statement of Doctrine of the United Church, as you understand it, to be agreeable to the teaching of the Holy Scriptures, and is your own personal faith in essential agreement therewith?" Later that question was dropped. Note that fact. It was purposely and deliberately dropped. And so the proposed New Church stands for no system of religious truth. It would be a wide open door for every system of error that might choose to claim support from Scripture as all errors do.

Especially in these days would it be an open door to Unitarianism which takes the crown of Deity from Christ, leaves men only an example and robs them of an Almighty Saviour. Further, for the so-called elders in the New Church there are no Ordination vows of any kind whatsoever. And yet the Witness tells that the New Church is Presbyterian and that all things will be the same as they now are.

As to the Witness' statements on Polity, or Government—many things might be noted. I mention two.

First—The presbyterian Church is the people. It is not a corporation. Some of its Boards are incorporated for convenience in holding and managing Trust Funds, but these Boards have no independent powers. They are subject to the Church Courts, to the Assembly; while the Church itself, as an organization, is not incorporated. The people are the Church, and the Church Courts exist to serve the Church within the clearly defined limits of her constitution, having no right or power to blot out or to end the Church as a separate organization.

On the other hand the proposed New Church would be itself a Corporation. Its Church Courts are the Church, and have corporate powers. This is a long, long step from democracy to autocracy, from government by the people to irresponsible clerical despotism.

A second point in the Polity of the New Church is the calling and settlement of ministers. A Presbyterian congregation can call a minister when ready to do so; and the matter is arranged for them by the local presbytery. If the minister accepts the call—well. If not they can at once proceed to call another. They can both call and choose their minister.

In the proposed New Church they can give a call at a certain time of the year, when the Settlement Committee meets, but the appointment rests with that Settlement Committee, at a distance, which meets once a year, and can appoint whom it may choose. If the one who is called does not accept the call, the settlement Committee appoints some one for at least a year. Next year the congrgation may call again and be served in a similar way. The rule of the New Church is as follows—"Any pastoral charge, in view of a vacancy, may extend a call or invitation to any properly qualified minister or ministers, but the right of appointment shall rest with the Settlement Committee, which shall report to the Conference, for information only."

Presbyterians can both call and choose their ministers. In the New Church they may call but they have to take what the Settlement Committee sends them. And yet the Witness tells people that the New Church is Presbyterian, and that there would be no change.

Other points might be noted, but these suffice to show the spirit and type of the proposed New Church. Presbyterians who would barter for it their own Church, world-wide, democratic, Scriptural and free, would be selling their glorious birthright for a yoke of ecclesiastical bondage.

Rail Titans in Death Grip

A twisted mass of steel was all that remained when these two monsters crashed head-on in the Nashville, Tenn., freight yards, killing three and injuring five others of thecrew.

Drive Fat From Waist and Hips

By ANNE DOLAN.

The favorite lodging place of superfluous flesh is about the waist and hips.

We used to keep this accumulation of a dispos- tissue under control by means of stiff corsets. Today, we must get rid of it entirely.

That old trick of touching the floor with the finger tips, holding the knees stiff, is one way to discourage the fat cells. All twisting and bending exercises are good.

But there are other exercises that are just as effective and not quite so tiresome.

Here is one you would do well to master:

Stretch out on a flat surface with the arms stretched out over the head and the feet just escaping the floor or bed. Draw the knees as far over the chest as they will go, at the same time bringing the arms to the sides. Then return to your first position, never letting the feet touch the floor.

This will give you absolute control of your waistline and will reduce heavy thighs most effectually

Or Try This.

Lying flat on your back, raise the legs alternately, and then together to a position at right angles with your body.

Jumping up and down on the ball of the foot is a good way to reduce the calf and strengthen the muscles of the foot and ankle.

Or stand on your toes, as high as you possibly can raise yourself, and balance there while you count 10. Then walk on your tiptoes, or walk with your foot flat on the floor, taking a kick with each step.

More Strenuous.

Kicking and swinging the legs with a pivot-like motion from the hips spells the ruination of fat cells, but requires considerable effort. Walking about on the hands and knees is very good for the figure, though it must be admitted it is not a graceful exercise.

Of course, you know that in your thirties and forties you have a natural tendency to exercise less, eat more and consequently to become thick about the waist and hips. But you must combat this if you want to look young, and you must be conscientious about your diet and exercise.

I prefer to take these exercises in the morning, and I recommend that you do the same. But if you neglect them in the morning, won't you please do them before you retire?

Put on His Feet by Dreco

Dreco effects wonderful improvement in condition of Mr. E. Gutsell, of 122 St. John's Road, Toronto. Read Mrs. Gutsell's remarkable statement.

"For the past two years my husband has suffered from constipation and stomach trouble. His food disagreed with him; gas would bloat him up and he had severe, sharp pains in the pit of his stomach. He felt as though he was smothering at times, what with the gas pressing against his heart, a condition that caused considerable distress.

"He had pains through his back and limbs. Dizzy spells would often come over him so bad that he felt as if he would topple over if he didn't sit down. He was nervous and couldn't rest well and could hardly keep at his work at times.

"Since taking two bottles of Dreco he has improved in every way. His food digests much better and his bowels are getting regulated. He feels more rested and sleeps fine. He is looking more like himself again and I am certainly glad, because his condition has been a great source of worry to me. No previous medicine seemed to give any results, although we had spent hundreds of dollars trying to find aid for him.

"We are only too glad to tell people of the great merits of Dreco."

Sincere testimonials from responsible people are behind every statement made on behalf of Dreco. The undeniable merit of this great remedy wins friends for it every day. Compounded solely from herbs, roots, bark and leaves of known medicinal value. Dreco tones and regulates the organs of digestion and relieves distressing symptoms caused by their faulty functioning. This reliable corrective contains no mercury, potash or habit forming drugs. It will help the most obstinate case.

Dreco is being specially introduced in Peterboro by Bond's Drug Store. It is also sold in Lakefield by E. H. Northey, and by a good druggist everywhere.

SHOULD WE BLAME FRANCE?

(St. Mary's Journal-Argus.)

There is a tendency to blame France for her attitude to Germany, and for her persistence in her plan of occupation. It is a matter of conjecture whether the plan is a wise one and Britain, it appears, could not see that it was, and so refused to back her up in it. But the sympathy of the world is entirely with France. It is not generaly believed that Germany has been making any effort to pay her indemnities. Can France be blamed if she attempts to make her? When it is remembered what France suffered through out the war period, while Germany had not even so much as a telegraph wire severed, and that since the war France has expended forty-four billions of francs on reconstruction, while Germany has paid but four billions in reparations, the impatience of France can in some measure be understood. France has no desire to "kill the goose that lays the golden eggs" but she wants to be right near the goose pen when the eggs are laid and so prevent them being sneaked off by thifty but not-too-honest frau for use in Germany instead of being used to pay honest debts to France.

GET OUT YOUR GREASE PAINT

All of Us Will Be on the Stage Some Day, Says Recreation Expert.

MADISON, Wis., Aug. 23.—Never mind. You're going to be on the stage—some day!

Yes. Be consoled over your seeming inability to mimick even your next door neighbor, whom you see day in and day out. You're going to develop this trait and it's going to be as easy as eating and sleeping.

This comforting prediction is made after listening to Miss Marie Cary, daughter of C. P. Cary of this city, who was formerly Wisconsin State Superintendent of Public Instruction. Miss Cary is in a position to talk about your own Thespian proclivities, for she is at present Consultant Pageant Director of the New York City Board of Education. She has studied and directed the leisure of thousands of people throughout the country, as recreational director in many large cities.

From her experiences and observations she comes to this conclusion:

The theatre is going to take the place of baseball, golf, bridge, gossip and other outdoor and indoor sports, as the greatest "national game."

More Time on Hand.

"Because," explains Miss Cary, "mechanical inventions are giving people more and more leisure and they will have more time to express themselves—their emotions, their art.

"Public welfare workers," she goes on, "have long ago discovered that the public needs more entertainment —not recreation in the sense of physical activity which we already have, but recreation of a mental nature, such as is found in self-expression. What more natural then, that the stage should develop to include every Tom, Dick, Harry, Maude and Jane.

"We are going to have all sorts of theatres in the future. The epic theatre, the lyric theatre and the short-story or one-act play theatre are three that are already on the way. Communities are taking up the problem of the leisure of their residents and translating it into histrionic activity. Evidences of this we have in patriotic and civic pageants."

This civic movement, Miss Cary points out, is in turn resulting in the epic theatre and the revival of historic productions and offerings commemorating events of community and national interest. In these everyone can take part.

Future Drama.

"Moreover, all classes of people are more and more giving their attention to the stage, which results in a great diversity of opinion and tastes," she says. "Out of this chaos of what the public wants, I believe the short-story or one-act play will evolve as the predominating offering of the theatre. The one-act play combines the action of plot demanded by the average American with the analysis of situation or scene desired by the intellectual.

"Just as jazz has left syncopation in music despite the classical devotees, just so the mass of people are leaving the imprint of action on our stage in the form of the one-act play in the theatre.

"Life is going to become a fearful bore, and our idle time a civic menace, unless there is civic provision for entertainment. Self-expression, by which I mean creating something beautiful, whether in the home, business, the arts, or in the community, is our national safety valve.

"Our greatest means of self-expression is coming through the theatre, when you, I, pava, mama, brother, sister and all the kith and kin can act out our problems, thoughts and love of color, dress and decoration."

NORWOOD HAD GARDEN PARTY

Successful Event Was Managed By St. Paul's R. C. Church—Personal News.

NORWOOD, August 23. — The Women's League of St. Paul's church held a very successful garden party on the church grounds on Wednesday evening.

Supper was served in a large tent at tables bountifully laden with all kinds of good things including fowl, salads, pickles, homemade cooking, etc.

Several booths were on the grounds but the principal attraction seemed to be the "Wheel of fortune" where the many splendid donations were auctioned off by Mr. Turcott of Peterboro who seemed to be an adept at selling the "last" ticket. A large three storey fruit cake donated to this booth was won by Rev. Father McCarthy of Norwood.

Several priests from neighbouring parishes were in attendance, including Rev. Father Bretherton, of Hastings; Rev. Father McGuire of Downeyville; Rev. Fathers Collins and Garvey of Peterboro, Rev. Father Sullivan of Port Hope, and others.

In the evening after the out-door sports were over a dance was held in the hall at which music was furnished by Miss Linda Fry, pianist, Mr. Walter Campion, guitar, Mr. Harry Baker, and Mr. Charlie Copen.

The ladies of the league are to be congratulated on the success of their efforts.

Bountiful Rain.

Rain fell on Tuesday morning and continued all day. The condition of the pasture lands and the root crop will be greatly benefited.

Harvesting operations are well under way. Every machine in the district is busy. Some of the farmers who have had large crops have had one threshing to make room for the many acres of oats not cut, or standing in stooks in the fields. Fall wheat, rye and barley are good but oats are generally light. Early potatoes are scarce but it is hoped that Tuesday's rain will benefit the later varieties.

Personals.

Mrs. Horace Calder of Myrtle, spent the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Baskbin.

Mr. Alfred Fife left on Tuesday to visit friends in Western Canada.

Mrs. Elizabeth Robson and Miss Theresa Robson, have returned from a holiday at Muskoka.

Miss H. L. McLachlan has returned from a visit with friends at Newboro.

LINDSAY WAS BADLY HIT BY BANK FAILURE

When Suspended Payment By the Home Bank Was Announced a Veritable Panic Ensued—Contracts Cancelled.

NUPTIALS POSTPONED

LINDSAY, August 23.—Few places have been more seriously affected as a result of the failure of the Home Bank of Canada than Lindsay. When the announcement was made on Saturday last that the bank had suspended payments a veritable panic ensued. Many merchants as well as the heads of industrial concerns and other employers of labor did business with the bank and when it was realized that they were unable to draw on their deposits they found themselves in a peculiar predicament. One local industry was unable to pay its hands on Saturday night, and the manager was obliged to visit another bank on Monday morning in order to secure a loan. He had paid a contractor a few days before, with a cheque on the Home Bank, but the latter as unable to get it cashed. A number of local contracts have been cancelled owing to the fact that the contractors have all their money in the suspended bank. Many merchants have cheques for substantial amounts on their hands and they can do nothing until the curator is through with his investigation. A wholesale house received a cheque a few days ago from a local firm amounting to $800, but was unable to cash it. A young lady, whose wedding has been announced, went to the bank Saturday morning to draw her money for the purpose of purchasing her trousseau in the city. She read the 'Suspended' notice on the door and has been obliged to postpone the nuptials until a later date.

Besides the business men, there are a large number of farmers and working men among the depositors at the local bank, and their failure to draw on their funds has created a rather serious situation. The people have become panicky, and a run has been started on some of the other banks by some who have been stampeded by wild street rumors.

There is another branch of this bank in the county—at Manilla—and it did quite a business with the farmers of the district. The Lindsay branch was established twelve years ago, following the collapse of the Farmers' Bank. There is only one shareholder of the bank residing here

If the depositors fail to recover their money from the crash it means that a number in Lindsay will be reduced to poverty.

REPUBLICANS MAP OUT A PROGRAM

Insight Into Plans Should De Valera Faction Win Elections.

LONDON, Aug. 23. — (Canadian Press).—An insight into the programe of the Irish Republicans in the event the De Valera faction wins in the elections next week is given in manifesto published by Peter McGinity, Republican Agent in Donegal according to the belfast correspondent of the Morning Post.

Assuming that the Republican win majority in the Dail, the manifesto says that among other things they will take possession of the legislature and will form a ministry, probably with the support of the Laborites. They will ignore the treaty and everything that implies British supremacy, including the Governor-General, whose salary will immediately cease.

The irregulars, continues the manifesto, will reduce the army to 5,000 or even to 1,000 men, substituting a volunteer force. They will introduce a comprehensive scheme of national development and economy and will cut the salaries of judges and other officials.

They plan neither to acknowledge nor respect the dispatch adds, any internal boundary in Ireland, and will call upon Great Britain to evacuate the harbors and observe the three mile limit.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Unveil Memorial at Trent River Sunday—Firemen Had Call — Personal Mention.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 23. — Ex-Reeve A. H. McKeel, chairman of the War Memorial Committee of Trent River, where he is spending the summer in his cottage with his family, has about completed arrangements for the unveiling ceremony, which will be held on Sunday afternoon at 3.30. The monument has been put up by voluntary subscription and largely by volunteer labor, in memory of the late Richard Oliver Cowain, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and who lost his life at Vimy Ridge, the only one of the young men who enlisted from this district to make the supreme sacrifice.

Major Bygott, who went to Europe with the 93rd, is looking after the military details in Campbellford and has issued 35 invitations to officers in the district to take part in the ceremony. All returned men are invited, these to appear in uniform as far as possible. Arrangements for transferring the ex-soldiers to Trent Bridge from Campbellford will be made and announced later.

The chief speaker of the day will be Judge Huycke of Peterboro who never fails to wax eloquent on the subject of the war and the debt of gratitude which the nation owes to the veterans, and J. F. B. Belford, M.L.A., himself a returned man who won the rank of major in the service of the Empire. Col. N. F. MacNachtan of Cobourg, and Hon. E. Kemp of Toronto, were invited to deliver addresses but both sent regrets that owing to previous engagements they could not be present.

Col. Thos. Johnston, who commanded the 93rd, has been asked to do the unveiling.

The Play-off at Colborne.

The sudden death game which will be played at Colborne on Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock will decide which team is to hold the Clarke Cup until the old struggle on the diamond is renewed next year.

Sam Clarke, M.L.A., who donated the cup, yesterday disposed of the rumour that he would object to the cup going to Trenton, even if that team won, because Trenton is situated in Hastings County.

"That is the first I have heard of it," said Mr. Clarke yesterday over the telephone to The Examiner. "I gave the cup, but its disposition is out of my hands. I do not care where it goes."

Orland is already preparing for the league season next year, profiting by the experience which it has gained, and has already signed up three good players who will be with the team in 1924.

Firemen Had Call.

The roof of the brick residence of William Atkinson, out the River Road beyond the town limits on the west side, caught fire from a spark from the chimney about one o'clock yesterday afternoon, and was saved from destruction by the prompt action of the Fire Brigade. There is no hydrant close enough to the residence to be of service, but the blaze, which was fanned by a stiff breeze, was put out by the chemical apparatus. The fire truck was clear of the hall before the bell gave the alarm, and the Brigade made a quick run to the scene.

Personals.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Plummer motored to Ottawa, their former home, for a week's visit.

Charles H. Davidson was in Oshawa yesterday on business.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mitchell, Miss Ona Mitchell, Mrs. William and Master John Phillips, of town, accompanied by Mrs. Robert Collins and Miss Helen, of Hastings, left this morning on an automobile trip to Port Perry, Toronto, Drayton, and Moorefield.

A MEMORY OUT OF THE MISTY PAST

A really good story achieves immortality—it never dies and it never should. For proof of the truth of this consider the following tale which, in various forms has been current ever since its birth, 30 odd years ago:

A distinguished citizen of Louisville—so the most popular version has it—went to a dinner one night and stayed late. It was two o'clock in the morning when he reached his house afoot. In front of the house was a very small yard, hardly more than an ornamental grassplot; and in the exact centre of it stood a maple sapling with a two-inch butt. The Kentuckian made for the door, but tacked off at an angle and bumped into the little treelet. He made a fresh start, executed a wide and uncertain detour—and came back smack up against the maple. This time he put his back against its swaying trunk in order to be sure of getting the direction right—and off he went again plowing up the grass. It wasn't any use—he circled the lawn twice, but he finished up holding on to the sapling.

Thereupon he sat himself on the earth with great care, removed his hat, his shoes, and his dress coat, and rolled up the dress coat for a pillow; and as he sank to rest beneath the stars he muttered in a voice of resignation:

"Lost, by Heavens!—lost, in the midsh of an impen'trable foresh!"

LONDON, Aug. 23.—Mrs. Ethel Agnes Wiles, seeking separation from her husband, charged cruelty. She said he pushed her bed against a window and allowed snow to come in on her bed while she was ill. The charges of cruelty were dismissed, but Mrs. Wiles received her separation on other grounds.

Manager of Ill-Fated Hotel Says There Was Time For All to Escape—Pressure Was Good.

INQUEST OPENED.

HUNTSVILLE, Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.)— Seven witnesses, all employees of the Wa Wa hotel, were heard yesterday at the inquest into the death of Annie Leigh, one of the victims of the fire that wiped out the hotel, early Sunday morning, and cost eight persons their lives. The hearing was adjourned at 10 o'clock last night and will be resumed at 3.30 p.m. next Tuesday to hear other witnesses, both guests and employees, who will be summoned from Toronto.

Dr. J. D. MacDonald, of Huntsville, is conducting the inquest, with Mr. W. A. Boys representing the crown attorney, and J. P. Walsh representing the Canada Railway News Company, owners of the hotel. The first witness called was Mr. A. P. Thompson, manager of the ill-fated hotel for the past six years. Asked if all the rooms were provided with ropes, witness said: "Three years ago an inspector recommended ropes for certain rooms and these were placed there." Asked by the Crown if the hotel was supplied with a night watchman, the manager replied in the affirmative.

"Is he efficient?"

"Yes."

"Had you any means of checking him up, such as a watchman's block?"

"No."

"What were his duties?"

"To patrol the hotel every 15 minutes, commencing at 12.30."

Requested by the Crown to relate what he knew of the origin of the fire, Mr. Thompson recounted substantially what has been told in the press. He had been in bed only 15 minutes when he was awakened by a bell boy. Opening the door, he saw that there was one and a half inch hose playing on the flames.

"What time elapsed from the moment you left the room until the heat compelled you to give up fighting the flames?"

"About ten minutes."

"Then in your opinion, there is no reason in the world, if 10 minutes elapsed why those living above should not have got out?"

"None."

The pressure, the manager said, was good.

DISLIKE TO WORK WITH THEIR HANDS

And Radical Alterations in Secondary Education System Mooted.

TORONTO, Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press.)— Resolutions declaring the present provisions for high schools were sufficient and that in future plans should be laid with a view to the extension of technical and commercial instruction, were passed yesterday at a meeting of a special committee of the Board of Education appointed for the purpose of making a complete survey of secondary education in Toronto.

This action may be taken as a first step toward radical alterations in the secondary education system which, in the words of Trustee Wanless was "designed by educationists of a quarter century ago, who knew nothing of industry or commerce." The system, moreover, in its practical present working out, according to the same trustee, "trains boys and girls to dislike, and actually refuse to work with their hands."

Trustee Kerr is chairman of the committee, which was formed on his motion late last June, but which met for the first time yesterday. He explained that, although by far the greater proportion of students getting secondary education were in High schools, less than 50,000 people in the city were dependent, directly or indirectly on the professions for which Collegiate education is preparatory. Some 250,000 people were dependent on industry. The idea he seeks to have put in operation would guide the student in the direction in which he was best suited to go.

Action For Appealing Decision on Betting.

TORONTO, August 23. Canadian Press. — The first steps toward the appeal of the Ontario Government against the recent decision by Judge Denton, which declared the new betting information act ultra vires of the Ontario legislature, have been concluded with the signing yesterday of the necessary certificate by Attorney General Nickle.

It is the intention of the Attorney-General with the appeal as soon as possible and the Appellate division will be requested to hear the case as soon as possible after the opening of the sessions on September 17th.

LIKES OUR TELEPHONES.

Europe Wants them, Since the War Showed Their Efficiency.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—In a bulletin issued by the Pennsylvania Public Service Information Commission it is said that when the American Expeditionary Forces arrived in France they found the French telephone system in vogue. When the American troops embarked for home the American telephone system was the envy, not only of the Allies, but of the Germans as well.

So long as it knew nothing more than its own pre-war system of telephone communication Europe was content. Now, after experiencing the superiority of the American system, Europe is acutely dissatisfied with its own telephone service.

Information received from business and industrial leaders in France, Italy and other countries shows that they are advocating technical aid from America in perfecting their telephone system.

With close to 15,000,000 telephones in use, the United States has approximately 64 per cent. of the world's total. There are about thirteen instruments in use per 100 of population in this country. That represents an increase of 40 per cent. since Jan 1, 1914.

The world is swathed in some 53,000,000 miles of telephone wire, of which 35,000,000 miles are in the United States. Germany is next with more than 5,000,000. With 3,500,000 miles Great Britain is third, and Canada with 2,500,000 miles is fourth. In most European countries the telephone systems are operated by the Governments.

CAMBELLFORD BOWLING CLUB HOLD TOURNEY

Finishing Touches on New Club-House Last Night—Green in Excellent Shape For To-Day's Start.

MANY VISITORS.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 23. — A large number of active volunteer workers were busy up to a late hour last night putting the finishing touches on the new club house in preparation for the second annual tournament of the Lawn Bowling Club which began this morning and will continue until Friday night.

The new club house is 60 feet in length, extending from one end of the green to the other, and is 20 feet wide. A verandah across the entire length of the building affords a pleasant place from which to watch the play.

The location of the building and green is ideal, situated as they are on a peninsula formed at a point where the river and the canal branch off into independent courses.

Mayor Meyers, President of the Club, was one of the most energetic and efficient of the volunteers who for the past two weeks or more have put in so many hours of their leisure time on the work of construction. Another of the useful volunteers was J. A. Stewart, who has proved his ability as a carpenter as well as managing a bank.

The building may not be completed to-day when the tournament opens but it will at least be in readiness to accommodate the large crowd of visitors that is expected.

The green is in excellent shape, thanks to the labors of J. R. Wilkinson, the caretaker. Advance guards of visiting bowlers, who arrived yesterday, after a short practice, pronounced the grounds the best upon which they have played this year. From end to end the green is as level as a billiard table. Seven rinks can play on it at the same time.

There will be seven rinks of local bowlers and five are expected from Peterboro, and a number from Cobourg, Belleville, Kingston, and other places. The ladies of the club will serve meals in the building during the tournament.

A number of handsome prizes, which are on exhibition in the windows of F. W. Wood's drug store, are up for competition, the programe being as follows:

Cup competition, 14 ends; final 16 ends—1 silver cup, trophy, 2 four silver pie and ice cream servers, 3 four silver tomato servers.

Consolation, 12 end; final 16 ends—1 four Coalport cups and saucers, 2 four silver cold meat servers.

Doubles, 12 ends — 1 two silver cream and sugar sets, 2 two half dozen silver coffee spoons.

Singles, 15 points—1 silver bon bon stand, 2 silver bon bon dish.

The drawing took place at 10 a. m., to-day.

YOUNG MAN HIT BY 4 BULLETS

Bandits in Toronto Broke Into Garage and Shot Constable's Son.

TORONTO, Ont. Aug. 23.—(Canadian Press).—Alfred Rees, son of Ambulance Driver Charles A. Rees Dundas street west police station, was shot four times by burglars during a struggle early this morning in Rees' Garage, on, and one half miles beyond the city limit. Rees, although hit four times by bullets from bandit's guns, fired in return three shots, which went wild.

Rees and his younger brother, Charles were sound asleep in the garage at 1.30 this morning when they were awakened by the noise of a padlock being torn from the door Alfred grasped his revolver as they both leaped from the bed on which they were sleeping. As they saw the two men approaching them, Alfred called on them to stop. His command was met with series of shots, being fired. The first bullet struck Alfred in the shoulder, a second in the hip and as he crouched to return the fire two more bullets bored their way into his legs. Alfred collapsed from his wounds and his younger brother, who did not have a gun, managed to take shelter until the robbers left the building.

Charles Rees left his wounded brother and ran down the road to east Toronto Police Station for help. The police of May Street Station hurried to the scene while a call for the ambulance was sent to No. 2 Division.

Constable Charles Rees, father of the boys was driving the ambulance. He conveyed his son to the General Hospital, where it was stated early this morning Rees would likely recover. The father remained at his son's sid, while he was on the operating table in the hospital.

Do not put Rinso direct from the package into the tub. Mix half a package of Rinso in a little cool water until it is like cream. # The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Teresa Desmond (Terry), exquisite and unbelievably innocent, has determined to leave her father, Terrence Desmond, the proprietor of a roadhouse, the Blue Moon. He is moody and selfish, bent on Terry's "bagging" a rich man. He introduces her to Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek, who falls in love with the girl, and on an auto ride makes unwelcome advances. She escapes from him and goes to Juliet Divine, the stage name of her beautiful half-sister, known as the Million Dollar Doll, whom she has not seen for years. 'Juliet's' career has been somewhat sketchy, but she has a genuine affection for Terry, whom she greatly resembles. Miles Sheridan, Terry's Dream Prince, furnished the money for Terry's education at a convent when she was a child, partly to atone for a past rudeness of his wife Betty Sheridan, who is now making him unhappy with her infidelity. Hartley Phillips, a member of the Four Hundred, calls on Julia to tell her that Sheridan, in order to facilitate his wife's obtaining a divorce, will pay the Million Dollar Doll twenty thousand dollars t take a yacht trip with him. Except for appearing with her in order to cause talk, he wants to have nothing to do with her. Terry confesses to Julia that Sheridan has always been ideal.

Terry is made unhappy by the discovery that Jule is going to marry a Soutl American, Manoel Fernandez, and go to live in Buenos Aires.

Julia tells Terry that it is in her power to help Sheridan.

To help her 'Prince' Terry agrees to take the yacht trip, passing herself off as Julia.

CHAPTER XXII.

A Midnight Call

Certainly the kitchen was the one safe place in Miss Divine's flat, when her Manoel was loose in the precincts. The South American was a handsome, restless person, who could never sit still for ten minutes on end, but walked about, dropping cigarette ashes, and humming a few notes from some opera.

He would spring up, and wander in to the dining-room to mix cocktails; or steal into Julia's bedroom to lay a "surprise present" on the shrine of her dressing table, among her rings and bracelets.

His fiancee divined other and subtler motives under this ubiquitousness: suspicion of her: a jealous wish to make sure that she concealed nothing and no one. To invent an excuse to keep him in one room would be fatal. He would believe the worst.

Julia thought herself lucky, at twenty-seven, to have secured a millionaire who wished to marry and "range himself." If really necessary she would have sacrificed the little sister, to hold him.

Emmeline set a small work table close to the kitchen window, and arranged an attractive tray for Terry. All cooking was done by electricity, and a light wind, which had sprung up at sunset, cooled the room.

Manoel Fernandez was engaged to talk business with some men at their club about eleven o'clock, so at half past ten he bade Julia good-night—decorously, as a man says good-night to the woman he'll marry. Then Julia appeared in the kitchen, to find a pale, nervous, but wide-awake Terry.

There was no need to torture the child with more planning that night; tomorrow would do. As for Father, let him worry a bit. Julia was more interested in the state of mind of Mr. Nazlo than in her parent's.

She knew his "little ways" by hearsay, and it appealed to her sense of humor that he should have been snubbed by a baby-child. She wondered if he had raced back to Oldport with a version of the story?

Terry was in a curious, introspective mood, but she could not help noticing and being dazzled by the splendor of Julia's bedroom. It was more remarkable than anything else in the handsome flat. The bed was of gilded wicker, framed in carved ivory tinted wood, with cupids throwing garlands of roses. More cupids held up curtains of pale, rose-colored silk and lace; and even the mirror over the dressing table was supported by cupids.

As for that dressing table, the things on it were more beautiful than anything Terry had imagined, far more gorgeous than the gold-topped bottles and jars she had upset in Betty Sheridan's room long ago.

These were gold, too, and jewelled with emeralds—Miss Divine's "birthstone"; and scattered among them on the table were long strings of the same splendid green stones. A rope of pearls lay there too, with several bangles, and a quantity of rings.

"Manoel is always bringing me the loveliest presents," Julia explained. "He doesn't want me to keep any of my old things when we're married; things that—that other people gave me. I shall sell most of them.

"But I must give you some to wear on Sheridan's yacht. Nobody would believe you were the Million Dollar Doll if you weren't hung with pearls and my favorite emeralds, or plastered with diamonds."

It was on the tip of Terry's tongue to cry out that she couldn't wear a lot of jewels; that she wouldn't "feel like herself" in them. But then, she remembered that she wouldn't be herself. Besides, Julia—very good natured now—might lose her temper again, and fling "damns" about.

The girl accepted a nightgown of pale rose ninon, though at the Convent, and since, she had gone to bed in a starched white garment almost as thick and stiff as a board. Julia had no thick, stiff things, however, so Terry had to be satisfied with what she could get, and not even show embarrassment at sight of herself in a pinkish mist.

After "tubbing" (as Julia called it) in a bath of glittering crystal, filled with rose-scented water, the girl was invited to share her sister's bed.

It felt soft as down; the linen was cool and slippery, like silver; it smelled of a thousand flowers; and yet, after Julia slept, Terry lay staring into the red dusk of an electric night-light, wide awake.

She was going on a yacht—a yacht named after Silverwood—going for a long trip on the sea, with Miles Sheridan. Everyone would say that this was a terrible thing to do. Nobody would love or respect her again.

Perhaps all the rest of her life would be spoiled. She would become a sort of pariah. Yes, that was the word, a pariah. The kind Sisters at the convent would turn away from her if they knew.

It must be so, because even Julia—who used such dreadful words—warned her that she would have to sacrifice the world's good will. Perhaps the thing she had promised to do would be wicked in the sight of heaven also? God might punish her. She'd tell Him that she meant no wrong.

She prayed that He would forgive. But at the worst, there was no punishment she was not ready to risk for the Prince's sake.

It was half-past twelve, and they had been in bed for an hour, when the telephone sounded close to Julia's ear.

She sat up instantly, and did something which changed the light from dusky rose to white. "Good gracious," she gasped. "Can it be Manoel? I hope nothing's happened."

Terry had not yet fallen asleep, but she kept silence. Her eyes were wide and dark.

"Hello. Who is it?" Julia was asking. "Why, Dad, is that you?" (Speaking, she glanced at her sister.) "Oh——well, yes, I do know where she is. But what made you guess?"

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

THE PEE WEES' PARTY

"I do hopethebugs will stay away," said King Snookums.

"We're going to have a party! We're going to have a party!" cried all the little Pee Wee people.

And they were so delighted about it that they rushed madly here and there as though they had lost their wits. They tacked up flags and stacked cat-tails in corners and hung out paper lanterns, and really Pee Wee Land looked like the Fourth of July, or Fair Week, or a Church Social, or something like that.

All the Pee Wees were at home and nobody has been reported missing for a week.

Nancy and Nick would have gone home, only they had been invited to stay for the party.

"I do hope the bugs will stay away!" said King Snookums, when he has changed his everyday clothes of purple velvet to his party suit of gold and silver, and his everyday crown of little diamond to his best est crown of great big diamonds.

"Just as sure as those pesky lightning bugs and their friends come poking along, some of my subjects will take a notion to jump on them and ride off and we'll never find them," he complained.

But the bugs didn't come and the party was a grand success. The Twins danced with the Pee Wees by the light of the moon when all other little folk were in bed sound asleep.

Suddenly there was a dreadful sound. It went "Hoot! Hoot Hoot" And all the Pee Wees stopped dancing and ran under stones and leaves to hide. "Oh save us! Save us!" they cried, "somebody."

Oscar Owl blinked and then he winked. "If I can't get a mouse I'll have to eat Pee Wees," he remarked snapping his bill and looking around sharply. "I'm hungry."

Then suddenly Nancy and Nick saw a strange thing happen.

All the lightning bugs and June bugs and other bugs that hadn't been asked to the party came trooping along.

"Jump on us," they cried, "and we'll save you."

And the Pee Wees jumped on and so did the Twins and soon Pee Wee Land was as empty as a drum. And Oscar Owl went home hungry.

The Beetle Bug's Joke

"It's perfectly ridiculous!" said Mister Grouchy Grumpalong." And he stamped his can on the ground as though that settled it.

"What's perfectly ridiculous?" asked Nancy curiously.

"Perfectly ridiculous the way the Pee Wees are gadding about!" declared the crusty old gentleman. "In my day and age Pee Wee Land was good enough for anybody, but now it seems that all that Pee Wees think of is to get away from home. I've never been out of Pee Wee Land and I'm never going out of it. Well, I have some letters to write so I'll be going' Good-bye my dears!" And the tiny man hobbled away.

Just then the Twins saw two black beetle bugs tumbling after him as fast as they could go.

By 'n' by they came to Mister Grump's house. Nancy and Nick knew for they followed. And then they tried to peek in at his window, the beetle bugs did (Grump's house as an old walnut shell) But the cross little old fellow had pulled down his shades and nobody could see a thing.

"Let's lay a trick on him," said one black beetle bug to the other black beetle bug. "Let's hitch his house onto us with some wire grass and pull it out of Pee Wee Land. When he wakes up to-morrow and pulls up his blinds, he'll be in the cabbage-patch."

They worked very hard and very fast and very slowly Mister Grouchy's walnut shell house was pulled out of Pee Wee Land into the cabbage-patch.

"Hee, hee, hee!" laughed one black beetle bug to the other. "Aren't we smart And won't he be surprised"

Nancy and Nick had followed and now it was their turn to laugh.

"Mister Grumpalong is still in Pee Wee Land," they shouted. "He wasn't in his house at all! He'd gone out of his back door to get a drink of water, and when he came back his house was gone. Now you'll have to take it back, beetle bugs—the joke is on you."

"GOLD STAR" MOTHERS GO TO KANSAS CONVENTION

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 22.—(Associated Press.) —Governors of every state in the Union have been asked by the Kansas City chapter of the War Mothers to seek in each state the "Gold Star" mother who made the greatest sacrifice in the World War, with a view to sending her at the state's expense to the national convention of War Mothers in Kansas City, Sept. 29 to Oct. 5, according to Mrs. Howard Boone, head of the local chapter.

"Twenty-three governors have already replied," Mrs. Boone stated. "Most have promised aid, although some of them declare selection to be a delicate task."

Mrs. Boone said that the War Mothers have decided that the extent of a mother's sacrifice, by virtue of which she should be selected, would be gauged by the number of sons or daughters who died in the service of their country in the World War.

"This might not prove a strictly accurate basis for judgment," Mrs. Boone declared, "but it is the best we could devise." Mrs. Boone lost a son in the war.

The delegates sent by the states, Mrs. Boone asserted, will be the guests here of the Kansas City chapter of War Mothers.

Among the military men of prominence who have been invited to attend the convention are General John Pershing and Admiral R. E. Coontz, chief of operations of the United States navy.

Mrs. R. E. Bigney, of White Plains, N.Y., national War Mother, will address the convention.

Among other incidents in the programme now in process of formation will be the dedication to Jackson County, Missouri, men who died in the war, of a huge granite boulder which will be set down amid the trees of Missouri's first "memory mile," near Kansas City.

British Desire to Avoid Open Break.

OTTAWA, Aug. 22.— (Canadian Press.) —Rev. George P. Woollcombe, head master of Ashbury College, has returned from the Old Country to prepare for the re-opening of the college. Rev. Mr. Woollcombe on being asked how he would interpret the feeling of the average person in the Old Country with regard to the European situation as affected by the Ruhr imbroglio thought there was more of resentment in France against Britain than there was in Britain against France. The feeling in Britain was more of sorrow, than of anger, that France had embarked upon a mistaken policy. Asked was there a hint of anything in the nature of war talk Rev. Mr. Woollcombe was emphatic that the desire of the British people was to avoid any appearance of such a thing.

FAVOR DRY LAW.

RIO DE JANEIRO, (By mail to United Press).—The second International Congress of Mutuality and Social Providence meeting here recently with delegations present from Mexico and leading South American countries, approved a resolution urging all Governments represented to adopt an alcohol prohibition law.

An original resolution urging the countries to adopt a law based on the United States dry law seemed to have been in favor with the majority of the Congress, but due to objection by the Mexican Ambassador to Brazil, who was heading the delegation from his country, the words "based on the United States Law" were struck from the resolution which was then unanimously approved.

The Mexican Ambassador, during the debate on the project, declared, the Mexican delegation could not accept that part of the resolution containing reference to the dry law of the United States.

FOUR THOUSAND NEGROES LEAVE SOUTHERN STATES

Boll Weevil Blamed By Many, While Higher Wage and Better Living Conditions Are Influences.

BY J. F. BEAMAN

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 22—(United Press).— The South to-day is in the throes of its second great crisis—an economic revolt against traditions and conditions.

The boll weevil has stampeded the negro and with the unorganized, orderly exodus, hundreds of farm and factory hands daily, is going the plentiful labor supply, low wages and life of comparative leisure which the Southland has enjoyed since before that first great crisis—the Civil war over the freedom of the negro.

Agricultural experts, bankers and students of economics view the situation with some alarm, as estimates from official and unofficial sources show that 400,000 negroes—men, women and children—are searching for the end of the rainbow in Northern industrial centers.

The feeling of apprehension is for the south—where the cotton and tobacco planter has been forced to pay higher wages for labor in the face of a doubtful profit on his crop—and for the north, where congestion already is being experienced and lower wages are in prospect.

Plantation owners and land holders are daily being brought face to face with the fact that they, their sons and neighbors are going to have to go out into the field to help pick the cotton and otherwise tend the crop.

Negro Gives Up Fight

The negro for years has worked for the whites as a "crop-sharer," doing the labor under the plantation owner's supervision and assistance and dividing the proceeds. But the boll weevil, a tiny insect which bores into the "square" of the cotton plant and destroys the product with resulting financial loss, has bored into the soul of the negro worker. He has given up the fight against an enemy he doesn't understand and lost the long hope that next year or the next he will be able to produce a crop that will pay him dividends.

The Sixth Federal Reserve bank in his monthly review shows that a serious farm labor shortage exists in Florida "on account of the migration of labor to Northern cities," in Alabama, Lousiana, Mississippi and Tennessee. The cities also are beginning to feel the shortage. The same situation is reflected in South Carolina.

The extent of the migration is difficult to determine because in many states, authorities have made no effort to check the number of negroes answering the call of the north, and some even deny a migration is underway.

Georgia Suffers

In Georgia, where the state department of labor has kept detailed statistics since the exodus first began, more than 100,000 negroes have left the state so far this year. The exodus is still underway and one state official said to-day that for the last three months an entire car of negroes headed from the cotton fields has been attached daily to the train on which he rides out of Atlanta to his home.

South Carolina officials have figures showing 55,000 negroes have gone out of that state. The exodus has been at the rate of 4,000 monthly and from the city of Columbia alone, 6,500 laborers have gone out.

Reliable estimates covering Alabama show that 60,000 left the state last year and the rate this year has been 6,000 negroes a month. The average now has dropped to about 100 a day, however. The total to date this year has been nearly 40,000.

In Mississippi approximately 30,000 negroes have sang a farewell to Dixie, according to report from officials of the railroads. These same sources indicate that the exodus has slowed down appreciable of late and many are returning to their former homes.

Arkansas has lost over 3,000 negroes since the middle of January, State Labor Commissioner T. A. Wilson said.

Whites and Mexicans have come into Arkansas on the heels of the negroes, Wilson said, and as a result no labor shortage is being experienced. Wilson attributed low wages as the cause of the migration.

Saved by Oil Fields

Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas have not been as hard hit as other Southern States. The oil fields in these sections, with the resultant prosperity and era of plenty, have counteracted the lurid descriptions of life in the big industrial centers.

Tennessee has contributed less to the exodus, state officials say, than any other state. The department of labor estimates that only 4,500 blacks have deserted their homes in that section and a number of these have returned. Memphis has been one of the heaviest losers, but the decline has been made up for to some extent by drawing workers from the fields.

Bankers ,chamber of commercial officials and others, divided as to the cause of the exodus, mainly agree that the boll weevil has disturbed the Southland's economic structure, as well as ruined the cotton plants.

Other reasons cited are the promises of an easy existence, high wages and letters from the vanguard which migrated last year picturing in rosey hues a new social plane and improved housing and living conditions.

Blames the Whites

"The white man has only himself to blame," in the view of Bishop J. S. Flipper, of the Afro-Methodist Episcopal church of Atlanta. The negro is going north to get protection for life and property, better living conditions and higher wages."

Labor officials now are not so concerned with the cause, however as with the result. Higher wages in the cities are becoming effective rapidly and with the cotton season but a few weeks off, farmers already are entering the open market for labor. Where they once paid the negro $18 a month, or a chance to work on a share-cropping, they now are offering $1 a day while in the cities from $2.50 to $3.50 is being bid for the negroe's services.

Modern machinery, is taking the place of the negro and his mule in many sections and agricultural experts declare the exodus has been a blessing in disguise. They believe the farmer will be forced to do more intensive cultivating, adopt the most modern methods and that financial returns will be increased two-fold.

Many of the South's famous plantations are threatened with disintegration. The wealthy owners will be forced to break them up into small parcels to stave off financial ruin and in this many profess to see the greatest advantage as a result of the wholesole migrations.

South Carolina

In anticipation of this day South Carolina already has undertaken an official survey. A commission headed by Former Governor H. I. Manning under provisions made by the last legislature is touring the west interesting the corn and wheat farmer and the livestock breeders of the plains states in the soil and grazing land of Carolinas. The aim is to find out what kind of labor can be brought into the state to settle lands now unused and how such laborers can be brought.

Other efforts are being made to bring in new thought and new blood by colonization work and by interesting the immigrant from Northern Europe in this field.

Some states have taken step to combat, the exodus by restricting the work of labor agents Excessive license fees are demanded and agents found operating without licenses are subject to fines and other penalties in Georgia, North Carolina and Alabama but the South general is doing little to prevent it, once greatest problem, becoming the problem of the North.

EXERCISE NECK TO KEEP YOUTH

By Imitating the Swan, Signs of Old Age May Be Avoided.

BY ANNE DOLAN.

One of the saddest sights a woman ever sees is the advent of her second chin. Nothing warns the world quite so effectually that youth is on the wane.

To be sure youth does wane, but why tell the world? Let that be your own little secret.

When it comes to the matter of double chins, heavy jowls and fat necks, an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

A little daily care will keep these destroyers of beauty away, but only the most stern and unflagging industry will get rid of them once they have been allowed to start.

The swan's neck is the standard of beauty according to poets and sculptors. All right, let's study the swan. He exercises his neck constantly, darting his head in and out and around with marvellous care.

Now just imagine for a little while that you are a swan. With your shoulders erect push your head out as far as you can straight ahead of you.

You won't make a particularly entrancing picture as you do so and you won't deceive any stranger that you are a swan, but you will exercise the muscles that make for swan like beauty.

Then try this: Let your head drop as far over your spinal column as it will, letting your mouth fly open as it will be inclined to do. Then come back to normal position. Do this several times.

Then, letting your head be a perfectly dead weight describe a circle with it slowly. Do this half a dozen times or more.

For a double chin here's an effective exercise. Just pucker up your lips as if you were going to whistle and instead blow an imaginary feather off your lips. You can do this many times a day to your advantage.

These exercises will keep your neck relaxed and if your cords or muscles are inclined to be stringy or unduly prominent they will correct that too.

Remember a double chin is quite as much a matter of incorrect position of your head as it is of fat.

Keep your head up firmly poised on your neck and the flesh won't sag.

Petes Lost To Belleville--Cognawagas Defeated Keene--Sport

E. PETERBORO LEAGUE TITLE FOR COGNAWAGA IN YESTERDAY'S GAME

Hard Hitting in Second Defeats Keene in Final Game at Riverside Park

SCORE WAS 8 TO 4.

Cognawaga A.C. won the East Peterborough League championship at Riverside Park last evening by defeating Keene in the final game, the score being 8 to 4. Hard hitting in the second, gave Cognawaga six runs and a lead that Keene could not overcome. Manager McCarthy's team rallied in the fifth to score three runs and they had three on bases in the fifth but could not deliver the punch. Cognawaga gave a good exhibition of hitting for runs, and Keene outfielders did some pretty fly catching, McCarthy in centre making two brilliant plays on hard chances.

Hawkins, the veteran catcher for Keene led his teammates at the bat with a double and a triple. Prest, MacDonald and P. Vannest did the extra-base clouting for Cognawaga. D. Davis missed credit for a triple when the hit for three bases in the first half of the seventh, the game being called on account of darkness, with one out.

Robertson started on the mound for Keene and looked good in the first, when he retired the side in order. He faltered in the second, when the first four batters to face him hit safely, D. Davis getting a single, Prest a triple and MacDonald and P. Vannest a double apiece, which with an infield error, a pass, and a passed ball scored six runs. Robertson came back strong in the third, only to have Cognawaga break out again in the fourth for three hits and two runs, a single by Grose with three on, scoring both runs. The "Cogs" slowed up again in the fifth and McCarthy's great running catch for the third out stopped them in the sixth.

Vannest kept the hits scattered, except in the fifth when with two out, Hawkins tripled and I. Fletcher doubled for three runs. The Cogs twirler fanned eleven; did not issue a pass, and hit one batsmen. He got out of a difficult position in the sixth when Keene put three on with two out, Grose taking a grounder from O'Dette and making the third out on the runner to second. The stage was all set for the play and Grose handled it well.

Cognawaga will meet the winner of the Elizabethville-Bethany game at Millbrook on Friday, in the semi-finals of the O.B.A.A. Intermediate series. And the winner of the round will play C.G.E., the local Intermediate champions.

First Inning.

Keene won the toss. A Davis leading off for Cognawaga fanned on three pitched balls but had to be retired at first. Grose also fanned and Robertson threw out Shadgett.

For Keene, Renwick missed three. O'Dette grounded to Grose who booted. Hawkins doubled, O'Dette stopping at third. I. Fletcehr fanned after sending out a long foul. A. Fletcher dropped one out from the plate and Davis threw him out.

Second Inning.

D. Davis singled into centre. Prest tripled to right scoring Davis. MacDonald doubled into centre sending Prest in. P. Vanest doubled to left scoring MacDonald. Vannest took third on a wild pitch and scored when Nelson fumbled Allen's grounder. A. Vannest flew out to H. Renwick. A. Davis was passed. The runners advanced when Hawkins let one get away. Gose grounded out, Allen scoring. A. Davis scored on a passed ball. Shadgett flew out to I. Fletcher.

H. Renwick hit a hot one at Shadgett and made the bag, only to be thrown out at second. M. Robertson went out first, after Davis dropped the third strike. McCarthy fanned.

Third Inning.

McCarthy came in to make a nice catch of D. Davis' fly. Prest lined out to first. MacDonald went out on a short one to the pitcher.

A. Renwick made second when MacDonald threw low to Davis. Nelson struck out, the catcher having to throw to first. Renwick went to third. The throw from D. Davis went through MacDonald, but Grose was on hand to retrieve the ball and throw Renwick out as he tried to get home. O'Dette singled, and Hawkins grounded out.

Fourth Inning.

P. Vannest singled through short. Allen bunted safely. A. Vannest fanned. A. Davis was safe on O'Dette's fumble, filling the bases. Grose popped one over short, scoring P. Vannest and Allen. O'Dette threw out Shadgett. D. Davis fanned.

I. Fletcher singled through second and stole the middle bag, going to third when Davis had to throw out A. Fletcher who fanned, and scoring on a passed ball. H. Renwich fanned and Robertson followed suit.

Fifth Inning.

Prest drew a hit on a scorcher to A. Fletcher, and advanced on MacDonald's infield out. P. Vannest fanned. The pitcher threw out Allen.

Shadgett threw out McCarthy. A. Renwick hit through third and Nelson bunted. O'Dette fanned. Hawkins tripled to right, scoring Renwick and Nelson. I. Fletcher doubled, scoring Hawkins. Fletcher stole third. A. Fletcher had the third strike called.

Sixth Inning.

A. Vannest dumped one and retired at first. A. Davis singled into left. Grose hit into centre, Davis being caught at second on the throw in by Renwick. McCarthy made a pretty catch of Shadgett's long fly.

H. Renwick singled into right. Robertson was thrown out at first. McCarthy made the bag when Grose threw to third to get Renwick and missed him. A. Renwick was hit. Nelson struck out. With the bases filled, O'Dette grounded to Grose who made the out at second.

CLOSE GAME IN GIRLS' LEAGUE

Tigers and Woollens Played Tie Game—C.G.E. and Colonials to Meet This Evening.

After holding the Colonials to a close score on Monday the Tigers came back last evening and held the Woollens to a tie game with the score standing 18 t 18. The Tigers held a two run lead until the last half of the last frame when the Woollens gathered the necessary two runs to tie the score.

The C.G.E. and Colonial girls are scheduled to play this evening. This should be a good fast game as these two teams have been battling neck and neck right along. The C.G.E. girls were only nosed out of the championship of the first half by the Colonials and are out to take the honors of the second half if they possibly can. The game will be played at Central Park and is scheduled to start at 6.30. Owing to the growing shortness of the evenings the management of the league is seeing that the games start sharp on time.

Seven-Foot Holes in Unique Golf Game.

A novel 18-hole medal competition is to be held at Mississauga Golf Club on Saturday to celebrate the playing of the eleventh hole in one by Charles Boothe. There will be four prizes for the best net scores. The rules are unique. They are as follows:

"For this tournament the hole on each green will be seven feet wide. The circle will be marked in white.

"When you have putted into this circle, you have holed out. The whole of the ball must be inside the outer edge of the circle.

"Should the white circle become obliterated, put the head of your driver in the cup and the length of the handle will reach to the circumference of the circle.

"Should anyone drive the ball from the tee into the circle, such player will be considered to have holed in one, and such score will take precedence over the best net score in awarding the first prize. In the event of these being more than one hole in one, the committee will decide who is the winner, either by draw or by playing additional holes."

Timely hitting, especially by Peeney and Harry Mills and great relief pitching by Indian Jack Williams enabled Belleville to come from behind and grab off a victory from the Petes in the play off game at Coboug yesterday, thus winning the championship of B Section of the Central League. The final score was 7 to 3, Belleville grabbing off five runs in the eighth inning after the Solomon crew had led from the initial frame. They were in front 3 to 0 until the sixth and 3-2 until the eighth.

Heckman, after holding Belleville to four hits in the first seven sessions weakened in the fatal eighth and a pass and two more or less lucky singles followed by Peeney Mills' sharp double with the bases full, a triple by J. K. Williams and a fielder's choice chased five counters over the plate and changed a 3-2 Peterboro margin into a 7-3 Belleville majority. It was a tough inning from a Peterboro viewpoint and a sweet session for the Grand Trunk enthusiasts.

Over 4,000 fans from all parts of Eastern Ontario saw the game and they were rewarded by an exhibition brimful of excitement, fast fielding and great baseball, worthy of the occasion and the patronage.

In the early stages it looked all over like a Peterboro win. After hesitating until the last moment as to whether he would use Oulette or Williams on the mound Manager Gerow decided to send the ex-Lindsay speed artist back at the Petes, but he was not the Oulette of last Saturday. The Solomon crew got to him for two runs in the first inning, added another in the fourth and were on their way to move when the derrick was applied and Williams sent in to save the day. He went in with one out and two on bases, averted any scoring in that frame and from then on the Indian southpaw had the Petes at his mercy, allowing only two hits for the balance of the game. Williams' control was well night perfect and the Petes were stopped completely.

This airtight heaving steadied the Belleville crew when they were just about ready to acknowledge defeat. Before the advent of the Indian, the Trunks three runs down were a shaky outfit, fighting among themselves on the bench, and looking like a beaten team. In the second inning Manager Gerow and Meagher had a pitched battle and the Belleville pilot and his utility player had to be pulled apart.

Had Williams wavered when he took over the pitching burden, Belleville were through. But he was as cool as the breeze that came from the northwest, put an end to the Petes hitting and the Trunks rallying behind his steady twirling kept picking away at Heckman until finally the broke through his delivery in the eighth frame and put the game on ice.

The Petes went down fighting. Defensively they gave their best exhibition of the year. They had nothing that looked like an error and Ansaldo, Swanston, Helson and Legon pulled off plays that fairly sparkled. Ansaldo cuffed down a vicious roller from Brownscimbe's bat and cut off the runner with a beautiful throw. Swanston went back to the stand and gathered in a foul fly in circus fashion. Helson made a fine stop of a hard hit ball from Hagerman and Legon's running catch of Casey's slashing drive over short earned brackets.

Bunched hits beat Heckman. Six of Belleville's eight safeties were crowded into two frames and on both occasions a charity was thrown in, so that these six massed hits were responsible for seven runs. Outside of those two innings the Petes' twirler had a big edge on the winners, twice retiring the side on strikes and fanning nine. Heck has carried the pitching burden all season and the strain of pitching three hard games in a week doubtless played its part in making the eighth inning rally possible. It was a heartbreaking wind up for the hard-working heaver who has pitched many more innings than any other Central League pitched and whose season's record speaks for itself.

The Petes are through for the year, so far as the championship series are concerned. They have put up a great battle for the honors, were only nosed out of the first half by one game, won the second half by a two game margin and forced Belleville to go three fixtures to finally settle the argument. They have provided the fans with a lot of good baseball and deserve credit for what they have accomplished in spite of their defeat yesterday.

The game was well handled by Umpires Hallinan and Thorne of Toronto, the field was in splendid condition, the crowd was well looked after and in every respect—save that the Petes lost the decision—the fixture was a fitting wind up to a good season

The Petes after losing the toss and having to go to bat first got away to a great start. Ansaldo started them on their way by cutting one at Brownscombe, too hot to handle, and it went for a single. Wolfe sacrificed him to second and he rode home when Collins shot a single between Weir and H. Mills into right field. Hagerman lost Casey's throw at the plate when Ansaldo bumped into him and Collins reached third on the play. Swanston cut a single over third, scoring Collins. Comolli rolled to Oulette, Swanston going to second and Heckman fanned.

For Belleville Weir and Ross fanned and Swanston made a beautiful catch of Brownscombe's foul fly, taking it on the run close to the Belleville bench.

Helson opened the Petes second with a single past second and advanced to third on successive sacrifices by Legon and Johnston. Brownscombe, however, made a fast play on Ansaldo's slow roller to retire the side.

W. Mills first up for Belleville singled to right but died at first, H. Mills bunting a pop fly to Heckman. J. K. Williams flying to Wolfe and Casey raising an easy one to Ansaldo.

Wolfe first up for the Petes in the third was out on a roller to H. Mills, a very close play. Collins singled to center but was forced on Swanston's tap to Brownscombe. Swanston tried to reach second on a short passed ball and was tossed out by Hagerman.

Heckman made short work of Belleville, whifiing Hagerman, Ouelette and Weir in a row.

The fourth saw the end of Oulette. Comolli started the skids under him by ripping a single through the box. Heckman sacrificed him to second. Helson singled to right and Comolli pulled up at third. When Casey threw to the plate Helson raced for second and Hagerman's throw was high, the runner being safe while Comolli scored. Legon drew a pass and Manager Gerow decided it was not Oulette's day, Williams going to the rescue. Johnston's sacrifice moved the runners to second and third but Williams got out of the hole when Ross grabbed Ansaldo's good bid for a hit.

Belleville's first good chance to score came in their end of this frame. Ross flied to Legon and Ansaldo's great stop and fast throw on Brownscombe's speedy roller robbed the ex-Lindsay player of a hit. Peeney Mills met a fast one on the nose for a triple to deep right field and then Harry Mills was hit but trouble was averted when J. K. Williams tapped weakly to Comolli for the third out.

J. H. Williams made a one-handed stop of Wolfe's roller at the beginning of the fifth and Casey, playing a mile deep in right field, grabbed Collins' mammoth fly, which started like a home run. Brownscombe fumbled Swanston's roller, but Comolli fanned.

Two fine fielding plays featured Belleville's half. Casey first up, shot what looked like a sure single over Ansaldo's head, but Legon came in fast and snared the drive. Then Helson knocked down Hagerman's hard rap and got the runner by a step at first. Williams fanned.

In the sixth Heckman rolled to Weir and Helson to Harry Mills. Legon's tap to the box made the third out.

Belleville broke into the scoring column in their half. The break came unexpectedly for Heckman started by striking out Weir and Ross. Brownscombe, however, rapped a long one to centre for three bases and Peeney Mills took a fast one in the ribs. Harry Mills timely double to right scored the pair. The tieing run was on second but Heckman tightened up and struck out J. K. Williams.

In the seventh Johnston popped to J. H. Williams, Ansaldo was called out on strikes and Wolfe after singling past the box was out stealing second. He had the throw beaten but lost the decision when his foot slipped off the bag.

For Belleville, Casey was thrown out by Helson, Hagerman lifted a high one to Ansaldo and Williams lined into Heckman's hands.

Williams gave the Petes little chance in the eighth, fanning Collins, Swanston and Comolli in quick succession.

Then came the Belleville rally that snatched victory from the Petes at almost the last moment. The disaster started when Heckman passed Weir the first man up. Then came a lucky break. Ross cracked a roller at Heckman that bounded high over the box, the Petes twirles just failing to snare it with a jump. Had he nailed it a double play would likely have been the result but he only succeeded in knocking the ball down and the tap went for a hit. Brownscombe filled the bases with a safe fly to short centre, Wolfe playing deep for the Belleville shortstop. With the sacks loaded and nobody out, Belleville scented victory and the hundreds of Bay of Quinte supporters in the stands were wild. Their joy was redoubled when W. Mills rapped a double to centre, scoring Weir, Ross and Brownscombe. Harry Mills flied to Legon but J. K. Williams tripled to left scoring W. Mills. Casey hit to Comolli who made a bare-handed stop but his throw to the plate was too late to head of Williams. Hagerman rolled to Comolli and J. H. Williams flied to Wolfe.

Heckman first up for the Petes in the ninth flied to Brownscombe. Helson singled to right, his third hit of the game, but Legon struck out and Shaughnessy batting for Johnston also whiffed.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORT

A party of five enthusiastic Peterborough rooters started out for the game at Cobourg yesterday, travelling by automobile. The automobile developed some internal troubles in the vicinity of Frazerville, and it looked for a time as if the Petes would be shy five supporters. The special train, however, hove in sight just then, and was promptly flagged to pick up the stranded fans.

There seems to be some doubt as to whether Detroit will go through with the deal for Wingo now because of the publication of the story from the Toronto end first. President Navin apparently is peeved to the marrow over the matter, and Toronto fans do not care one jot whether he stays that way or not. One Wingo on the club is worth half a dozen Jack Keefe's in the bush, and the Detroit magnate can keep his old farm hands and his cash, too, as far as the enthusiasts around the Island Stadium are concerned.

With an urgent demand for more human punching bags, Jack Kearns was using the wires yesterday in an attempt to get some more big sparring partners for Jack Dempsey. Jules Rioux, the big French-Canadian, is beginning to yearn for the north woods, and Jack Burke, the Pittsburgh light-heavyweight, is asking for plenty of rest between beatings. George Godfrey, the big coloured boxer, is the only willing one in the camp, and he doesn't want to take it all.

The race is tightening up again in the National League, with the Giants apparently slipping fast and the Cincinnati's showing signs of coming to life again. The Giants have 36 games left to play, and if they win 27 of them they capture the championship no matter what their opponents do. But they are not playing ball at that clip at the present time. It is just as plain as the Ohio River in front of the good city of Cincinnati that if the entire league will take up the cudgel against the Giants and refuse to bow to them, the Reds will have the fun of the world's series.

President Ban Johnson, of the American League, promulgated an order to umpires that all "trick" bats employed with the idea of getting greater length in driving are prohibited. Recently he barred Babe Ruth's "Sam Crawford" bat because it did not come up to regulations, but the order was issued when he is reported to have learned that Kenneth Williams, of the St. Louis Browns, had also been using a doctored bat to crack out his homers.

SWIMMING STARS ENTER BIG MEET

World Champions Will Take Part in Outdoor Tests.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 23.—(Associated Press)— Several of the world's greatest swimmers will compete in the National A.A.U. senior and junior outdoor meet here today, Friday and Saturday, according to the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, which is sponsoring the championships.

Both men and women stars will participate in the events, the most important of which are men's senior national championship at 100 yards free style, and men's junior national one mile swim, women's senior national 880 yards free style and 220 yards breast stroke, and women's junior national one mile.

Johnny Weismuller, Chicago's world's greatest swimmer, will not take part because of a strained heart muscle. Duke Kahanamoku, Hawaii, is expected to be an entry.

Kahanamoku, veteran and holder of many world's records, is swimming in splendid form this year, according to reports received in Indianapolis. Robert Skelton, Chicago, breast stroke champion; Harold Krueger, Chicago, formerly of Hawaii, and several other of note, probably will participate.

Gertrude Ederle, New York City, declared by many to be the world's greatest woman swimmer of all times, has assured the chamber of commerce she will be in search of more honors. Miss Ederle is world's woman champion at 220 yards and 440 yards free style.

Aileen Riggin, New York City, a former winner of the diving championship at the Olympic games; Minnie DeVry, Sybil Bauer and Edna O'Connell, all of Chicago, also have entered. Miss Bauer holds the records from 100 yards to 200 metres.

In addition to the national events, Indiana-Kentucky A.A.U. championships also will be determined.

CHARGE AGAINST PLAYERS DENIED

Pat Duncan and Sammy Bohne of Cincinatti Nationals Faced Accusations

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.— (Canadian Press.)—Charges that Pat Duncan, left fielder, and Sammy Bohne, second baseman of Cincinnati Nationals, had been approached by gamblers during the recent series with New York Giants at Cincinnati were given official cognizance to-day when John A. Heydler, president of the league, held a hearing at which both players denied the accusations under oath. The charges had been made by a Chicago sports publication. No direct evidence of alleged operation of gamblers had been obtained, it was explained, but President Heydler took the attitude that no charges of the character involved should go unchallenged.

The outcome of the hearing was characterized not only as removing any basis for the story, but also as clearing Duncan and Bohne. Charges resulting in the hearing were published by a Chicago weekly devoted to professional sports.

Lanark at Bottom of Scottish League.

GLASGOW, August 23 (Canadian Press Cable). — It required only two games to precipitate Third Lanark to the bottom of the Scottish Association Football League, and this is the position to which they were sent yesterday afternoon when they were defeated on their home ground by Greenock Morton by a score of 2 goals to 0.

The Scottish First Division is now off to a good start, with Glasgow Rangers heading the table.

Two teams only have not been scored against, the Heart of Midlothian and Raith Rovers. The Hearts soundly trounced Clyde in their opening game at Tynecastle Park on Saturday by 6 to 0, while Raith Rovers took Dundee into camp with a score of 3 to 0.

The three leaders at the moment in order of their appearance in the League are Rangers, Partick Thistle, and Airdrieonians

DIARRHOEA and VOMITING

Doubled Up With Pains

If you are suddenly attacked with diarrhoea, dysentery, colic, cramps or pains in the stomach or any looseness of the bowels do not waste valuable time, but at once procure a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and see how quickly it will relieve you.

Mr. Ernest Morris, 3 Webb St., London, Ont., writes:—"I take great pleasure in recommending Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for what it has done for me.

Some time ago I took an awful violent headache, then started to vomit and felt so sick I could hardly stand it all day; towards evening intense pains came in my bowels and I was just doubled up the pains were so bad; the perspiration stood out like beads on my forehead; then the diarrhoea started and I really thought I was going to die.

My husband went to the drug store and got a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry; he gave me four doses at intervals, and by noon next day the diarrhoea had stopped and the pain was all gone too.

Now I will never be without 'Dr. Fowler's' in the house."

TENNIS BEGINNERS

SOME GENERAL HINTS

A great many players foot fault. There is really no excuse for this, and it is almost a sure sign that a player has never played in any official tournaments, as one experience with a qualified umpire would be enough. Among high class playstepping over the line before hitting the ball in their anxiety to get to the net quickly. But with the more common form of stepping or standin gon the line there is no excuse The rule is very plain and simple. Both feet must be BEHIND the line and one foot must be on the ground. Any motion of the feet that can be construed to be a step is also barred. Thus a player may not raise the left foot, even if he replaces it, and swing forward enough to draw the right toe from the ground. The right way is to start with both feet firmly on the ground and if the swing draws the right foot up no harm is done.

No player who makes a practice of deliberately calling balls wrongly or of questioning decisions will ever get far in friendly play. It is always good form, however, to ask your opponent to play a point over on which you are doubtful. Call them as you see them, but call them quickly. In playing singles the player is responsible for all decisions on his side of the net.

Many players are confused on the rule against being over the net. The rule is that a player may follow the ball over, provided that he does not touch the net, but he may not meet the ball before it has actually passed to his side. If the ball has bounced back over the net before he gets to it he may reach over and touch it.

Another point on which a new player would be wise to be careful is in touching balls before they are dead. No matter how obvious it is that a ball is going out, it is not dead until it hits the ground or backstop. Consequently, if it touches your racquet or any part of your clothing you lose the point. Some players are fussy about this and will claim points in match play you innocently stop a ball to save yourself a walk. It is best to leave the ball alone.

It is considered bad form to hit a fault back to the server. In match play however it is always safer to play the ball until the umpire calls. Otherwise you may lose a point while watching the ball go by. Train yourself to catch the umpire's signal and relax immediately. Just imagine you are a plumber and the whistle has blown.

Always carry the weight of the racquet in the left hand and relax all muscles when not in play. This may seem a small thing, but in a hard match it may mean the little edge you need to win, as a rested muscle will always function better than a tired one.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines — and New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices —

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

NEW YORK, N.Y., Aug. 23. — (United Press.)—Coal strike developments overnight were lopked upon as constructive, Scranton advices were that the miners would probably get a 10 per cent. wage increase and a strike would be avoided. But this favorable news was offset by publication of the full text of the French Premier's note on reparations, which lefd no room for doubt that settlement of the problem was still distant. Stocks showed a distinctly reactionary tone in the early dealings. Industrials which led he recent recovery displayed substantial losss from the week's high on the initial transactions, while Rails were heavy, reflecting a falling off of 59,968 in car loading for the week ending August 11th. Stocks were unsettled in the whole list by another outbreak of selling in the Oil group towards the close of the first hour. New lows on the movement were touched by the Pan Americans, while Cosden, Producers and Refiners, Marland and other active independents lost their recent recoveries.

Despite the heaviness of this section of the market, however, Petroleum shareholders found some cheer in the announcement that Magnolia Petroleum has increased the price of gasoline at filling stations at Fort Worth and Dallas from 11 to 16 cents. This more than offset the two cent reduction in California, the State responsible for the recent demoralization in crude and gasoline prices. There was also a crumb of encouragement in the slight reduction in crude output in the United States during the week ended Aug. 18th.

Earning of the Steel Companies in July and the first half of August compared favorably with the corresponding period of the second quarter, according to the head of the Steel Companies. In the last half of August and September earnings will be smaller as a result of the installation of the eight hour day and decreased production. Generally earnings in the third quarter will fall below earnings in the second. but all steel companies will show substantial surpluses after payment of dividends.

Miller and Co. say: A little pressure against the market at the opening, but the stocks were well taken. New pressure against the oil stocks especially Sinclair. Everybody is waiting for a cut in Mid-continent, but it would seem to be pretty well discounted.

THEATRES

AT THE ROYAL.

Probably as much attention is being focused on Hope Hampton's new First National starring vehicle, "The Light in the Dark," which comes to the Royal Theatre to-day as on any feature picture released in the past few years.

The story, which was written by Wiliam Dudley Pelley, is a modern drama, and modern costumes are used. However there is a period sequence of the quest of the Holy Grail, wherein the wonderful color effects are used.

Miss Hampton plays the role of a poor little vermont girl making her way alone in New York. Bessie MacGregor, the girl, is taken into a home of wealth and high social standing as a result of an automobile accident. J. Warburton Ashe makes love to her and she believes in him. But when she learns of his insincerity she disappears. Ashe realizing the wrong that he has done leaves for England. On a hunting trip he finds a wonderful old goblet which he brings back to America with him. It is stolen. It finds its way to Bessie in a lowly tenement. With it comes a strange story, real adventure and stirring romance. In a dramatic trial a hand reaches out and before the eyes of the judge it is again carried off. Whether or not it is the Holy Grail this mysterious cup is the means by which a lovers' misunderstanding is hapily settled.

An exceptional cast supports Miss Hampton. E. K. Lincoln and Lon Chaney have leading roles. Other parts of importance are taken by Theresa Maxwell Conover, Miss Dorothy Walters, Charles Mussett, Edgar Norton and Dore Davidson. Clarence L. Brown directed "The Light in the Dark."

kindled by the glowing beauty of the star who blazed into flame in "Stardust"—and now appears with dazzling radiancy in the drama of a girl—a thief—and a reckless lover. Lon Chaney, slave to the beauty of a woman new to the underworld —reveals a crook role that is epochal, while E. K. Lincoln as the reckless, errant lover gives this screen achievement so much of the force that never fails to awaken a quick response.

GALT TERRIERS WON THE CROWN

Defeated Guelph Maple Leafs in Presence of 6,000 Fans.

PRESTON, Ont., Aug. 23. — The Galt Terriers won the inter-county league championship by defeating the Guelph Maple Leafs 5 to 1 in the play off at the Riverside Park here yesterday afternoon before a crowd of over 6000 fans which included hundreds from both Galt and Guelph, while Preston citizens turned out in full force; Kitchener, Hespeler, Brantford, Paris and all the nearby towns and cities, were largely represented.

It was the largest crowd which ever witnessed a baseball in the mineral springs town, and the interest was at fever heat throughout the battle which went 13 innings.

With both teams having many chances to score not a runner crossed the home plate until the seventh innings when Galt scored in the first half and Guelph came right in its half.

In the 13th frame, which proved disastrous to Guelph the Terriers came across with four runs. In this frame with two on, Himes hit safely scoring two. The other runs were scored on a passed ball by Pequegnat.

Dempsey Is Training Under Difficulties.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 23. — (Canadian Press.)— A chilling wind, carrying the breath of autumn, swept off Saratoga Lake yesterday, forcing Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight boxing champion to work under restraint in preparation for his match with Luis Angel Firpo at the Polo Grounds, Sept. 14. Dempsey confined his training to six light rounds with a pair of 130 pounders, in addition to two rounds of bag punching and three minutes of shadow boxing. The heavyweight champion's none too capable staff of sparring partners weer reduced last night with the departure of Billy Wells, British welterweight champion, and Jules Rioux, the French-Canadian lumberjack. Rioux was found to be too inexperienced to be of service to the champion, except, perhaps, as a human punching bag.

No Warrant Issued Against Chick Evans.

CHICAGO, Aug. 23.— (Canadian Press.)—A warrant for the arrest of Charles (Chick) Evans, noted golfer, sought by Charles J. Moore, a local grain broker following a misunderstanding over the status of Evans' grain account was denied by Municipal Judge Charles F. McKinley yesterday in a decision holding that the transaction in question involved "no intent to defraud' 'on the part of Evans.

The ruling is expected to settle the dispute, which concerned a check for $7,500 from Evans to Moore, which the latter claimed was fraudulently issued in settlement of Evans 'account.

Evans declared Moore had failed to keep his contract regarding settlement of the account, had cashed the check prematurely and as a result caused heavy financial loss and embarrasment to the golf celebrity.

DARING COLORS.

One of the most daring color combinations recently noticed at a smart restaurant was a yellow wrap edged with white fox, worn with a white satin gown and pink satin footgear.

WIDE FRINGE.

One sees many very distinctive frocks of black satin with no trimmings save a wide fringe about the feet. Large black velvet hats are the inevitable accompaniment.

SILHOUETTE.

For tailored suits and sports costumes the shilouette for the coming season is to be as straight as it has been in past seasons with the exception of the increased tendency to introduce the circular flounce or the ripples side.

OF TAN WOOL.

A smart suit of tan wool has a collar, cuffs and a wide border on the skirt of heavily brushed wool.

MILLER.—In loving memory of our dear Minnie Miller, who departed this life August 20, 1922.

Oh how we loved her, but Jesus loved her more,

Come lay down thou weary one, lay down thy head upon My breast.

"STERLING SILVER" GIRL TELLS ALL ABOUT WARE

BY MARIAN HALE.

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—If you want to know anything about silver you will get your information directly or indirectly from Miss Ruth March Egge.

Miss Egge is "the sterling silver girl," nicknamed because of her all-inclusive knowledge of table silver in all its forms and uses. She is field secretary for the sterling silver manufacturers in the United States.

Lectures to women's clubs, at private and public schools, and before college classes in home economics and art—all are planned and supervised by Miss Egge. Demonstrations in silver etiquette and proper methods of setting table for various meals also are part of her work. Besides, there are lectures in her program covering the history of ornamentation and the origin of table customs as told in the silver of civilized peoples.

"It is a fascinating way in which to come into contact with women," says Miss Egge, "because we have an immediate bond of interest.

"One thing I have noticed is there is no difference between the business woman and the home woman when it comes to loving a home," she adds. "And I sometimes think that women who work outside their homes and are dependent upon restaurants or boarding houses are more appreciative of elegance in table appointments than women who are surrounded by the very finest.

"I believe the time has come for women to get a little out of the beaten tracks of business and blaze new trails," she concludes. "The buyers of the world are women, and there should be more of them in the selling end.

"Seeing women from all parts of the country, I realize how marvelous their business development has become. And I know there is no field closed to them."

Music broadcast by wireless from Glasgow was heard by miners 330 feet below ground, at a distance of 15 miles from the city.

The Safe Driver

A man may have a mechanically perfect car, but because of careless driving he may cause an accident that results in serious injury or death to himself or others.

Reckless driving is not a demonstration of skill.

A moment or two saved to-day by reckless speeding is not efficiency, for speeding to-morrow may result in a smash that will lay up the car for several days and you for several months. Hurrying to get ahead of a train, a street car, or another vehicle saves only moment or two at the ultimate destination, and the gain is not worth the price; there is too much danger of accident.

The best drivers are especially careful at dusk or twilight. There is then neither enough daylight nor sufficient artificial light to make objects distinguishable at ordinary distances.

Slow up for all turns in the road. Blind corners are dangerous. When it is impossible to see what is coming from around the corner, be prepared to stop. Sound the horn a short distance before the corner.

Don't zig-zag from one side of the street to the other.

When installing chains on the rear wheels, install them on both wheels or none at all. Only one chain may result in a serious accident. Chains on all four wheels help the steering of the car.

There are ruts at the bottom of almost every hill. Hitting these ruts at too high a speed may cause the driver to lose control of his car.

Bridges Are Dangerous.

Drive slowly at bridges and at culverts. A bad rut or a stone in the road may throw your car against the structure

When attempting to pass another vehicle going in the same direction, start turning out (to the left) at least 75 feet to the rear. If you get up too close your view of the road ahead is obstructed and you may turn directly in front of another car coming toward you. When you have passed a car do not cut back into the road or slow down too soon.

Always be careful when backing. Sound the horn three times; signal other cars, and look back (not ahead) to see where you are going. Mirrors are valuable at all times.

Clean windshields give you a clear view ahead. Every car should have a secondary windshield (rain visor) or windshield wiper which will prevent snow or rain from obstructing the driver's view.

When driving, do not attempt to carry on a long distance conversation with others in the car. Small children should preferably sit in the rear of the car, they should never be held in or between the arms of the driver.

Safe driving demands your full and undivided attention.

Be sure and signal when driving toward or away from the curb

You should shut off the engine, remove the ignition key, and set the emergency brake, when leaving the car. Cramp the wheels to prevent the car from moving accidentally.

YOUNG BRIDE STOLEN AWAY BY CRIMINALS

Relatives Say Mrs. Sadie Willis Hidden Because of Knowledge of Robbery—Simcoe Girl.

FEARED BANDITS

DETROIT, Aug. 24.—Mrs. Sadie Willis, 16-year-old choir girl and bride of a few weeks, is held prisoner by a band of criminals, was the belief expressed to-day by the girl's relatives.

William H. Perry, her uncle, and a private investigator, of Simcoe, Ontario, said to-day that the girl told him several months ago she had been threatened by a gang because she had witnessed a sensational robbery about a year ago. Mrs. Willis disappeared Saturday in an automobile driven by several men.

Both the girl's father, Arthur Perry, and the husband, William N. Willis, a wholesale paint shop operator, at 1416 Michigan avenue, were of the same opinion, although neither had known of the girl's confession to the uncle until to-day.

In Simcoe Church Choir.

According to the uncle, William Perry, Sadie was a member of the Zion Methodist church choir in Simcoe, Ont., where she had lived periodically with her uncle and grandmother.

"About six months ago Sadie visited my home in Simcoe, making a special night trip from Detroit," the uncle said. "I asked her why she had come so far at that time of the night, and she said she didn't know.

"I could see she was worried about something, and I urged her to tell me what was wrong. 'I'll tell you, Uncle Will — you're the only person I can trust,' she said, breaking into tears. 'I'm afraid of some Detroit criminals who have threatened my life to keep me from telling the police on them.'

"I kept her at my home for a while and she seemed happy again. Then she finally returned to Detroit, and shortly after married Mr. Willis," the uncle added.

Reticent, Says Her Uncle.

"When I first questioned her about the bandits she was very reticent," Perry said. "She kept telling me about her fear that the men would kill her if she told anyone who they were. She wouldn't even tell me their identity or give me a hint what robbery it was. All she would say was that Detroit papers were filled with it at the time.

"When I heard she was missing her confession was recalled and I hurriedly left my business and motored 175 miles to Detroit to conduct an investigation myself and to give the Detroit police what information I had."

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press). — "Cholly Knickerbocker," writer of a society column in Hearst newspapers, declares he has information to the effect that the announcement of the engagement of Lady Mary Beatrice Thynne, youngest daughter of the Marquis of Bath, to the Prince of Wales will probably be made in the autumn, when the Prince returns from his Canadian tour.

He declared his information "emanates from sources close to Buckingham Palace," and asserts that the alleged romance "is principally due to a piece of conversation in smart London drawing-rooms."

RUSSIA TO OPPOSE BRITISH OCCUPATION WRANGEL ISLE

Foreign Minister Tichtherin Addresses Note to Britain Protesting That England Has Not Answered Two Previous Communications.

MOSCOW, August 24 (United Press). — Russia intends to oppose the British occupation of Wrangel Island, the scrap of Arctic territory on which the British flag has been hoisted.

Foreign Minister Tchitcherin on Thursday addressed a new note to Britain, protesting against the fact that Great Britain has not answered the two previous Russian notes on the subject.

He points out that Baron Wrangel discovered the island more than one hundred years ago, and that it has been since entered on all maps and acknowledged by all Powers as Russian territory.

Tchitcherin declares that Russia regards the act of Britain as a violation of Russian sovereignty, and asserts Russia's full claim to the territory.

AWAIT REQUEST FROM ONTARIO

Alberta Coal Producers Will Not Help With Winter Fuel Until Asked by People.

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Until a request comes from the people of Ontario for the Alberta coal producers to help them with their winter supplies of fuel, the members of the Red Deer Valley Coal Operators' Association do not propose to take any action.

This was decided upon at a meeting of the Association in Drumheller Thursday, when the question of a possible coal shortage in the East because of the strike looming in the American anthracite coal fields was raised.

It was stated an offer had been received from the Canadian National Railways for Alberta domestic coal shippers to ship to Ontario at the rate of $9 a ton until August 31. However, after that date it would cost the shippers $12.75 to ship from Drumheller to Ontario.

No official statement has been received by the Drumheller operators regarding the situation in the East, it was said. Until that statement was received, or until the Ontario consumers sent a direct request for Alberta domestic, the operators proposed to maintain an attitude of watchful waiting.

LONGEST TRAIN OF NEWSPRINT

Shipped From Abitibi Paper Mills at Iroquois Falls Composed of 42 Cars.

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—What is stated to be the longest train of newsprint that ever left Northern Ontario, 42 cars in all, arrived in Toronto to-day with a shipment from the Abitibi Power and Pulp Co. The train left North Bay, drawn by one of the latest type of passenger locomotives which the Canadian Pacific is building in its Angus shops. Ordinarily it would require two engines to haul this train of more than 1,100 tons, but a record was established when the huge engine arrived in Toronto without mishap. Water was taken but four times during the trip. Included in the train were cars for various Canadian newspapers and United States newspapers. The Abitibi mill, which is the largest individual paper mill in the world, has been running at capacity, 500 tons newsprint daily all this year. The company is the largest exporter of paper newsprint in Canada, it is understood, and it is shipping an average of 22 cars of newsprint daily since the beginning of the year. The engine which hauled the train from North Bay to Toronto, some 320 miles, will be part of the C. P. R. exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition, opening this week, together with the latest model of tourist, dining and sleeping car, as well as a baggage and compartment car. All the equipment which will be exhibited is part of that used in the Trans-Canada service. It is stated the newsprint shipped by the Abitibi Company represents the cut made on more than 200 acres of pulpwood.

SEVEN DEAD IN ATHENS STRIKE

Communist Workers Clashed With Soldiers —300 to Be Tried by Court Martial.

ATHENS, Aug. 24.— (Canadian Press). — Three hundred persons have been arrested following Thursday's Communist riots here. They will be tried by court martial. Sporadic disorders in the general strike here flamed into open rioting Thursday when soldiers and Communist workers clashed in a pitched battle in which four soldiers and three civilians were killed. The workmen attempted to disarm a military patrol. The troops resisted firing in the crowd, and general fighting followed. Reinforcements rushed from the Governmen barracks disperse the rioters.

REPAIR ROADS IN TOWNSHIPS

Colonization Roads in Northern Peterborough Toured by Mr. Bradburn and Department Engineer.

W. H. Bradburn, M.L.A., accompanied by an engineer of the Colonization Roads Department, returned last night about ten o'clock from an inspection trip over the roads of Harvey, Galway and Cavendish Townships. Many sections of these roads were found to be badly in need of repair, and improvements will be started at once, to be completed this fall, probably by the first of October.

Mr. Bradburn is familiar with most of the roads of Peterborough County, but this tour gave him the opportunity of gaining exact information of the present condition of these highways in the northern townships. The repair work that is being planned covers sections where it is most needed.

Throughout the northern part of the county the foliage of of the trees has the appearance of late September or October, Mr. Bradburn said. It does not show the coloring that follows the frosts, but rather a bleached yellowness, probably due to the lack of rain.

FIELDING MUM ON HOME BANK

Maintains Silence on Request of Depositors at Toronto Meeting.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—Finance Department is still pursuing its policy of silence in regard to the Home bank. Hon. W. S. Fielding, Minister of Finance, on having his attention called this morning to a resolution of the meeting in Toronto of Home bank depositors, asking for the appointment of an investigator, independent of the Canadian Bankers' Association, to collaborate with the curator in the inquiry into the bank's affairs, replied that he had no commept to make.

Three questions were put to the Minister of Finance in this connection. He was asked whether he had received the resolution of the Toronto meeting, whether he intended to take action in regard to it and under what section of the Bank Act action would be taken. His reply to all three questions was that he regretted he had nothing to say.

TELLS KIWANIS ALL ABOUT THE ALBERTA COAL

Howard Stutchbury, Trade Commissioner for Alberta, Speaker at Today's Luncheon.

PLANNING A PICNIC

The Peterborough Kiwanians at their luncheon to-day had the opportunity of hearing considerable about Alberta coal and the possibility of its taking the place of American anthracite in the Ontario market.

Mr. Howard Stutchbury, the Trade Commissioner of Alberta, was the speaker of the day, and his address in regard to Alberta coal, closely following that given at the conference held earlier in the day, which is reported elsewhere in to-day's issue, was full of new information for the members.

Mr. Stutchbury was accompanied by Mr. E. L. McIntyre, chairman of the Special Fuel Committee of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and Mr. Irwin, of the Manufacturers' Association, and among other guests present was Rotarian Leon Frazer.

President J. A. McKone was in the chair, and there was a large attendance.

Kiwanian John I. Allen gave a report of the activities of the committee appointed to arrange for a field day of the Kiwanians of eastern Ontario stating that it would be held at Cobourg on Wednesday next, and that the Kingston, Belleville, and Lindsay Kiwanis Clubs would co-operate with Peterborough in putting the event over.

There will be an address of welcome from Mayor Boggs of Cobourg, a short address on "Kiwanian Ideals" by Kiwanian Rev. James Rollins, followed by a good programme of softball and athletic events

Mr. Stutchbury, who informed the gathering that he himself was a Kiwanian and a member of Edmonton Club, the farthest North club in the world, explained that his mission to the East was in the nature of a love feast, inasmuch, he hoped, that it would result in the people of the East taking a greater interest in their fellow-Canadians in the West, and vice-versa. There should really be no talk of East and West, he declared. There was only one Canada.

Mr. Stutchbury then laid before the club the details of the fuel situation in so far as the possibilities of Alberta coal supplying the needs of Ontario.

At its conclusion a short discussion took place, the Kiwanians asking a number of questions, which were cheerfully answered by Alberta's Trade Commissioner.

A vote of thanks was passed to the speaker on the motion of Messrs. Joseph Wearing and G. N. Gordon.

THE WEATHER.

This morning the temperature was down to 38 degrees, two degrees lower than the morning of the 16th. White frost was again to be seen, and the rain that has fallen to-day is one of the usual results of a white frost. Lower temperatures have been experienced farther north, and 32 degrees (the freezing point) has already been reached at Apsley, and other northern points in this county.—W.P.

It's safe to take off your heavy undearwear now.

NAVAL HERO AND PEACE PREMIER

Late Baron Kato of Japan Gained Laurels by Wiping Out Russsian Armado.

LONDON, August 24. — United Press. — Admiral Baron Kato, Japan's great naval hero, and "peace premier," is dead in Tokio, a despatch from the Japanese capital said to-day.

Kato became premier last year, and announced a 'peace programme' of economy and development of friendship with the United States. His coming to the Premiership just after returning home from heading the Japanese delegation to the Washington Arms Conference, was hailed as inaugurating an auspicious era for Japanese-American relations.

Great Sea Fight.

The Admiral first came into world notice during the Russo-Japanese war when he was one of the heroes of the great sea fight of Taushima, in which the Russian Armada was wiped out by a Japanese fleet, commanded by Admiral Togo. Kato was considered responsible for the brilliant strategy in this battle, and was promoted to Vice-Admiral for his achievement.

A Baron in 1920.

Kato was made a Baron in 1920. He was born in Hiroshima in 1859, of a family in moderate means, and became an orphan a few years later. At twelve he entered the navy, and later completed his education in the naval academy. After graduating from the academy his advancement was rapid, and by 1902 he was chief of staff of a squadron, the position he occupied when he led the Japanese forces into the great fight against the Russians.

OLDEST MASON DEAD.

PICTON, Aug. 24. — (Canadian Press).—John Huff, aged 99, probably the oldest Mason in Canada, died at his residence here this morning. The late Mr. Huff joined the Prince Edward Lodge A. F. and A. M. on March 14, 1849.

They Could Not Carry Out Crime Even at Point of Friend's Revolver

MONTREAL, Aug. 24. — Two youths who cried and cringed when called upon to assist in the crime, and two others who wielded revolvers but ironically offered their victim a handkerchief to stem the flow of blood from a wound in the forehead they inflicted, formed a gang which held up, beat and robbed a chaffeur on the Gouin Boulevard, three miles west of Cartierville at midnight.

The victim of the latest hold-up in the country surrounding Montreal was Rodolph Willett, 24 years old, of Cartierville. After the hold-up men left him bleeding by the roadside and sped away in his car, the chauffeul hired a bicycle from a resident of St. Genevieve, near which the affair occurred, and rode to the Cartierville police station to report it. A doctor treated him for a bad gash on the forehead but he was able to return home later and is not seriously hurt.

Willett was on duty with his automobile at the stand near the terminus of the Cartierville street car when four young men, described as "under twenty years old," engaged him to drive them to St. Genevieve.

The chauffeur claims that he was about three miles from his stand when two of the young men threw themselves upon him and forced him to stop his car at the side of the road. He battled with his assailants and succeeded in throwing them off, but the others produced revolvers and made him put up his hands. Then they ordered the first two, apparently the youngest members of the band, to search his pockets. This order the youths shrank from obeying and when menaced by the revolvers of their supposed "friends," began to cry. Finally, in digust, one of the two armed men struck Willett over the head with the butt of his revolver and the pair searched him. They took $28 from his pocket.

Then he was ordered to leave the automobile. He did so, but the blow they had given him hurt and he sat at the side of the road with blood running from his forehead. His cap had dropped on to the floor of the car. As the men were about to drive his automobile away Willett asked them, "Won't you give me my hat?"

"No," the man who had struck him said," but here's a handkerchief to wipe your head with."

When the case was reported to the Cartierville police at 12.40 o'clock the detective headquarters were notified and the alarm spread to all stations to be on the look-out for the gang. No arrests had been made to-day.

NARROW ESCAPE OF FIRE CAPTAIN WILLIAM JONES

Overcome by Smoke While Fighting Fire Which Destroyed Florence & Sons Junk Storehouse.

DIFFICULT TO FIGHT

Fire Captain William Jones, 490 Cambridge street, had a narrow escape yesterday when he was overcome by smoke while fighting the fire which destroyed the contents of D. Florence and Sons' junk storehouse on Bethune street. He had penetrated to the top floor in the southwest corner with a line of hose and was playing it on the heart of the fire when the smoke overcame him and he fell senseless. Assistant Fire Chief James Ward climbed the stairs and fell over the prostrate Captain. He hurried him to the open air, here artificial respiration was administered and Dr. T. W. H. Young called. The unconscious man was carried on a fire ladder to the station, where he recovered consciousness under Dr. Young's ministrations. Mrs. Jones was informed of the accident, and sat with her husband through all the bustle and excitement incident to the fire and a subsequent call for the pulmotor, satisfied that in his heroic efforts attempts to quench the fire, he had escaped serious and permanent injury.

Difficult Fire

The alarm was turned in about 5:30 and lines were promptly laid from Simcoe street and Charlotte street. The fire appeared to originate in the northwest corner of the upper floor, but it quickly spread in the combustible material stored there. It is thought the burning debris fell down the elevator shaft and started fires in the other floors, even extending to the basement. No sooner had the firemen gained control in one point than the blaze broke out with renewed fury at another.

Several ladders were erected and the water directed through the windows where possible. Many of the windows were choked with bundles of papers and it as found impossible to remove the obstruction, so the fire men were compelled to break through the roof. Smoke billowed from the broken windows and from the roof around the firemen, at times hiding them from view and causing great inconvenience.

More than once they were compelled to retire for breath, and some were busy for hours in the smoke filled interior of the building rushing to the openings for breaths of air to enable them to carry on.

The upper floor was filled from floor to ceiling with bundles of papers, making the task of the firefighters difficult and perilous. There was the added danger that when the water soaked the rags and paper, they would sway to such an exient that they might push the walls outward.

Firemen working at the west wall distinctly felt it bulge.

Water Cut Off

The firemen were several times greatly hampered in their work by having their lines disconnected in order to allow a train to pass. Three lines of hose were used all of them lying across the railroad tracks. After having the water shut off to let the mail train get by trenches were dug under the tracks and the lines laid through them. On one occasion the men who were right inside the building found the water suddenly cut off and for several minutes they were helpless in the face of the flames. On this occasion the cut was made in order to let the yard engine get by. After the hose had been placed under, instead of over the tracks no further difficulty was experienced.

The damage is estimated at from $1,000 to $1,200.

Test of Mettle

Although not of so spectacular a nature as many lessers fires, yesterday's blaze tested the mettle of the firemen to the utmost. Most of those who engaged in battling the flames are to-day nursing aching eyes and lungs caused by the acrid smoke.

The injured Captain is reported progressing favourably although still confined to bed.

ITALIAN GOVERNMENT SENDS AN ULTIMATUM

ROME, Aug. 24. — (Canadian Press). — The Italian Government has sent an ultimatum to Jugo-Slavia, asking that a definite decision be reached concerning the status of Fiume. It is alleged here that the Government at Belgrade is constantly delaying the settlement of the situation. The Italian press says that Premier Mussolini proposed first that Fiume be governed by a mixed Italo-Jugo Slavia commission; second, that this commission entrust the Italian Government with the political and administrative management of the city.

LOWER RATE ON COAL WANTED BY CITIZENS

S. Gompers Says He is No Prophet As to Coal Strike

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press.)—A sympathetic strike on the part of the soft coal miners to aid an anthracite walk-out, should such be called, would make the most powerful strike in the coal industry that the world has ever seen, Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, said in an address here last night.

"I have no information, however, as to the likelihood of such a strike," Mr. Gompers said. "As to which side would win if it took place, well, I am no prophet."

City Council, Chamber of Commerce, Manufacturers' Association and Coal Dealers Unite in Petition.

ECONOMIC SAVING

Whereas Canada is under an economic difficulty in the matter of fuel supply,

And whereas each year millions of dollars of Canadian money leave this country,

And whereas, Canada has available both east and west abundant deposits of coal the purchase of which would retain Canadian money in the country and would give our National Railway system greater tonnage and Canadian workers in the mines continuous employment,

Be it resolved that this meeting representing the City Council, the Chamber of Commerce, the Manufacturers' Association and the coal dealers, calls upon the Prime Minister of Ontario to do everything in his power to induce the railways to establish a freight rate which will allow Canadian coals to be offered in Ontario on a competitive basis.

And be it further resolved that copies of this resolution be forwarded to Premier G. H. Ferguson, Premier M. King and Sir Henry Thornton.

The above resolution, moved and seconded by T. N. D. Kelly and F. A. Hodgson, was passed at a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce this forenoon at which the situation in regard to Alberta coal was lucidly explained by men prominent in the movement to develop Canadian coal. Howard Stutchbury of Edmonton, Alberta Government Trade Commissioner, was the principle speaker, and he was introduced by R. L. McIntyre of Toronto, chairman of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association Special Committee on Fuel.

No Fuel Problem

Mr. Stutchbury declared in his first sentence that there is no fuel problem in Canada. He admitted that there is a serious problem in regard to the distribution of fuel from the place of production to the point of consumption. Alberta has coal enough to keep Canada warm for many centuries. It has 14 per cent of the world's supply of coal and 89 per cent of the coal in Canada.

"Since coming to the East I found many things about Alebrta coal of which we knew nothing in the west," the speaker said. "I found that it is smoky, dirty, it burned away quickly it, couldn't be burned in the ordinary grate and it would not last. This was all new to me. We did not discover these things where we had been burning the coal for twenty or thirty years." There is every variety of coal in Alberta. There is high grade steam coal and soft coal. The soft coal is so named because it is not anthracite. It is not to be confused with the soft coal of the United States. The American soft coal is sooty and smoky and has a low fusibility ash.

On demonstration of the Alberta coal in homes and in plants, it vindicated its high quality completely, the speaker said. "Alberta coal is practically smokeless and sootless. It is chemically different from American soft coal It is clean to handle It requires no special equipment to burn it. In the west no larger stove pipes or flues are used, and all the stoves are manufactured in the east."

Ash Content Small

The firemen in Toronto, the speaker continued, were surprised by their test of Alberta coal. Five furnaces and one kitchen range were connected to one chimney, showing that the smoke is not so black as pictured. Two ash cans were provided for test purposes and the ashes from the coal were daily deposited in these. At the end of seven days the cans were not full. The ashes contain no unburned fuel.

"We heard too that coal mined in Alberta two weeks all went to dust. I have coal in my cellar eight years, and the heat loss is practically negligible."

The Commissioner admitted that certain grades of Alberta coal if exposed to rain and sun would disintegrate, but in the cellar or shed it would last satisfactorily throughout the season Manitoba, he said, burned 95 per cent. Alberta coal in 1922 instead of the 15 per cent used previously. This was not because of any pressure of necessity, but from choice. There is always a big supply of anthracite at the head of the lakes and this year it is selling cheaper than Alberta coal. Despite the handicap in price there has been no difference to the Alberta market.

Must be Learned.

"You will not know how to burn the Alberta coal at first," Mr. Stutchbury said. "There must be a little light to burn the volatile gas. In Alberta coal the volatile gases are released at low temperature,

MASONIC PICNIC A HUGE SUCCESS

Hundred and Twenty-Five Excursionists Down the River Spent Real Merry Time.

The annual Masonic Picnic was held yesterday afternoon to Idyl Wyld and Hiawatha per steamer Stoney Lake. There were about 125 on board, and the trip was occupied in various ways. The weather although cool, was fine, and the river and the lake never looked better.

An attempt was made to land at Idle Wyld where a baseball diamond had been laid out previously, but owing to the wind and other causes the boat had to land the excursion at Hiawatha.

Sport Events.

On arrival here the sports were immediately got under way. The first event was a soft ball game between teams from Corinthian, Peterboro, and Royal Arthur Lodge. Corinthian won the bye, and the other two lodges fought it out, Peterboro winning 5 to 2. The final game was won by Peterboro Lodge 9 to 6.

The victorious team was composed of the following: McLean, p; Helson, c; Lowes 1b; Baird ss; Munroe 2b; Jones ss; Hamilton 3b; Turner lf; Haris rf.

Messrs. Dunkerly and Chief Gimblett umpired and Jim Downing scored.

The winners hold the shield presented by the Senior Warders for annual competition.

Peterboro Lodge also won the tug of war championship, defeating the other lodges in straight pulls.

The winning team was as follows: Bestard (Capt), Frost, Abramson, McLeod, King, Watson, Merrit, Lacheur, Rambo, Loomis.

They will hold the shield presented by the Junior Warders for yearly competition.

Fat Man's Race.

The fat man's race was won by Dr. Yelland with Jack Miller, a close and satisfied second. The doctor was presented with a fine hand embossed medal and Jack got a useful top.

Bill Campbell won the bald headed man's race, distancing Walter Stocker with a mighty burst of speed at the finish. First prize for this event was a valuable plated cup suitably engraved. Walter got a horn.

The Nail Race.

The Nail Race was won by a team from Corinthian Lodge, and the Centipede race also. The membership of these teams were presented with more or less valuable prizes.

After the sports the steamer was boarded, and supper served by Caterer T. Hooper.

On the way home the prizes were presented by the Rev. Rollins, and Bill Barrie at the piano led the singing.

WAR STATISTICS

GENEVA, August 23 (United Press). — That at least ten million combatants were disabled during the Great War, is disclosed by the statistics issued by the International Labour Office, regarding the number of people in the principal belligerent countries now receiving disablement pensions. The figures are:

| | |
|---|---|
| Germany | 1,537,000 |
| France | 1,500,000 |
| Great Britain | 1,170,000 |
| Italy | 800,000 |
| Russia | 775,000 |
| Poland | 320,000 |
| Jugo-Slavia | 164,000 |
| Austria | 164,000 |
| United States | 157,000 |
| Belgium | 110,000 |
| Roumania | 100,000 |
| Canada | 45,000 |
| New Zealand | 20,000 |
| Australia | 16,000 |
| Finland | 10,000 |

This totals 7,124,000, but no official statistics are available from Turkey, Bulgaria, the Baltic States, Portugal, Hungary, and Japan. There is ample evidence, however, says the bureau, that to put the total of disabled men in the World War at ten millions, would not be an over-statement. ....

ATTACHING WAISTS

An inner staybelt is used to make the joining of skirt and waist trim and practical. It's an easy thing to do—putting the two parts of a dress together, but it must be carefully done since much of the hanging and fitting of a dress depends on it.

First the edges of the staybelt should be stitched as in the illustration. This is for firmness. Then the lower edge of the waist is gathered and basted to the belt—wrong sides together. Then the upper edge of the skirt is turned under, the skirt is shirred and then basted on the staybelt over the raw edges of the waist shirrings. In this way both outside and inside of the belt are smoothly finished.

If a camsole is used it should be attached inside, to the right side of the staybelt so that it can easily be removed for laundering.

This is one of the first principles of sewing and may be used on any dress that has a waist to be attached to a skirt.

8-HOUR STEEL DAY PLEASES PITTSBURGH

Changes Permit Workmen One Day Off in 3 Weeks.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 24.—Inauguration of the 8-hour day in the steel mills not yet a week old, has resulted in changes which mill managers and the workmen agree, is going to be a big help for all concerned. Not only will the men work shorter hours instead of the 12-hour day which the new system displaced, but the coveted "day off" has a place in the plan.

Three turns have been established numbered 1, 2 and 3. They occupy the three 8-hour periods into which the day is now divided, and rotate their position once each week. That is, No. 1 turn this week becomes No. 2 next week; No. 2 becomes No 3;No.3 becomes No. 1 and so on. To avoid the seven-day week, and give the day off, as much as possible in a continuance industry, the No. 1 turn works only six days each week, as against seven days for the other two turns.

In this manner, every man get a day off every three weeks, when his crew is the No. 1 turn. A time-honored practice is to change turns every week end, a system which managers and workmen alike declare has its drawbacks. To avoid this the new schedule gives the No. 1 or six- day turn, a 32- hour rest period at the change of the turn instead of 24 hours as originally intended. This is accomplished by putting the other two turns back to work after rest periods of only eight hours. It works automatically to bring forwad each week the day for changing the turn. That is, if the turn changes on Saturday this week, it will change on Friday next week. In this manner every man every turn gets a 32-hour rest period once in three weeks and each time on a different day.

SHOCK FROM A LAMP SOCKET PROVED FATAL

Harry Parks Instantly Killed in Basement of His House Last Evening

IN PERFECT HEALTH.

Harry Parks, 61 Morrow street, was killed last night when he received a shock from a lamp socket in the basement of a house which he owned on Sherbourne street.

At 7.20 the unfortunate young man, with Fred Goselin, the tenant of the house, was making repairs to steps in the cellar when he reached up to the light. "He made a noise" Mr. Goselin said, "and I ran up to the switch and turned the power off. Then I carried him upstairs." The Fire Department was called on and responded with the pulmotor. Dr. W. D. Scott was also summoned, and later Dr. T. W. H. Young attended.

All efforts to restore respiration were unavailing, although the doctors and the firemen labored for an hour and a half with the pulmotor and using artificial respiration methods. They unwillingly gave up hope when their efforts were proven useless.

Peculiar Circumstances.

Dr. Scott professed suprise that the 110 volt current should prove fatal unless the victim suffered from heart disease. Friends said he was perfectly healthy and robust. The cellar floor was damp, but even this, an electrician said, should not make the shock fatal. Two other cases were reported in this immediate neighborhood yesterday. One lady had a similar experience with a lamp in her cellar, but fortunately escaped with a severe jolt. Her arm, she said, was powerless for two hours afterwards. Mrs. Tully said her iron jumped on the table several times so that she had great difficulty in using it.

Widowed Mother Mourns.

Mr. Parks is survived by his mother, Mrs. Esther Parks, widow of the late Isaac Parks, and a younger brother. He was the handyman of the district and often did work similar to that which led him to his death. He was employed as a mechanic in the Duffus Garage, and was highly thought of by his fellow workmen and by Mr. Duffus. "Harry was one of those fellows who was perfectly willing to go out at any time of the day or night if he could do a good turn," Mr. Duffus said. "He was a splendid worker, and has been with me for four years. No one, except his mother, feels any worse about his death than I do." Mr. Parks was 26 years of age.

Sir Lomer Gouin left Ottawa last night, and will join Mr. Graham at Montreal. They will sail on Saturday and after attending the league of nations conference at Geneva, will go to London, where they will represent Canada at the Imperial economic conference.

Election Campaign Is Free From Violence.

DUBLIN, Aug. 24. — (Canadian Press.)—The election campaign, although urged with great vigor, is still distinguished by the extraordinary absence of violence which formerly characterized all Irish elections. This is regarded as eloquent testimony to the changed political conditions, but is also partly due to the fact that the republicans now are professing to stand for law and order. Polling day, next Monday, has been proclaimed a public and bank holiday.

SOFT COAL MINERS TO STAY AT WORK

Will Not Be Affected By Strike of the Anthracite Miners — Present Contract Does Not Expire Till April 1.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press). — Soft coal production is not expected to be adversely affected in case of an anthracite strike in the U. S. operators and mine workers officials indicated here to-day. The soft miners are under contract until April 1.

Illinois coal operators and representatives of the miners including Frank Farrington, president of the Illinois district, met yesterday for discussion of routine and mutual matters. Both sides said no plans related to an anthracite suspension were under consideration.

Mr. Farrington indicated there was no thought of a suspension in the soft coal fields. He intimated, however that rumors that bituminous coal would take the place of anthracite in the event of a shut down of anthracite coal mines might cause discontent among union miners of the bituminous coal field.

The middle west has no cause for alarm at the threatened strike of anthracite miners, F. C. Hommold, secretary of the Illinois Coal Operators' Association said adding that there is a plentiful supply of bituminous coal above ground and that middle western bituminous operators can supply the demand in case of emergency.

Many Farmers Are Supporting the Pool.

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press.) — Approximately 400 signed wheat contracts were received at the head offices of the Alberta co-operative wheat producers, limited, yesterday morning. This boosted the total number of contracts to approximately 1,500, for a total acreage of about 200,000.

Reports from all parts of the province so far indicate that at least 75 per cent. of the 83,000 wheat growers are signing the contracts. Few of the provincial constituencies have estimated that their districts will go under 75 per cent., while a number estimate the sign-up at ninety per cent.

CANADA'S FUEL SUPPLIES ARE BEST IN YEARS

Imports of Both Anthracite and Bituminous Coal Much Greater This Year Than Last.

NEW SOURCE SUPPLY.

OTTAWA, Aug. 24. — Canadian Press. — Should a coal strike come in the United States, Canada is much better off for fuel supplies than last year but in about the same position as she was two years ago. This statement is based on figures of imports of coal obtained from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, covering a period up to the middle of the present month.

According to the statement there had been imported into Canada up to the midle of August in the present year since the opening of the present coal year in the month of April, approximately 1,900,000 tons of anthracite coal and 5,900,000 tons of bituminous coal. For the five months of the previous coal year, April to August, 1922, the imports of anthracite were only 312,000 tons and of bituminous 2,345,000 tons. For the fuel year 1921-22, however, the imports of anthracite for the five months ending with August were 2,130,000 tons, and the imports of bituminous were a little over 5,000,000 tons.

The Canadian fuel position is stronger this year than in the past, in having a new outside source of supply in the coal fields of Great Britain in addition to that of the United States. This source of supply has developed largely in the last two years. For the five months ending August, 1921, only 110 tons of coal of all kinds were imported into Canada from the United Kingdom. For the corresponding period last summer the import of coal of all kinds from the United Kingdom was a little over 64,000 tons, of which about 8,000 tons was anthracite and the balance bituminous. For the present fuel year the imports of anthracite coal from Great Britain from the first of April to the middle of August were 73,800 tons, while the imports of bituminous coal were 91,900 tons.

ARABIAN QUARRELS FOUGHT IN CARDIFF.

Four Policemen Attacked 800 Rioters When the Chamari Tribesmen Met Adenese.

CARDIFF, Wales, Aug. 24.—(Associated Press)—London may shelter this summer white-collared visitors from all over the world, but Cardiff often finds her streets littered with rough-neck sailormen from the Seven Seas. This was the case recently when 800 Arabian stokers made the dockfront the scene of an attempt to settle tribal differences finding their origin on the shores of the Red Sea. White dockers and sailors took their hands out of their pockets, spat on them, and leaped into the thick of it without asking whether it was a private battle of a free-for-all.

Four policemen came at a run and dutifully attacked the 800. Their truncheons made no impression on the mass, but they went on with their task. Knives began to flash, and brown-skinned Orientals went dashing through the dockyards, seeking reinforcements of their clansment. The Chamari tribesmen were settling an old grudge with the Adenese.

At the note of a whistle the four bobbies fel back to join 20 others who had come up in a motor-lorry. The 24 charged.

The Arabs then scattered, the police close on their heels picking up stragglers. The sad and battered company that rode away in the police van was composed of many tirbes, but there was no fight left in them.

Many ships come into Cardiff with Arabs serving in their crews as stokers and deckhands.

Will Hold Conference to Curb the Rum Runners

OTTAWA, Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Following yesterday afternoon's meeting of the cabinet council Premier King announced that the conference between Canadian and United States government officials at which measures to curb rum running activities on the border will be discussed, is to be held early in September.

A series of friendly notes have been exchanged between the two governments in regard to this matter the Premier stated, and arrangements for the meeting have been practically completed.

The United States government will be represented at the conference which takes place in Ottawa, by McKenzie Moss, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Department. The Canadian government will be represented by Hon. Jacques Bureau, Minister of Customs and Excise.

Communications which passed from the Canadian to the United States government, the Premeir said assured the American authorities of Canada's desire to co-operate as far as possible with them in the enforcement of American laws just as Canada expected the American government would co-operate with Canadian authorities, where possible, in the maintenance of Canadian law. It was pointed out in the notes addressed to the American government that already Canadian customs officers stationed at Border points had instructions to notify American officers of liquor shipments consigned to points in the United States.

The suggestion that a conference be held in this connection came from the United States government and was discussed in the House of Commons last session.

Rum running activities at Border points which are said to have caused American prohibtion authorities considerable trouble in the past led to the request for a discussion of reciprocal arrangements between the two governments to curb what American authorities consider a serious menace to the successful enforcement of the Volstead Act.

PREMIER OF JAPAN HAS PASSED AWAY

While Health Poor it Was Thought His Condition Not Dangerous,

TOKIO, Japan, August 24 (Canadian Press). — Baron Tomosa Buro Kato, Premier of Japan, died this afternoon, it was allowed to become known officially late to-day.

White Premier Kato had been ill for a number of months, it was announced only last Monday that his condition was not dangerous.

It was added, however, that his health was etremely poor, and that his retirement could be expected in the near future.

Early this afternoon the announcement was made that the Premier was seriously ill.

Following this came the official report that he had died.

Owing to the not unusual custom in Japan of not officially announcing immediately the death of an important official, it was several hours before this report could be confirmed.

Admiral Baron Kato was born in 1859, and had a distinguished career in naval, administrative and diplomatic services before he was elevated to Premership last year. The Japanese press with some show of authority has been stating that Baron Kato was suffering from cancer. The attending physicians, however, reported stomach trouble and hemorrhoid and issued reassuring bulletins to the last, even at noon to-day, saying simply that his condition had grown worse since midnght, with some signs of exhaustion. It was added, though, that little improvement had been shown since midnight and the patient's heart was causing anxiety.

FLORIDA PROPOSES OVERSEAS HIGHWAY.

Key West is 125 Miles From Mainland But Road Will Be Constructed.

TALLAHASEE, Fla., Aug. 24.—(Associated Press)—An "Overseas Railway" from Key West to the Florida mainland, a distance of approximately 125 miles, is a possibility of the not distant future if plans of Key West civic leaders are carried out. They seek to supplement means of travel to and from the little city which was entirely cut off from the mother state until the Florida East Coast railroad was completed in 1912.

Plans already have progressed to the point of investigating the feasibility of the road, the committee that made the survey pronouncing the matter largely one of finances. A practicaly highway can be constructed over the distance, except for bridges, the committee reported, for approximately $1,500,000. Recommendation that ferries be used over the stretches of open water until funds are available for bridge building was made.

Unless outside aid is rendered, however, construction of the road may be completed only in sections, owing to Monroe county's inability to bond itself above $500,000. A date early in September is being discussed as the time to vote on a bond issue to begin the work.

The state highway department, at its last quarterly meeting, voted to give the projects is assistance to the extent of engineering advice.

GREAT FUR DISPLAY AT LITTNER'S NEW STORE

An array of furs that gladen the heart of any woman is oh exhibition at the Littner Fur Store at 311 George street, which opened a few days ago. The Littner store is the latest addition to the downtown business section. The stock is replete with furs and fur garments of all descriptions. The Peterboro store is a branch of the great Mayer Littner Fur Manufacturing company's house at Montreal and Toronto which, because of the large volume of its business can save the purchaser 30 per cent or more on all fur garments. The Littner company buys its raw furs direct from trappers, and only the best is accepted. The fact that Mr. Littner has been in the fur business thirty-five years speaks well for his company. At the Peterboro store a specialty is made of remodelling. A visit to the Littner store is well worth the time.

OMAHA DRYER THAN EVER.

OMAHA, Nebr., Aug. 24.—A 3,000 foot fire hose stretched across a bridge from Council Bluffs, furnished Omaha's principle water supply to-day, following the Missouri river cave-in that filled the water mains with mud.

Thousands of persons fought for places in line at the end of the hose, filling buckets, barrels and jugs. Water in the city's mains remained two thirds mud, a condition which will last a week, officials said.

Hundreds stood in line all night to drink from springs at the city parks. Packings plants and other industries remained closed.

STILL HOPE OF SETTLEMENT IN COAL STRIKE

U. S. Government Has Plans Prepared to Meet Emergency in Case of an Acute Fuel Shortage.

MEETING TUESDAY.

WASHINGTON, August 24. Canadian Press. — Final phases of the United States Government's programme for supplying fuel to anthracite consumers in the event of the suspension of work in the hard coal mines were taken up yesterday by the several bureaux to which the preparations had been assigned, but hope of an ultimate settlement of the controversy between operators and their employees continued to be expressed in various quarters.

Chairman Hammond of the coal commission, after a conference with President Coolidge announced that the commission's 'emergency report' on the situation would be held up until the last minute so that its conclusions may not hinder any move of the disputants to get together. He declined to say whether the commission was in receipt of information which led it to expect such a move. The visit to the White House was explained as for the purpose of reporting progress in the distribution programme.

The threatened suspension of anthracite production was reflected in the activity of a number of government bureaux yesterday as the administration's "defense" program began to assume definite shape. In the interior department, the bureaux of mines completed the preparation of instructions for those who would be called upon to substitute soft for hard coal, and the geological sur-

Fuel Committee is Watching Situation

OTTAWA, Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press).—The Central Advisory Fuel Committee of the Federal government is keeping a close watch upon the situation which has developed in the United States between the coal miners operators it was announced last night, by the Prime Minister. Should the threatened strike materialize, the Premier intimated that the same policy as adopted by the government last year, would be pursued in dealing with the situation as it affected Canada. Details of fuel distribution will be left to municipal and provincial governments, with the Federal authorites offering any assistance possible in the way of providing cars and taking general steps to relieve acute conditions.

Tchitcherin Lays Claim to Wrangell Island.

MOSCOW, Aug. 14.— (Canadian Press.)—Foreign minister Tchitcherin has sent a note to the British government protesting against the raising of the British flag on Wrangell Island by Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the explorer.

Wrangell was incorporated into Russia's territory in the years 1821-24, the note says. In 1910 Russia built light houses on the island and undertook other works there, and in 1915 formally notified the Allied and neutral governments that Wrangell, together with the other islands and territories along the coast of Siberia, constituted integral parts of Russian territory.

As, during the entire intervening period, no government has questioned Russia's claim to the island, the note says, the Soviet government regards the raising of the British flag there as a violation of Russia's sovereign rights.

OFFICIALS MAY STILL MEET AT ATLANTIC CITY

Employers and Miners Both Stand Fast But Delegates Are Still Waiting For a Conference.

A FINISH FIGHT.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Aug 24 —(Canadian Press). — Anthracite mine operators and officials of the miners' union, firmly convinced that Sept. 1 would see a complete stoppage of their industry as a result of failure to make a new wage contract remained yesterday in Atlantic City though all communication between them had been suspended for 48 hours. Both groups had been definitely told that the U. ## THE GUINEA PIG.

For a month the First National Bank of Shelby, Mont., was also the last bank of Shelby. Now it is closed, a victim of post-war conditions in that erstwhile thriving young metropolis. There is a certain stratum of inferior boxers known as the Guinea Pigs, since they are employed exclusively in an experiment capacity by title contenders. Shelby is the guinea pig of little fight towns and the experiment appears to be on the point of proving fatal.

The immediate lesson derived from the research of Messrs. Dempsey, Gibbons and Kearns is that the frog who tries to be an ox will explode in the process. It is extremely doubtful whether any more towns where sidewalks are carried in at night will have sufficient hardihood to stage a ruinous war either for amusement or for advertising purposes—not while bankers are still familiar with the experience of Shelby.

There is a greater moral, possibly, to be inferred from the misfortune of this particular guinea pig. That is, that if you must have war it is better to do as Shelby has done—pay for it in advance. Shelby is sunk, but she has no foreign debt, she is unconcerned with international loans. Her debt is internal. She paid the fiddler before he went to work, and while it took every dollar in the house she is infinitely better off than anyone who hires the fiddler and delays payment until the morning after.

A TROUNCING—FOR THE PUBLIC.

There is nothing reassuring in the language used by John L. Lewis, head of the Miners' Union, in declaring that "the mine workers are prepared to enter an industrial contest September 1 and to administer to the operators the most complete trouncing of their career."

The average man would not worry very much over the troubles of the mine owners were it not for the fact that he knows perfectly well, just as Mr. Lewis does, who would be the real recipient of the trouncing the miners' President predicts.

It will not be the operators who will be trounced if the strike is successful—but the public.

Any increase forced upon the operators will be simply passed on to the consumer, and while labour as represented by the miners may appear to win a victory, labour as represented by the workers in every other line, who will have to pay through the nose for their fuel, will be the real loser.

Apparently that fact does not bother Mr. Lewis and those who are associated with him in his the-public-be-damned attitude.

The United States Government will be expected to take steps to protect the innocent bystander—the public—and the full support of the people in any measure adopted can be anticipated.

These continuous disturbances in the coal mining industry have grown irksome to the public, and there is little sympathy for the miners who seem determined to precipitate a strike.

CHEMONG PARK.

It is unfortunate that any complications have arisen or are likely to arise over the question of the rights of the public to have access to the waterfront at Chemong Park.

The intention of the township of Smith when the park property was deeded over was that a strip along the lakefront should be reserved for the use of the public.

It is possible that the raising of the water in the lake has submerged the orginal right-of-way.

But there would be no need of bickering over the matter if it were treated in a spirit of community interest.

It should be possible to allow visitors and park residents alike every opportunity to indulge in bathing without interfering with or proving an annoyance to the cottage owners.

Situated as it is within a few minutes' drive from the city and offering such unique facilities for safe bathing, it is natural that many Peterborough citizens should frequently visit Chemong Park, and there seems no reason why they should not do so, provided that they recognize that they have no right to trespass upon privately owned property, and provided, too, that the park residents in their turn realize that one of the original conditions upon which the property was turned over was that the public should not be barred from the waterfront.

There has not been much trouble over this point up to the present, and if those two conditions are kept in mind there should not be any difficulty in spite of the ever-increasing popularity of the park.

THE BRITISH HARVESTERS.

Conflicting stories come out of the West as to experiences of the harvest helpers brought out from the British Isles to assist in gathering in the enormous wheat crop.

While immigration officials minimize the situation and deny there has been any trouble news dispatches indicate that many of the men have not yet received employment and are at the end of their financial tether.

Lack of experience on the part of a large proportion of the newcomers is, of course, a factor.

Naturally the Western farmers do not care to pay unskilled assistants the same wages as the experienced helper receives.

Yet the British quota maintain that they were told before sailing for Canada that experience was not necessary, that they were sure of employment and that they would be paid the prevailing rate of wages.

The Examiner has no doubt that they were promised certain things that have not materialized.

The Government should investigate the circumstances under which these men were induced to come to Canada, and if it is found that promises were made that were extravagant and impossible the offending officials should be removed from the service.

It would be advertising of the very worst kind if thousands of harvest hands were to return to the Mother Country with graphic tales of having been grossly deceived.

THE FRENCH NOTE.

Premier Poincare seems to have written the most effective controversial note he has yet contributed to the diplomatic debate with his war ally. Hitherto he has contented himself with denying rather than debating; and the British Government will probably regard it as a gain that the French Premier has at last come to the conclusion that he must defend his case before the court of world opinion.

French statesmen are invariably excellent controversialists when they set their minds seriously to the task. M. Poincare is one of the best. The clever manner in which he turns many of the British points back on their authors must provoke a smile of appreciation, even if it does not always carry conviction. He says, for instance, that while "it is, no doubt, to England's interest that Germany should recover, it certainly cannot be to her interest that France should be diminished." Perfectly true; but, of course, the blunt British attitude is simply that they believe that the French occupation of the Ruhr will reduce—not increase—German payments, and so not only delay German recovery, but also diminish French prosperity.

There will be no doubt that, if this inter-Allied debate is to continue, the French will hold up their end. Lord Balfour is about the only living British fencer who could cross swords with so deft a master of the rapier as Poincare; and Lord Balfour is out of the lists. But the question which will strike home to plain business men suffering from trade stagnation and to hungry workingmen out of employment, is whether these two Allied nations can afford even so spectacular a tournament of wits while Great Britain faces a workless winter and France finances for herself an unprofitable military adventure—to say nothing of the possibility that Germany will default entirely by the easy process of political dissolution.

* * * *

M. Poincare makes a good debating point when he shows that all that France asks, as her irreducible minimum, is 26,000,000,000 gold marks. Whatever else is asked of Germany is either a direct demand for reparations by Great Britain or one of the other Allies, or else a demand from France for war debts which France must get out of Germany. That is, if Great Britain, the United States and the rest of the world feel so tender toward Germany that they want to let her off, they can easily do so down to the quite manageably minimum of 26,000,000,000 gold marks. All they need do is to release both Germany and France from all their obligations.

It is very neat. But it totally misrepresents the British position. The British do not desire to be "tender" to Germany. They do not want to let her off. They are just as anxious as the French to get out of her every pfennig that she can pay. Thus if it turns out that she can pay, then the British not only want their money but they sorely need it to meet their payments to the American Government. They naturally would not be willing to accept a scheme by which France would get paid but would not pay, while Britain would not get paid but still must pay. Hence when to the Poincare claim for twenty-six billions, we add the British claim for money to pay the Americans, and the further French claim for money to pay both the British and the Americans, we get a sum total which British experts judge to be today—after the Ruhr occupation—beyond the capacity of Germany to raise.

It is really all a question of German capacity; and it is a thousand pities that the French will not permit an International Commission to study this subject and at least deliver an opinion. At this point, the Poincare argument is at its weakest. It is nothing more than childish to say that these international experts will "declare that, the German treasury being empty, the Reich can pay nothing." They will hardly be as gullible as all that. Nor is it any compliment to their good faith to add that, on such a commission, France, "with a predominating interest, would not have the predominating vote." Such a commission would at least be friendlier to France than to Germany.—Montreal Star.

CHICAGO WHEAT.

CHICAGO, August 24 (Canadian Press). — A sharp break in September corn yesterday upset the wheat market, which was on the verge of recovering from an early decline, because of disappointing cable news. Trading, however, in the late part of the session in all grains became uneventful and uninteresting.

At the finish, wheat was off 1-8c to 1-2c, with December 104 5-8 and May 110 1-8 to 110 1-4.

Corn registered net losses off 1-8c to 1 5-8c, and oats 1-4c to 3-4c.

Provisions were 2 1-2c to 12 1-2c higher.

WINNIPEG CATTLE.

WINNIPEG, August 24 (Canadian Press). — Receipts, 1,823 cattle and calves, 623 hogs, and 332 sheep.

Killing steers are selling steady, but butcher cows and heifers are slow to move, and lower prices are looked for. The stocker and feeder market is active.

The hog market was steady at 10.00 for thick smooths and $11.00 for select bacons.

Good lambs sold from $11.00 to $12.00, and sheep from $5.00 to $7.00.

CASH GRAIN.

MONTREAL, August 24 (Canadian Press). — Business in the local grain market yesterday continued extremely dull. There were no new developments in the local flour market. Mill feed prices are quoted unchanged and business in rolled oats is light. There was nothing new in the baled hay market. A fair business in eggs was shown. Business in butter was light. There was a better inquiry for cheese, accompanied by a stronger tone.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, August 24 (Canadian Press). — General market continues fair, with no material change in price to note. Inquiries for export are not so encouraging. Private advice is to the effect that British buyers consider Canadian prices too high to ensure a healthy volume of business

Oh! Harold!

"OH! HAROLD" bubbling with life and rhythm is the very newest dance favorite—and as played by Zez Confrey and his orchestra—it's really an irresistible fox-trot. Its companion selection (on the reverse side) "ROSETIME AND YOU" is an added reason for the great popularity of this record. Ask for—

ON THE RITZ ROOF

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Perhaps the smartest gathering from the standpoint of social distinction and clothes these sizzling days is to be found on the Ritz roof. It provides a peep at fashionable New York plus.

There came, the other night, a tall and striking brunette. In her hair, running back from her forehead was a pure snow-white cow lick all eyes turned on her. Each table buzzed with curiosity. What caused the splotch of white? A sudden tragedy? A birth-mark?

Then another. The type Manhattan calls "Frenchy." Her bobbed hair was frizzed in wild fashion. A tiny gold strap over one shoulder held an extremely decolette evening gown. Her face was whitened to ghastliness and the lobes of her ears gleamed a brilliant red.

A dowager in cool apple green chiffon—plump and haughty. Her head was encased in a turban of cut stones as resplendent as one of old Delmonico's chandeliers. M. Theodore gave her the lowest bow. She was accompanied by a sleek hoofer, who danced divinely.

With a man who had a completely hairless head sat a willowly creature in flaming red. Her close-fitting hat had flaps that covered her ears like ear muffs. She gazed constantly at the smart world about her through a lorgnette and her cigaret holder was 15 inches long.

A petted he-darling was there—an obscure Italian sculptor—who moved his broad-shouldered bulk from table to table. He wore the flowering tie, loose-fitting clothes. A huge ring was on each index finger. Also Percy was there—each smart crod has one. Buck teeth, wisp of down on the upper lip and set of spare adenoids.

The daughter of a Gould with her blond athletic young husband. Dressed plainly in black but wearing a necklace of pearls that made the ladies gasp. The talk is of Piping Rock, the fox chase at Hampstead and the light gossip of the Long Island clans.

I have always wanted to see Clem Hawkins' reaction to one of these smart New York gatherings. Clem lived back of our town—far back in the bush. He caught his hired man washing his shirt in the creek one day at noon and kicked him off the place for "being a durn dude."

UNIQUE COIN SOLD FOR $1,100

LONDON, Aug. 24.—(Associated Press)—One of the most valuable English coins was sold at auction recetnly for $1,100.

The specimen was one of the 15 "Petition" crowns, or five shilling pieces, issued in the reign of Charles II. At that time a Dutchman was appointed engraver for new coinage much to the dismay of Thomas Simon, coin designer of the day. He therefore made an effort to regain his appointment by producing his "Petition" crown, around which he engraved an appeal to the King asking him to compare his work with that of the Dutchman.

OFFICIALS MAY

negotiations Tuesday. Arbitration for every disptued point was the last offer the employers had to make it was repeated, while the union spokesman John L. Lewis, steadfastly adhered to the ultimatum that the men would stay away from work unless a wage increase was assured.

But it also appeared during the day that the miners' union and the operators had a point to settle together before separating finally to take the measures which are necessary in what both sides now concede may be a finish fight. It will take about 4,000 men to keep the pumps going in the deep mines through the Pennsylvania region, to keep up the maintenance work under ground and to mine the coal that will fire the power plant sections which must be kept running. In practically all of the strikes in the anthracite field, a truce between union and employers has ben made sufficiently effective to assure the conduct of these operations. Unless it is done again, it was said by those familiar with the industry, anthracite mines might be so flooded and deranged wthin a few days or weeks as to make them incapable of production for many months.

S. D. Warriner, chairman of the general policy committee of the operators said that the subject had notben brought up. Mr. Lewis was however, holding in the city, all the 3 members of the miners' scale committee and there was said to be a likelihood that this group would be called to-day in a general meeting.

Mr. Lewis also consulted during the day with officers of the Central Pennsylvania district of bituminous miners, which fact gave rise to rumors concerning the possibility that the safe coal miners might be induced later to walk out in support of the anthracite workers. Except to say that the meeting with the Central Pennsylvania representatives had nothing whatever to do with the anthracite situation, the miners president would not discuss the sympathetic strike suggestions.

FANCIES HIGH PRICED VASE.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—(Associated Press)—Twenty-five thousand dollars was the price paid at auction in London recently for a Chinese vase of the Kanghe period, shaped as a beaker and standing 28 inches high. Several specimens of porcelain sold for more than $5,000 each.

vey prepared final data on available and prospective additions to the normal fuel supply.

F. R. Wadleigh, Federal Fuel Distributor completed arrangements for the meeting of representatives of the governors of eleven anthracite consuming states in New York next Tuesday, while his assistants conferred with the I.C.C. on a proposed system of priority for transportation. The shipping board was said to have prepared a list of ships most adapted for use in supplementing railroad transportation of special grades of bituminous to New England and New York.

While there has been no official intimation that recourse might be had to a restraining order from a Federal court, the Department of Justice was understood to have interested itself in the situation. A representative of the Attorney-General was said to be engaged in a study of the legal back ground with which the Department would have to deal if it were called upon to act. Other agents, as in the case of any domestic crisis holding possibilities of disturbances, have been scattered throughout the anthracite territory with instructions to report at frequent intervals on developments.

Possibility of sympathetic action by organized miners in the bituminous fields arising to impede the government's program has not been lost to view it was stated officially although confidence was expressed that the contract under which bituminous miners are employed would prevent any general disaffection on their part.

ST. MARY'S PARISH HAD SOCIAL EVENT

Sports, Booths, Social and Dancing Provided Splendid Entertainment.

SOUTH BEACH, Clear Lake, Aug. 24.—The social evening at St. Mary's Church, Young's Point, yesterday was the most successful event of its kind in the beautiful lakeside village. Favored by good weather and with a splendid attendance, the efforts of the entertainers met with the success they deserved.

St. Mary's is a small parish and the ambitious programme carried out reflects credit on the organizers and all who assisted. Many attended from Peterboro and Lakefield and to them the Farish extends thanks for their co-operation.

Following a large programme of sports, a bountiful fowl supper was served in the dining room of the South Beach Hotel by the ladies of the parish. The grounds of the Hotel formed a beautiful setting for the social.

The boys of the Holy Name Society who are in camp near Clear Lake, were on hand, marshalled by Rev. Father Finn. They had a splendid, if energetic, time.

Land and Water Sports

The sports were run off in the afternoon, and all events were well contested. Excellent sportsmanship prevailed.

The following were the events:—

100 yards race, for boys under 16, won by Arthur Doidge.

Men's 100 yards race: —Donald Fitzgerald.

Girls, under 16, 100 yards:—Margaret DeForge.

Boys, 14 and under, swimming race —Angus DeForge.

Men's swimming race:—Donald Fitzgerald.

Girls, 14 and under, swimming race Margaret DeForge.

Men's tandem—Frank Carroll and Russell Brooks.

Special race boys, 10 years and under, Alphonse Hanrahan.

Many Helpers

After the races the prizes were distributed by Rev. Father Meagher

Among those who assisted were Walter Young and James Carroll, who sold tickets and Joseph P. Eyotte and Lawrence Fleming, who collected them.

A booth, where soft drinks and ice cream were dispensed, was ably managed by Miss Lottie Kearney, assisted by Cyril Carroll.

Adrian Brooks, Victor Young and Cyril Carroll were in charge of the sports events.

The fancy work booth, which was greatly admired and well patronized, was in charge of Mrs. Walter Young assisted by Miss Call, Miss Helen Brooks, Miss Walsh and Miss Jennie Kearney.

A fish pond, which attracted many fishermen, was ably handled by Miss B. Walsh.

Other ladies, who assisted, were Misses Sinclair, Manion; Mary Buchanan and Kathleen DeForge.

Baseball Postponed

A proposed baseball game beteen the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's Parish, Young's Point and the H.N.S. of St. Joseph's Parish Douro, was postponed because of lack of time.

Mr. Brady had the star role in a "hit the nigger" booth and proved to be the centre of attraction.

The wheel of fortune did a thriving business under Frank Collins, Peterboro. He was assisted by John Henry, William Prendible, Neill Collins and Lou LeBarr jr.

Music for the dancing, which followed the social was provided by Lakefield orchestra.

Among the clergy present were: Rev. Father J. V. McCauley Ennismore; Rev. Father Galvin, Father P. J. McGuire; Father Corkery; Father Collins and Father J. J. O'Brien.

BOUFFANT.

The narrow silhouette is not holding undisputed sway. Many evening frocks show a bouffant skirt with the tightly fitted bodice. In Paris, the silhouette known as minaret, is proving popular.

STONEY LAKE AND DISTRICT

STONEY LAKE, Aug. 24. — As one looks back over the season of 1923, which of course is not by any means at an end, one can say it is the best season Stoney Lake has had. Pessimists each year declare the lakes are dead, and that there are not nearly as many people as formerly there, and other pathetic tales of ancient glory and present decay. These people must be blind and deaf as practically every cottage is open and very much in holiday attire and the resorts are all showing registrations quite up to the average and most of them ahead of other years. The steamers daily take passengers and freight up to the lake and each year brings an increasing number of motor cars. At Kawartha Park many of the cottagers have built garages for their cars and use them entirely for going back and forth to the lake from the city.

At other points one finds cars of all descriptions which have conveyed their quota to the lake. The bus service to McCracken's is the beginning of a new era when the C.P.R will be represented. Until this season the Grand Trunk, now the Canadian National, held a monopoly of the lake business, and the two great railways with their inevitable competition, will boon our lake region wonderfully. As one old timer said recently, "We enjoy it as it is, but it's worth greater development."

The Motor Boat.

The motor boat is to be seen in all its various styles, ranging from the noisy but serviceable outboard up to the really luxurious craft with its comfortable wicker chairs, and awning top and high powered motor. This year the plan for a gala week, formulated last year was brought into effect with great success and will no doubt be continued next season and probably enlarged considerably. All the various smaller communities enlarged their programmes of good times till there can be no doubt that it was the best season yet. A company of boosters will make next season even more successful. The Knocker element are not wanted in the game as they do not possess any love for the lake, otherwise they would join the optimists and help make a success of each season and do everything possible to prolong it.

Very Popular Resort.

Mr. Gordon K. Fraser, whose efforts regarding the Trent Valley Waterway's development, have been of great assistance in the advertising of Stoney Lake and increasing the population of the summer colony, suggests it also as a winter resort, as all winter sports could be enjoyed there to the utmost. Switzerland's fame as a winter resort is hardly exceeded by its popularity as a summer resort. Young people go to Switzerland for the "tuggering" (which is a similar sport to tobogganing and coasting,) skating, hockey, ski-ing, etc. Mr. and Mrs. Fraser have personally tested the charms of Stoney Lake as a winter playgrounds, and are both very enthusiastic. Snow shoeing would be wonderful and a moonlight snowshoe party at the lake would far exceed the same sort of party in or near town for charm and variety. It is to be hoped that this will be developed within a few seasons, as it should be both profitable and decidedly enjoyable. Mr. George Douglas of Young's Point, has often skated from South Beach to his island above Sandy Beach, a distance of between five and six miles, and his example has been followed by several other young men, who enjoy the winter pastime. Stoney Lake is a real summer and winter paradise.

Fires Subdued.

The fires which last week were a menace to miles of country, were subdued to a certain extent by the heavy rains of Tuesday, but there was not sufficient rainfall to extinguish them, and with the high winds and the dry weather of the latter part of the week the flames gained a new impetus and were in a fair way to become as bad as ever. A fire between Burleigh and Haultain, another up the Apsley road, and still another near the Blue Mountains, were very bad, and it is not improbable that a call for help will come to the people of Lakefield and Peterboro, as the settlers are nearly exhausted with the strain of fighting the bush fires for weeks.

A Gay Season

This has been the gayest and jolliest season on the lake, according to many of the old timers, who are very happy in in seeing the summer colony increase and best still keep the love for the simple pleasures which are really suited to the rocks and streams of this delightful lake country.

The vogue for swimming parties has grown rather than decreased this season and every day some one entertains in this popular way.

Among the musical set there have been musicals which have given a great deal of pleasure to lovers of music as the talent has been exceptionally fine.

Fishermen can always indulge in their favorite sport, but as the small boy remarked to the parson who remonstrated with his catching fish on Sunday, "Fishin' ain't catchin' ". So while he does not succeed in landing one, one can always try. Shore dinners continue to be popular and with good reason as any one who has tasted, bacon, eggs, and potatoes and best still a fresh caught bass, cooked out in the open and eaten with an appetite which needs no cultivation in the fresh air.

The evening "hop" continues to be popular, but most so to the very young as many of the older people weary of the everlasting "fox-trot" and long for the dear old days when the waltz and two-step ere the favorite numbers on the programme.

Owing to extreme drought the scrub oaks and sumachs present an appearance of late autumn, the leaves of the oaks are burned brown and the sumach leaves have practically disappeared. The wonderful wine and purple shades of these trees will be missed when the time comes for the trees to turn their summer green to the glowing tints of autumn. Flowers and vegetable gardens on the lake shores have been far behind other years owing to the very dry weather.

Personal Mention

A. R. Piper of Toronto, spent the week end with his family at "Kimo."

Miss Edna Stubbs of Peterboro, is the guestof Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Yelland at Hurricane Point.

N. F. Foote of Peterboro, is occupying his cottage near Hurricane Point.

Mrs. Wm. Yelland Sr., of Peterboro is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Yelland at Hurricane Point.

Burchard, Jamestown, N.Y.; Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Stoll, Miss Gladys Stoll, G. Burghart, L. S. Schmidt, of Cleveland Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Edwards, Toronto; Mrs. Furmaton, Toronto; W. Puffet, Norwood; T. Elliott, Peterboro; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Bean, Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. H. Bighouse, Miss May Bighouse, Mr. and Mrs. W. Scholl, Miss M. F. Henderson, of Cleveland Ohio; G. H. Babcock, J. Birch, K. Marshall, of Toronto.

A dance was held on Tuesday evening last in the dining room at "Viamede" and was a very great success, the attendance being very large. Roberts' orchestra furnished the music.

Rotary Camp.

The Rotary Club camp for boys on Clear Lake is now occupied by the boys of Holy Name Society, who are not behind the three previous camps in enjoyment. No one can possibly estimate the amount of genuine enjoyment and profit which the four camps of boys have had in the two years of the Rotary camp's existence. Baseball is played on a real diamond back of the huts and who can enjoy baseball like the small boy? The new buildings were painted by the boys about two weeks ago and it would be difficult to say whether the boys or the buildings had a coat of paint. A boy about town who appears to have a touch of emerald green about his face and arms is not ill but merely a boy who spent a full two weeks at Rotary and enjoyed it very much. It is God's work to give these town bred lads their chance to get to nature's heart and learn to love the wild things—flowers and little living creatures as God means the man should.

FRYING WATERY FOODS.

When frying fish balls, egg plant, or any watery article it is generally the case that after the second batch has been cooked the fat will be full of bubbles of steam and will no longer fry an article crisp and brown. To correct this the fat must be kept hot until the water has evaporated, then it will work as well as ever.

Launder dainty things twice as often, this way

It's not necessary to keep your prettiest things folded and laid away. Wear them—often. Launder them just as often as necessary. But do it this way:

Use Palmolive PRINCESS SOAP FLAKES—and see fragile crepes, silks, laces, come from laundering absolutely unharmed. Colors brightened and freshened, if anything.

The great foam of suds contains nothing to hurt the daintiest fabric, the most delicate coloring. It dissolves the dirt, however, most thoroughly—and washes it away.

These snowy, crinkly flakes contain nothing but pure soap. So they go farther, cleanse more efficiently. That makes it economical to use them in the washing machine, for all laundering, and for every general household purpose.

If only to try, get some today of your dealer. He has them—in handy one-pound packages, or in bags

It is stated that the price was 68 shillings, "approximately $15.44 per ton, including the freight charge, as compared with 69 shillings, which is said here to be the price of the United States anthracite on the spot.

PREMIER KING IS IN TORONTO TODAY

Tour Will Not Be Marked By Public Speeches — Will Visit His Riding.

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press.)— Premier King arrived in the city early this morning for a four days' sojourn among the people of North York, his constituency. His tour will not be devoted to public speeches, as Mr. King intends to devote the short time to visits to remote parts of the riding.

A garden party will be given by the village of Sutton in honor of the Premier on Saturday evening. He will spend Monday night at the country home of Sir William Mulock, near Newmarket, after visiting Mount Albert and Stouffville. On Tuesday he will be present in Newmarket in the afternoon for the laying of the corner stone of the new Public school, where he will assist Sir Wm. Mulock in conducting the ceremony. This will be the only occasion on which he will make a public speech. After the ceremony the Premier will take the train to Toronto, where he will attend the gathering of Ontario members of the House of Commons and the Senate, for the purpose of organization. Hon. T. A. Low, new minister of trade and commerce, is in charge of the plans, it is understood, and it is probable that one or two other members of the cabinet will be present. The meetings will be at the Ontario club and will be followed by a dinner in the evening, with the Prime Minister as the guest of honor. The Premier will return to Ottawa Tuesday evening in order to attend a cabinet meeting called for Wednesday.

SECRET OF HIS SUCCESS

One of the most noted, successful and richest men of the country in a recent article said, "Whatever I am and whatever success I have attained in this world I owe it all to my wife. From the day I first knew her she has been an inspiration and the greatest helpmate of my life." Health is the first essential of every women who wants to be a successful wife and to hold the love and admiration of her husband. If a woman finds her energies flagging and dark circles appearing under her eyes, she has backache, headaches, nervousness and "the blues." she hould take Lydia E. Pinkham' Vegetable Compound, the medicine which holds the record for helping 98 out of every 100 women who try it. There is nothing better.

Four English Teachers Have Arrived For West

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Four teachers from England arrived in Toronto yesterday, en route to Western cities, where they will gain a year's experience in Canadian schools under the League of Empire's plan for the exchange of teachers between the Dominion and the Old Country. They are the advance guard of a party of 25 teachers who landed at Quebec, and they have preceded their colleagues to Toronto because three of the four young women are bound for Western cities.

Worst in All Ontario, Declares T. Beeching

Hamilton Citizen States No One Could Have Suffered More From Stomach Trouble Than He Did—Thanks Tanlac for Full Restoration.

"I feel fit as a fiddle, fully twenty years younger and just like a two-year-old," declared Thomas Beeching, 156 Rebecca St., Hamilton, Ont., while discusing his experience with the Tanlac treatment.

"I don't believe anybody in the whole Province of Ontario had stomach trouble worse than I did. I suffered so I was sick all over and at times could hardly hold my head up. My appetite was all but gone, I often went all day without eating, and at times even the sight of food would nauseate me so I would have to leave the table. My nerves were all undone, and I was so restless nights I almost forgot what it was to get a good night's sleep. It was an effort for me to do any work, and nights when I got home I just could put one foot before the other.

"I heard so much praise of Tanlac I went up to the corner and bought a bottle. It was the luckiest day of my life, for I started to pick up as soon as I began using it. My appetite is so big now I eat like a hungry wolf and never suffer at all from indigestion. My nerves are back to normal and I sleep all night without waking up. Morning I feel plumb full of life and ready for work. In fact, Tanlac has made a new man of me, and that tells it better than anything else."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

RELIEF FROM SOME OF THE ILLS

WINNIPEG, Aug. 24.— (Canadian Press.)— Relief from some of the ills which Western Canada is suffering at the present time could be found by the curtailment of the long-term payment system, which has been the vogue for many years, declared Lieut.-Governor Sir Harry Cockshutt of Ontario, head of the Cockshutt Plow Company, of Brantford, Ont., in addressing the members of the Winnipeg wholesale implement association at luncheon here yesterday.

In introducing the Lieut.-Governor to the gathering, Charles H. Whitaker, manager of the Massey-Harris Company, advocated the policy of fifty per cent. cash on implements sold in Western Canada, the balance to be paid on one or two term notes. Sir Harry agreed with this suggestion and went still further, favoring the ultimate aim of putting the sale of all implements on a strictly cash basis.

Officials of other implement firms also went on record as approving cash as the basis of future transactions, and their sentiments were unanimously endorsed by all present.

BARNUM.

So-called "super movie films" are to be exhibited on Broadway at $2 a ticket. Anyone with his eyes open could see this coming, though the movie should be dirt-cheap entertainment because it has the advantage of quantity production.

However, movies at $2 admission fee will probably play to packed houses. We are extremists in everything. We buy because the price is too cheap or too high.

The Price of Coal.

"There is no reason in the world why coal should not sell in Campbellford for $14 a ton," said P. J. Kelly, dealer in fuel, to the Examiner last night. The present high price is due to the combine among the brokers, and I believe they are behind the present agitation for a strike in order to boost the price still higher. President Coolidge has the opportunity of his life to take over the coal mines and have them operated by the Government."

Farm Sold.

William Duncan's farm in Percy township, has been sold to Harold Bright, who will take possession the first of March. The farm consists of 150 acres, and the price paid was $8000. T. L. Diamond negotiated the sale. Mr. Duncan will move to his farm in Seymour township, now occupied by a tenant.

Meeting of Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion Com. Set Stage For Big Event.

MILLBROOK, August 24. — A meeting of the Old Boys' and Old Girls' Re-union Committee was held in the Council Chamber on Wednesday evening, the attendance being the largest for some weeks. The chairman, A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., occupied the chair, and the chairmen or other members of the various committees in connection with the event reported details of the work done The Oshawa Regimental Band is to be accommodated in the Oddfellows' Hall, cots upstairs in one of the large rooms, and meals in the dining hall, Mr. W. Porteous to be in charge of the latter.

In discussing the request of outsiders for permission to rent space for booths on the agricultural grounds, it was emphatically stated that the Re-union Executive has reserved all rights in that respect for the local Booth Committee. The matter of which G. W. Sayles is the chairman, and W. Coombe, C. Garside, P. I. Bentley, and E. Doxsee members, has this matter well under way, and as it is one important source of raising funds for the expenses of the Re-union, will be kept entirely under local auspices.

On the motion of J.A. Vance, seconded by G. W Sayles, Messrs. J. J. Clarke for the Anglican Church, J. H. Paul for the Presbyterian Church ,and P. Stinson for the Methodist Church, were appointed a committee to secure four ushers from each of their respective churches to act in that capacity at the Sunday mass meetings, and take up the offering.

The matter of having someone appointed to sell tickets at the gate, and also down town for the sports on Monday, was left with the Sports Committee, P. Stinson, chairman, Messrs. J. A. Vance and F. W. Burton were appointed to sell tickets at the dances on Saturday and Monday nights, the former at the Armouries and the latter at the Town Hall.

The dance in the Hall will be on Monday evening only, and in the Armouries on both evenings.

As the Oshawa Band is to arrive on Saturday at 3.30 p.m., it is hoped that a motor parade of the citizens, headed by the band, can be arranged for, to meet the 5 p.m. train, as a number of the returning Old Boys and Girls are expected to arrive at that hour. Everybody taking an active interest, and doing their utmost to boost the event, will ensure its success, and leave only pleasant memories afterward.

The Reception Committee is called to meet in the Council Chamber on Thursday evening to check over their list of places where accommodation may be had for those who have no relatives with whom to stay while here ,and arrange how many extra cots and meals should be provided for.

Attractive Feature.

One of the most attractive features of the Re-union will be the group photograph of the Old Boys and Old Girls which is to be taken in front of the Town Hall on Monday at 1.30 p.m. Arrangements have been completed with a Toronto firm to take the picture, using a "motion camera," which permits a large number to be taken at the one time; the pictures will be about three feet long when completed, and will make splendid souvenirs of the home-coming in 1923. It is hoped to have not only the Old Boys and Girls who are home for the Re-union in the photograph, but the older residents of the township and village as well.

So far it has not been possible to arrange for the proposed gathering of former pupils and their teachers at the school at 9 a.m. on Monday, as the workmen have not the older part completed, and the new wing has a great deal yet to be done before it will be ready for use.

Announcement will be made at the Sunday services whether this enjoyable feature of the Re-union can be carried out, and where the gathering will be held.

New and Interesting Facts from Science and Life

How the VIOLET RAY Is Used to BANISH ILLS of the TEETH

GERMS that swarm in the mouth by the millions and cause pyorrhea and other ills of the teeth are now to be banished by means of a lamp of simple construction which can focus violet rays to the merest speck of intense light and be used with telling effect against the invading bacteria, which die off under the treatment in little more than four minutes. The violet ray is said to be especially effective in treating pyorrhea, which is a most prevalent and destructive disease.

The device is known as the Pashler tungsten lamp. It tis the invention of F. Forbes, of West Kensington, London, England. Already it has been installed in the surgeries of a number of prominent English dentists, one of whom is Dr. R. Hodgson, a dental consultant at the Royal Waterloo Hospital.

"I cannot yet state that the lamp can cure pyorrhoea in all stages," says Dr. Hodgson, "but it is certainly the most effective deterrent I know. One patient, aged fifty, was suffering from pyorrhea, and I regarded him as a hopeless case. The patient was anxious to retain his teeth, so I decided to try the lamp.

"In two days he returned. The teeth were much firmer and the gums in an infinitely healthier condition. It has still to be shown whether the treatment can cure advanced pyorrhea, but I think there is no doubt that with accurate technique it can cure the earlier stages of pyorrhea."

The vital parts of the lamp are two short rods of tungsten metal, about the thickness of a lead pencil, and a quartz lens. Electric current is conveyed to the rods, and the violet rays are collected and concentrated. They are focused on the part to be treated until the sphere of light becomes a mere speck.

Germs that attack the teeth and gums are so stealthy in their action that they often have done great damage before their presence is made known by that common malady called "toothache." A favorite lodging place of bacteria is between two teeth, down out of sight below the grinding faces. They look fuzzy when seen through a microscope.

No pain is felt. The attackers are too stealthy for even the delicate nerves to feel. But six months later the hole is visibly larger. Fresh scavengers have come to feast upon the tooth and the particles of food that stick in the wedged-together place. After another six months millions of germs swarm in the cavity, which has now become a veritable excavation.

Then, all of a sudden, there comes an ache. The germs have broken through the dentine and into the soft tissue about the nerve. They are a long way from the latter yet, but it feels them. Air, heat, cold, food, touch, everything is now registered in the unprotected spot as pain.

Once a tooth nerve is really injured or exposed the pain from it is incessant and feels many times more powerful than you would expect from such a small thread of living tissue.

Each tooth consists of a crown( the portion of the tooth above the gum), a root or fang (the portion located in the jaw bone), an intermediate part called the neck, which is the narrow section covered by the gum.

A tooth is composed of phosphate and fluoride salts of calcium. The fluorspar or enamel on the outside is supposed by nature to be highly resistant to all forms of chemical action, and hence able to resist decay. This is not the case to-day as it was when man's evolution was lower than it is now. For the teeth have become wedged together as man's jaws have shrunk, that there are many contact points. It is at these contact points that germs obtain a foothold. It is for this reason, as dentists point out, that the teeth should be carefully brushed after each meal, and twice a year should be given a thorough inspection.

This enamel is the hardest substance in the human body. It varies in thickness, being thickest at the cutting surface, and diminishing as it approaches the root of the tooth. The enamel consists of 97 per cent of inorganic matter, the remainder being organic. In structure the enamel of the tooth is composed of hexagonal enamel prisms arranged perpendicularly to the surface of the dentine. Each enamel prism of fibre has a wavy tortuous course with its inner end fitted into a slight depression in the dentine. The prism maintains the same diameter throughout its length, much the same as the shaft of a hair, but is quite wavy. As a result, near the surface of the tooth, shorter additional prisms are found, which are called supplementary prisms. These prisms are seemingly held together by an inorganic transparent cement. If a tooth is sectioned, that is, cut into thin slices and examined under a microscope, some brown striations will be seen running parallel with the surface of the tooth. Their cause is still in doubt, but according to a writer in Science and Invention, it is believed that they represent the successive positions of the enamel cap. Other lines visible, if the tooth is examined by reflected light, are apparently due to the various directions taken by the different bundles of enamel, well marked near the surface of the dentine, and becoming fainter as one approaches the surface of the enamel.

The dentine forms the bulk of the tooth and gives it its shape. It represents ivory to a very great extent, and is yellowish white in color, quite a bit harder than bone. It is covered throughout either by ivory or cementum (the latter is the covering surrounding the dentine of the root or fang). Dentine contains about 72 per cent of inorganic matter. Looking upon this part of the tooth in greater detail, it is found that it contains dental sheaths, matrix and dental fibres. The dental sheaths, which extend in a curve or spiral course from the pulp cavity to the enamel above, or cementum below, diminish in diameter as they pass outward from the center. They are delicate tube-like masses, which are practically indestructible, existing long after the matrix has been destroyed. The spaces in these tubes are called dental canaliculi, likewise terminating at the enamel or cementum, by either joining with each other, ending bluntly, or opening into interglobular spaces.

The dental fibres are still in discussion. Some investigators claim that the fibres are processes of flat shaped cells, called odontoblasts, which are the cells from which dentine is originally derived. Others claim that they represent connective tissue, surrounding nerves.

The matrix, not so hard as the dental sheaths, surrounds them. It is not so abundant near the pulp cavity, where the sheaths are packed closely together, but further out, as the sheaths decrease in diameter, the matrix increases. Here irregular spaces may be found, which are the interglobular spaces alluded to heretofore.

There is a bonelike substance that covers the root of the teeth called cementum, containing 66 per cent inorganic matter and 34 per cent organic matter. It is thickest at the very end of the root, and becomes gradually thinner as it approaches the enamel.

The dental pulp occupies the pulp cavities chamber and root canals. It is rich in blood and nerve supply. There are different types of cells found in every tooth, the odontoblosts being only one of the varieties. The arteries and nerves enter the tooth through the root.

The peridental membrane serves a very important function in the tooth, or rather, immediately outside of it. It holds the tooth in place, rotates it, returning it to normal position if it has been slightly displaced, and on one side forms the cementum and on the other the bone. This membrane covers the roots of the teeth and lines the sockets in the jaw. It is thickest at the root and gum and thinner in the middle.

Romances in Weaving of Rugs

THE Turks and Persians are the most celebrated rugmakers in the world, and many wonderful specimens also come from India. Formerly Persians and Turks were nomads, and they first used the rugs they made to hang over the openings of their tents.

In parts of Turkey and Persia rugmaking is still carried on in a very primitive way with a loom made by driving two poles into the ground parallel to each other, the distance between the two determining the width of the rug. Each family has its own design, and the weaving is done by many hands.

Oriental makers use a knife, a pair of scissors and a comb-like instrument to batten down the pile. "Tying" is done with the same primitive cleverness of native fingers at present as it was in olden days with the village women sitting astride looms stretched between pegs in the ground.

The most famous rug in the world, which a writer in Pearson's Weekly estimates is worth about $250,000, is in the South Kensington Museum in London. It is known as the Arbadil rug, as it was made in a little town of that name. This wonderful carpet measures thirty-four feet by seventeen feet, and contains 30,000,000 knots. It took sixteen years to make.

This rug was ordered in memory of a Shah of Persia who died in 1524, and was presented to the mosque most closely associated with his ancestors. The making of it took the full time of the most famous rugmaker of the age for sixteen years, and even then he had apprentices to help him with the simpler parts.

Is is signed, "The work of the slave of the threshold, Mahqud of Kashan."

The making of rugs as an industry grew apace in the East owing to the glut of cheap labor natural in a country where it is customary for each son to bring his wife to reside in the house of his father.

The duty of the mother-in-law is to keep the many daughters employed. Hence, rugmaking! Women, and even little children of five and six, weave at the primitive looms, which are merely a couple of posts driven into the ground with a crosspiece to which the warp threads are fastened. Each tribe or family makes its rugs to a distinctive design, which is as much theirs as is the tartan of the Scotsman.

A Senna rug may have from 400 to 600 knots to the square inch; a Turkish as few as 30. As an Eastern weaver makes three knots a minute, a rug measuring eight inches by five inches, with 400 knots to the square inch, would be the result of four years of work!

When a girl begins to approach marriageable age she is allowed to make a rug unaided, and the money for which it is sold is set aside for her dowry.

The dyeing of the wools and hair used in the rugs is treated as a fine art, and the head dyer is considered one of the most important people in the tribe.

Sometimes work is arranged on a communistic principle, and villages agree to specialize in some particular color. One boils onion skins and produces all the yellow wool required; another treats green walnut skins, and a third worm-red bugs.

A rich deep red is rarely used for commercial rugs, however, since many hours' boiling is necessary before a good tint can be secured, and in a country where fuel has to be bought by the pound this is a serious consideration.

After the dyer, in importance comes the tribal clipper, who cuts the pile of the rugs. In factories that is done by a machine on the principle of the lawn mower.

In certain parts of India, notably Gwalior, carpets famous for their beauty are the result of prison labor.

Long-term men are invariably sent to the looms. Between each two of these sits a pattern maker, who chants the colors and number of knots to be made. Some of the designs are so intricate that a gang of six men will barely complete two inches in a working day.

In rugs made with the Turkish knot the yarn is tied in such a way that the two ends which make the pile of the rug alternate, necessitating a long pile in order that they may overlap and cover the warp threads.

In Persian rugs the knot is tied so that between every strand of the warp a strand of yarn obtrudes.

The Phenomenon of Nature's ICE HOUSE in the SKY

THAT nature has a real ice house in the sky is witnessed by the striking phenomenon of a sudden bombardment of the earth in the midst of a summer storm by bullets of ice in the form of hail. These pellets are sometimes as small as bird-shot, but occasionally as big as hen's eggs or apples, and there are even tales of sky-born lumps of ice weighing many pounds. Because of the destructiveness to growing crops, and even to livestock and fruit trees, scientists have devoted much study to hailstones, their nature, their origin, and possible means of prevention. Quite recently, however, a brand-new theory has been evolved in Germany connecting the phenomenon with cosmic conditions. This startling proposition, which has been elaborated in a work called "Hail from the Cosmos," by Professor Halbfass, of Jena, is also explained by Professor Hanna Fisher in "Reclams Universum."

"The science of meteorology to-day," says this authority, "explains hail as a phenomenon having its origin in the higher, colder strata of the air, and assumes that the larger lumps consist of smaller particles frozen into a single mass. . . .

"We must go far back—some ten billion years—in order to gain a definite viewpoint of the matter. It was in the constellation of the Dove, far, far outside the Milky Way as visible to-day, that our sun and planets were formed through a tremendous explosion of a mother-star. Through causes which we cannot go into here, a double ring was formed about this new world-island; a wreath of still luminous stars moving remotely among the fixed stars (the outer Milky Way). These are visible only with the telescope, together with a spiral cloud much nearer to the sun composed of pieces of ice as big as wagons, houses or mountains, and consisting of separate pieces or else of several pieces frozen together, and forming altogether that wonderful, softly luminous streak of light which stretches across the sky on clear nights, and which we know as the Milky Way, and one of whose constituents, oxygen, came from the mother-star.

"This inner Milky Way consists of ice. From the front side of this, the side turned toward the Lyre, pieces of ice of the different sizes come into the sphere of attraction of the sun, and are likewise captured at almost definitely determinable times by all the other planets as well as the earth. When such an ice meteor nears our home star, it sweeps royally about the earth at cosmic speed until it strikes the condensed or hydrogen layer of the atmospheric envelope. But here the furious speed of this ghostly guest from remote cosmic space is suddenly checked, as if it were received upon a cushion. Violent friction phenomena occur and stratum after stratum of the block of ice is explosively torn off and crumbled to bits. At the same time the outer surface of the whole is considerably enlarged. The aforesaid 'cushion' increases in breadth, and at the same time a wave of air, an impulsive storm wind, such as accompanies nearly all hail storms, rushes forth.

"Lower and lower sinks the ice meteor, which has, perhaps, by this time been reduced to the size of hazel nuts; at the same time it suffers a loss of rapidity, which, however, usually remains greater than that of ordinary terrestrial clouds. As a result of the friction which has taken place, even in the upper strata, tremendous electrical tensions have been formed which are discharged in the well-known manner.

"All these things explain why a hail storm usually lays waste only a narrow strip of land. This helps us to understand, likewise, the origin of those larger blocks of ice, which are sometimes hurled downward to the earth—ice blocks so cold even when splintered into fragments that on chancing to crash through the branches of a tree they become coated with a mantle of frozen leaves.

VOLCANOES Used as LIFE-SAVERS

THE recent eruption of Etna, Italy's "burning mountain," brings to mind the fact that the time may be not far distant when the largest and most active volcanoes, instead of being a dreaded menace to the safety of man, will contribute materially to his happiness and comfort.

In Italy and in some of the volcanic islands of the Pacific the steam power issuing from volcanoes has been harnessed for engineering purposes. The people of the Tuscan town of Lardello light their streets, heat their homes, and do their cooking by means of volcanic steam pressure, which generates enough heat to cook a joint in less than half an hour.

In another district in Italy volcanic energy is exploited for the purpose of making electricity, which is supplied to many towns, some of them more than fifty miles distant. The steam is carried through pipes to huge boilers, where its heat converts water into still more steam which drives the dynamos and provides central heating in many houses. Similar installations are being erected in other parts of Italy, and the future may see that country become a vast electric power station, supplying electricity to half of Europe.

The great spectacular volcano of Kilauea, in Hawaii, is to be made to justify its existence in the same way. The crater of Kilauea is a vast lake of molten lava, and this will be harnessed to supply the Hawaiian community with light, heat, and power.

Although volcanoes are often referred to as burning mountains, in reality they do not burn at all. Neither are they mountains in the true sense of th term. The scientific definition of a volcano is "an opening in the earth's crust, through which heated matter is thrown up from the earth's interior to the surface, where it usually forms a hill, more or less conical in shape, and generally with a hollow or crater at the top."

Where eruptions frequently occur, the heated materials forced upwards pile themselves to heights which cause them to be classed as mountains.

What looks like fire belching forth is merely the reflection of the molten lava on the clouds of steam which hang over the crater. The steam itself is often wrongly spoken of as smoke.

The cause of volcanic action is not known. The most popular theory is that it is brought about by water getting into the white furnace below the earth's crust. In support of this the fact is cited that nearly all the most active volcanoes are close to the sea.

STORMS That HELP Raise CROPS

ONE result of the furious storms that so frequently rage off sea coasts is to give coast farmers an extra supply of good fertilizer for their fields. Masses of seaweed are thrown up and the shore is the scene of lively activity.

But the thing has to be done quickly, since one tide might bring up quantities of weed and the next sweep the beach clear. Wise farmers collect as much weed as they can and pile it beyond the water line.

Seaweed, as a rule, makes an excellent fertilizer. Some farmers increase its natural qualities by adding ordinary fertilizer. Most, however, simply strew their land to a depth of from three to six inches and plow it into the earth. As the weed decays a strong odor of iodine and ammonia is given off.

The fields generally selected for seaweed fertilizing are those devoted to corn or grass. Some farmers say that grass grown where seaweed has been strewn mows better than ordinarily, and that their stock graze from it or feed on the hay with more zest.

Sometimes the weed is plowed to a depth of a foot or more in a field intended for kale. The result is that the plants are remarkable for their growth and flavor. The natural gases in the seaweed seem to have a peculiarly beneficial effect on this plant, which cannot be grown easily in some parts.

Nor is it only seaweed that is washed ashore after a storm. Very often good-sized fish are hurled on the beach. The offal from these is excellent for fields, and market gardeners use it for cultivating grapes and tomatoes.

WHY Your LUNGS Have to WORK Much HARDER in WINTER Than in SUMMER

YOUR lungs contain no fewer than six hundred millions of cells, and always retain a certain portion of air however deeply you may respire or expire. They work much harder in winter than they do in summer, for in cold weather you require more food, and so have to take in more oxygen in order to burn it up. That the lungs are one of the hardest working organs of the human body is shown by the accompanying drawing, indicating the combined bulk of all the lungs of the human race.

People who live in cold countries breathe more rapidly than residents of the tropics; so, as a rule, they have deeper chests.

When you go down the scale of evolution from the warm-blooded to the cold-blooded creatures, and thence to the insects, you find all sorts of odd arrangements for breathing. For instance, observe the frog, when young, it has gills, and, later in its life, lungs. But, like other soft-skinned reptiles, the frog breathes also through its skin. In hot weather, when the water of its native pond gets warm, the frog is forced to come to the surface, to get oxygen; but so long as the water is cold, it can remain below for very long periods.

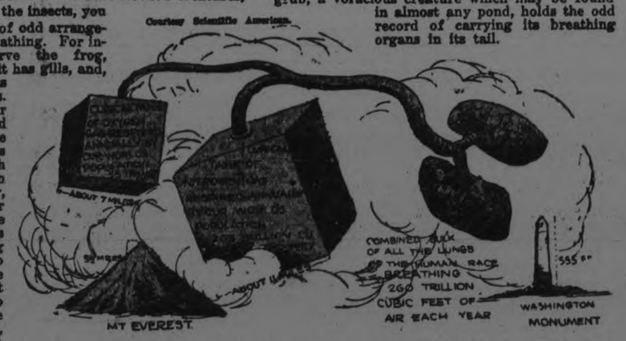
The so-called "hell-bender," a large American salamander, has, even more so than the frog, the power of breathing through its skin.

Jellyfish have only one organ, combining the functions of breathing, digestion and circulation. The leech and the common earthworm have no regular lungs, but imbibe air through a network of tiny blood vessels.

The little sandhopper, which you may see on sandy beaches, has bladders attached to its legs, through which it gets the necessary supply of oxygen from the air.

Clams and mussels possess gills made by foldings of the so-called "mantle." These rudimentary arrangements enable them to breathe. Land crabs have gills which more or less resemble lungs, and which are always moist.

But breathing apparatus may exist in or on almost any part of the body. The dragon fly grub, a voracious creature which may be found in almost any pond, holds the odd record of carrying its breathing organs in its tail.



Combined Bulk of All Lungs of the Human Race, Breathing 260 Trillion Cubic Feet of Air Each Year.

What Is the SPEED of a THOUGHT?

UNTIL recently it was generally considered that a thought occurred with the speed of lightning. But modern methods of measurement have shown that the speed of thought is not by any means exceptional.

The time taken for a nervous impulse to travel from the elbow to the brain and thence to the wrist proved that it did so at about 180 feet a second.

Similarly a frog thinks at the rate of about 90 feet a second, and it takes two seconds for a whale 150 feet long to realize that he has been harpooned in the tail and to lash out with it.

In some peculiar way, however, the speed of thought seems to depend upon the temperature of the body. If a man's body is warm he is able to think quicker than if he is cold; and if his nerves are frozen they will not conduct impulses.

A frog at seventeen degrees will think only half as quickly as another at thirty-five, while if the frog be warmed to the temperature of a man the animal will think equally as quickly.

A cold-blooded creature like the fresh-water mussel thinks only at about two and a half inches a second. One of the cuttlefishes thinks at the rate of three feet a second in Winter, and the octopus in Summer three to five times as quickly.

Many drugs, as well as cold, will decrease the speed of thought—chloroform obviously and ether and alcohol less obviously.

The ability to think quickly seems to vary, too, with temperament. A melancholic or lethargic man thinks more slowly than a choleric individual. In all cases, however, it is practically impossible to tire out the nerves.

Can Plants See?

BOTANISTS know that plants are sensitive to light and dark. Many of them move during the day in order to turn the faces of their flowers always to the sun. Others open only when the daylight is dying, and when the moths on whom they rely to carry their pollen are abroad.

Climbing plants, such as sweet peas, seem to fling their tendrils in an almost uncanny way in the direction of anything that will serve as a support.

A scientist engaged recently in taking photographs of leaves through the microscope was surprised to discover that some of them showed hundreds of little round patches, each of which reflected the image of some object, just as do the facets of the compound eye of an insect. Closer examination proved that each of these patches consisted of a cell whose rounded outer wall formed a lens. Each cell was a perfect eye.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

By Olive Roberts Barton

WHAT HAPPENED TO PAUL PRY

"I wanted to see how it worked," answered the Pee Wee boy faintly.

"Ding, dong, ding dong!" went the school bell in Pee Wee Land.

Nancy and Nick heard it the minute they turned the corner.

"Good lands! What's that for, do you s'pose?" cried Nancy. "There's no school now. This is vacation."

"Hurry up!" said Nick, starting to run. "Maybe there's a fire."

But there wasn't any more fire than there is in the refrigerator, my dears. However, there was quite as much excitement as if there had been forty fires.

King Snookums was rushing about, and every Pee Wee was rushing about and looking in all the houses and down all the holes and up all the bushes and weeds and everywhere.

The Twins knew the trouble at once. "Somebody's lost, I'll bet you anything," said Nancy.

And that's what it was. Little Paul Pry Pee Wee was gone.

"What's everybody making such a fuss about?" demanded Nick. "You don't ring bells when the other Pee Wees are lost."

"Oh, but that's different," declared Mrs. Pry, Paul's mother. "They're not my Paul. He's the most inquisitive boy in Pee Wee Land and I never get a minute's peace with him poking around. I'm sure he's down the well, or something. Oh, my poor Polly Pry Pee Wee."

"We'll help to hunt," said Nancy. "We have good luck finding things, so don't worry. We'll get him. Come on, Nick."

The Twins looked everywhere, and were just about to give up when they passed Farmer Brown's mouse trap near the oat-bin. Then they heard a faint voice calling.

"Goodness alive! There's somebody in the mouse trap," said Nancy. "Peep in, Nick, but be careful.

So Nick stuck in his head.

"Hello! Hello, Paul Pry Pee Wee," Nancy heard him say. "How did you get here?"

"I wanted to see how it worked," answered the Pee Wee boy faintly. "I hardly touched it at all when it snapped down on my foot. I can't move."

The Twins worked like tailors and by 'n' by Paul Pry was set free.

"Oh, thank you," he cried, limping off toward home. "I'll never monkey with anything again. I'm cured."

An Unwelcome Visitors.

"My goodness!" exclaimed Nancy, "where's everybody gone? There isn't a soul left in Pee Wee Land. I do believe."

And it certainly did look like it, for the little country under the burdocks where the Pee Wees lived was as bare as a skating pond.

The Twins peeped into the palace but King Snookums was nowhere to be seen. The Dumpies and the Tiny Mites and the Upsedaisies and the Grumpalongs were all as gone as the day before yesterday.

The butcher, the baker, and the candlestick maker had completely disappeared.

"What can be the matter?" wondered Nancy in a puzzled voice. "A few minutes ago everybody was here, and now nobody is here. We'll have to ask the bugs and grasshoppers and worms, Nickie. They may know something."

But lo and behold there wasn't a single bug to ask, or a grasshopper, or a worm or anything. You would have thought—well, goodness knows what you would have thought, any more than the Twins did, as they pattered here and there in their magic shoes like busy little fairies.

Pretty soon they heard a rumbling. It sounded like thunder. But it wasn't thunder, they knew, because the sky over the tops of the weeds and grass was as blue as China.

Suddenly something gave a great bounce and landed almost on top of them.

"Oh!" screamed Nancy. "What's that?"

"It's only me," answered a rumbling, good-natured voice. "I came to make a friendly call, but the minute I got there every Pee Wee jumped on a bug or grasshopper or butterfly and flew away. I guess they thought I was going to eat them."

Then the Twins saw who it was. Fat old Mister Toad in his white waiscoat.

"Oh, you'll have to go home at once," exclaimed Nick. "The Pee Wees won't come back home until you have gone."

"You don't say so!" grumbled Mister Toad. "Very well then, I'll go, but I don't call it being neighborly one bit."

And away he hopped.

A BOOK WITHOUT AN IDEA BUT IT'S NON-CONFORMIST

(By James W. Dean.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The reader who turns to Carl Van Vechten's book, "The Blind BowBoy," should be eternally grateful to the author for his painstaking care in setting forth the meaning of his work.

Having completed the book, Van Vechten went before a notary to take oath that his only purpose in writing the book was to amuse. He asseverates that no ideas are concealed beneath its surface.

It is well, too, that the jacket blurb proclaims that the book is neither romanttic, realistic, life or art.

It's this way—there isn't anything below the surface of the book and there isn't any meaning on the surface. Then, why is a book?

The author says he would like to have this book described as "a cartoon for a stain-glassed window." He would have his readers imagine the attitudes of his characters, now sketched rudely in black and white, as they will appear when clothed in their final brilliant and luminous colors.

To this reader, the book seemed full of color, of fleshly skyrockets and flamingo feather dusters, red balls of fire without definite outline. Consider the personae dramatis of the story and you may gather what I mean.

The central figure is a youth who has been reared by a maiden aunt. He meets his father for the first time when he is 21. The father turns him over to a tutor in wordliness, a man with no moral sense. The father purposes that the boy shall see life in full before he tries to shape his career.

The youth, Harold Prewitt, is installed in a Grammercy Park apartment with a well-supplied cellar and twin beds and a very discreet butler.

Harold's tutor introduces him to Campaspe Lorillard, a woman of 30, who is bored by her husband, who dearly loves her two sons whom she sees about twice a year, who addresses her mother as Fannie, who tantalizes men who hope, in vain, for her favor.

Harold and Campaspe and others of this wild-goose clique rescue a starving, snake-charmer at Coney Island. This girl, Zimbule O'Grady, is a perfect laboratory specimen of feminine physique, empty of mentality and full of passion. The latter circumstances makes her very attractive to almost everyone except Harold.

One night Harold returns to his apartment to trip over Zimbule's daintiest garments. He flees from the apartment, realizing that if Zimbule's garments were on the floor they were not on her.

It turns out that the girl Harold loves is Campaspe's sister and so Campaspe arranges the marriage. When the bride suggests that Harold go to work and quit sponging off his dad, who is in the cloak and suit business, Harold deserts her.

By this time Zimbule is a movie star and lives in a Riverside apartment. Her "angel" is Campaspe's husband.

Harold becomes Zimbule's leading man in the movies, not being qualified to do anything else, and also her leading man in private life.

The book propitiously comes to an end on a Christmas Day. Campaspe thinks she is going to Europe alone, but she finds Harold and a titled libertine have followed her. They are all going somewhere, but they don't know where. And this reader, for one, doesn't care where.

The story and its characters have been fairly well sketched in this brief outline, I believe. Some of the atmosphere is missing, since the homes into which this paper goes contain, for the most part, normal beings. And the book is largely an adventure in libidinosity.

A book should have the swiftness of melodrama, the lightness of farce to be a real contribution to thought. Plot is certainly unimportant in the novel; character drawing a silly device. Growth of character in a novel is nonsense. People never change.

The paragraph above does not represent this writer's opinion. The sentences are literal quotations from "The Blind Bow-Boy." In that passage you may glimpse Van Vechten's philosophical conveclutions. You may also be able to see through this reviewer's philosophy.

The truth of the matter is that I am still pretty thick with Ohio River water, despite the immense amount of the wine of life I have sipped in New York. As much as I would like to, and as much as I sometimes try, I can't shed the thin skin I wore 'way out there in the open places; I can't help but believe that the normal life is the full life.

And thus I eblieve Van Vechten and his non-conformist ideas dead wrong. Why, the man will not even clothe his printed conversation in quotation marks!

Bulgaria Adopts New Greeting For Athletes.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 24.—(Associated Press—"Be of good health" is the greeting adopted by the athletic organizations of Bulgaria. The idea is that with health and body comes health of mind, and that sane and normal state or coul which constitutes spiritual health. The public in general is adopting the greeting of the athletes.

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and C. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Teresa Desmond (Terry), exquisite and unbelievably innocent, has determined to leave her father. Terrence Desmond, the proprietor of a roadhouse, the Blue Moon. He is moody and selfish, bent on Terry's "bagging" a rich man. He introduces her to Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek, who falls in love with the girl, and on an auto ride makes unwelcome advances. She escapes from him and goes to Juliet Divine, the stage name of her beautiful half-sister, known as the Million Dollar Doll, whom she has not seen for years. 'Juliet's' career has been somewhat sketchy, but she has a genuine affection for Terry, whom she greatly resembles. Miles Sheridan, Terry's Dream Prince, furnished the money for Terry's education at a convent when she was a child, partly to atone for a past rudeness of his wife Betty Sheridan, who is now making him unhappy with her infidelity. Hartley Phillips, a member of the Four Hundred, calls on Julia to tell her that Sheridan, in order to facilitate his wife's obtaining a divorce, will pay the Million Dollar Doll twenty thousand dollars t take a yacht trip with him. Except for appearing with her in order to cause talk, he wants to have nothing to do with her. Terry confesses to Julia that Sheridan has always been her ideal.

Terry is made unhappy by the discovery that Jule is going to marry a South American, Manoel Fernandez, and go to live in Buenos Aires.

Julia tells Terry that it is in her power to help Sheridan.

To help her 'Prince' Terry agrees to take the yacht trip, passing herself off as Julia.

Desmond in an effort to locate Terry, calls Julia.

CHAPTER XXIII.

Sufficient For The Day

Desmond, calling from far off at the Blue Moon, answered: "When Nazlo ran back and said the girl had given him the slip, I couldn't think, any more than he could, what had become of her. But I remembered Nazlo mentioning you, the day he met Terry, and his letting it out to her that you were back in New York.

"I wasn't dead sure the kid had your address, but I didn't see how she could have missed getting hold of it, all these years you've lived at the Arldamont. So I put two and two together. I'd have called you up before, but Nazlo's only just gone."

"I hope you didn't say anything about me?" Julia snapped, while Terry listened in suspense, picking up threads of the conversation.

"What do you take me for?" came Desmond's scornful snort over the wire. "Of course, I wasn't such a damn fool. Will you bring Terry home tomorrow, or send her with that mulatto girl of yours? Or will I have to come for her?

"I won't trust her to travel alone. She might play me a trick, and beat it to the convent, or somewhere."

"I think I've got a good opening in New York for Terry," Julia answered, after a slight pause. "I believe it wouldn't be a bad plan to leave her in my care for a while. She doesn't like your pal, Nazlo. He seems to have scared her with his little ways."

"She's a donkey," growled Desmond. "The man's wild over her. Even now, if she plays her cards right, she can have him. I've told Nazlo she's sure gone to some school friend, and she'll turn up at home so meek butter won't melt in her mouth, tomorrow."

"He doesn't want to marry her," Julia warned.

"I bet he does" was flung back.

"I've never met him myself, but I've seen him often. They say he's got a wife in the South of France."

"Pooh I don't believe it."

"Well, he goes there very year, anyhow. And you can't bank on a man like Nazo. My plan's a dead cert if it comes off. There's a lot of money in it, to be scooped up inside of two or three months."

"Sounds fishy."

"It isn't."

"How would Terry come out at the end of the job?"

"The same as she is now."

"Well, I suppose I can trust you, Jule. But I've got to hear the whole story before I put on my stamp and seal."

"That's all right; keep your hair on, old man, and I'll run down in the auto for a spiel tomorrow afternoon. Now I'm going to ring off. I was asleep when you called me. I'm in bed."

"What?" incredulously. "You asleep in bed at twelve thirty? What dope are you giving me, Jule?"

"It isn't any dope. I'm a good little girl these times, and I go to bed with the birds. Ta, ta"

As she hung up the receiver, Julia threw a glance at the face on the pillow. "I thought you couldn't snooze through all that" she laughed. "I don't need to tell you anything, do I?"

"Father wants me back, and you're going to persuade him to let me stay in New York," Terry said. "But what did you mean about the money? I forgot to ask when you spoke about it before."

"Twenty thousand dollars is the bid I screwed out of Hartley Phillips," Julia boasted.

"I won't have it" Terry cried. "I'd rather die. Mr. Sheridan's done enough for me already."

"The money will be paid in instalments, I expect—one at the beginning of the trip and one at the end," Julia calmed her. "I'll get al the credit and the discredit; and the cash too if you turn it down."

"I do turn it down," the girl persisted.

"That's that then. Let's go to sleep and forget it" advised the other, with a yawn.

Off went the white light. The faces of the two girls, and the faces of the carved, laughing cupids seemed suddenly to be veiled in pink gauze.

Hartley Phillips arrived promptly at eleven o'clock, finding Miss Divine dressed to go out. She was lunching early with a friend away downtown, she announced, but there was time for a little chat.

On thinking his proposition over, she was inclined after all to accept, if she could "fix things to get away," provided conditions were right. When did Mr. Sheridan expect to start? How long did he expect his yachting trip to last? And where did he mean to go?

Phillips had an answer ready for each question. His friend couldn't leave in less than five or six weeks. He planned to start the first week in October, and to be gone about two months.

He intended cruising in the Mediterranean, and the principal stop would be at Monte Carlo. A good many people knew, and who knew his wife, would be there early in the season because they had taken villas. Monte was just the place to give him and his companion the notoriety he was out to get.

Julia listened quietly. The insulting supposition that she was past being hurt by notoriety left her cold, although she was sharp enough to detect it. What made her thoughtful was the delicate adjustment necessary to fit in Manoel Fernandez plans with those of Miles Sheridan.

She had paid too little attention to that point of view last night, in her eagerness to "settle" Terry for life with a good dot. It seemed to Julia that here was an almost miraculous chance for the girl.

Sheridan wouldn't thrust his company upon her, except in public. Julia imagined—from what she had heard of a Puritan streak in him—that he would stick faithfully to his bargain in that regard. Or, if worst came to worst through some sudden temptation, Sheridan was the type who would atone in the conventional way after the divorce. As Terry was in love with him already there wasn't much to fuss about, from any point of view.

Of course, marriage would mean Sheridan's finding out the truth about the girl in the end. But sufficient for the day was the evil thereof

HEARING DISCERNED

Radio Instrument Tells Range of Audibility

What is impossible for the human ear to perceive, or the eye to discern, radio will divulge.

This direct statement is made on the report by Western Electric scientists that they have perfected an instrument which measures a person's hearing to the slightest possible degree. And to this is added the further advancement in this science toward the discernment of sound waves unaware to man.

The audiometer is the instrument which has been set up to measure the audibility of a person. The sensitivity of a normal ear includes 300, 000 pure sounds of varying degree, the experimenters says. Having ascertained this number, the scientists can determine the degree of deafness of a person by the number of sounds within the normal range which he cannot hear. This they can do with the use of the audiometer.

How It Works.

This instrument consists of vacuum tubes, coils and adjustable resistances. By a proper arrangement of circuits the vacuum tube can generate an oscillating current of varying frequencies. This is transferred into sound vibrations by means of a telephone receiver and those vibrations that a persons says he can hear are noted, while the slighest step outside the subject's audibility is registered on the audiometer.

Thus, it is maintained, the audiometer will come into practical use in court cases, where a person's degree of deafness is in question. Laws involving human hearing also could be designed with greater accuracy, since physicians could specify exact degrees of hearing required in certain instances, through the use of the audiometer.

Sight, Too.

Similar to this instrument, it is expected, radio will be the key toward the invention and perfection of a slight registering apparatus. Thus the distance a person can see, and the accuracy of his eyes could be registered more precisely than does any instrument of today. Radio, with its detection of the finest wave lengths and frequencies, could easily be a means toward the accomplishment of such a feat.

It is not difficult to perceive of a radio instrument also which could detect the faintest sound and discern the slightest ray of light—both out of the range of human ear and eye. Out of this could come rescue apparatus for entombed miners, life-saving equipment and such serviceable means for saving lives quickly.

ODDITIES IN NEWS

H. C. L.

It looks as if the cost of living is going to begin dropping within the next six months. A very definite decline in wholesale prices has been taking place in the leading commodity markets. The down movement started in March. Since then, wholesale prices have dropped about a tenth, averaging them.

It's just a matter of months until consumers get the advantage of such wholesale price slumps. But consumers will be out of luck if wholesale prices suddenly recover—that is, rise to where they were in February, or higher. Many a retailer is losing sleep these nights.

CORSETS.

Women should wear corsets, urges Dr. John Oberwager, of the New York City Health Association. He claims corsets have "both a curative and preventive value in relation to women's health. Few women have adequat, support for the liver, which has one-thirteenth the weight of the entire body, and the stomach. I think the best support is the corset."

All of which is confusing to women, who were told—when the corset was in fashion—that it was extremely injurious to the health. The corset is an artificial, unnatural instrument of torture, and generations of wearing it have weakened the fair sex so that some sort of support may be necessary for most of them. Real danger is in extremes. The wasp waist, for instance.

JOY.

A Chicago man puts himself in voluntary bankruptcy. He owes his creditors more than four million dollars, and claims his entire personal wealth amounts to only $1.70.

Most of us will consider the Einstein theory a simple matter compared with the system by which any man can actually spend over four million dollars more than he actually has. In this particular case the man concerned got into the hole by signing other people's notes. Not a bad thing to remember indelibly when you are asked to "go good" for another party, a common way of getting stung.

MIRACULOUS.

Boy, page Diogenes. We've found the honest party he looked for with his lantern—and it's a woman, not a man.

She's Dr. Ehther Lovejoy, relief worker, who sails to Europe—in the steerage, to save funds. Dr. Lovejoy will have charge of 21 relief hospitals in Greece, caring for refugees from Asia Minor.

She says: "Relief work should get 100 cents out of the dollar. The American people are most generous about relieving human suffering all over the world and I refuse to stand by and let this money be used for joy-riding."

PRISON.

A Chicago woman, released from the Bridewell, where she had served 30 days for shop-lifting, is arrested four hours later on the same old charge.

Prison didn't cure her. What most of these cases need is a keeper in a white jacket.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

(Your Feet)

A pair of tired feet is most discouraging. But with a little effort you can reduce this inconvenience to a minimum.

A daily foot bath is of great help. Use lukewarm water and soap. A gentle massage is beneficial. After bathing use cold water.

Change hosiery daily. Tight supporters impede circulation and should be avoided. Wear shoes that are large enough to be comfortable.

If you will give the feet a little exercise (your feet work hard all day long) you will notice a great improvement. While spraying them with cold water, move them up and down and sideways. Wiggle your toes.

If your feet want to perspire—let them. Use a boric acid solution or any mild germicide for any foot odor. The odor is caused by the development of bacteria, which easily succumb to a germicidal lotion.

People who are flat-footed and those who have bunions require the special services of a competent orthopedist. Bunions are caused mainly by tight shoes. Flat feet are a sort of a natural tendency in some individuals, but there are other causes.

You will notice there has been on mention of corns. There's a reason. Take care of your feet and you will have no corns.

The Underworld Of America

Crime costs the American people more than three billion dollars a year—or roughly $30 for every man, woman and child.

This is the estimate by the National Surety Company, which bonds employes who handle money—cashiers, treasurers, etc.

It's only part of the real bill, of course, for it covers only the visible or reported crimes. Petty thefts, which never get publicity, never are called to the attention of public officials, must mount up to a staggering sum each year.

What do you think is the most costly form of crime? Stock frauds, answers Cromwell, president of New York Stock Exchange. He figures that swindling by the sale of securities costs the American people a billion dollars a year, or a third of the total cost of crime.

Fraudulent bankrupticies get away with 400 million dollars a year.

Based on police esti mates, the national loss from burglary, larceny and general petty thefts is only 250 million dollars a year.

That is amazing—burglars and other thieves getting away with only a fourth as much as the stock swindlers.

Embezzlers make off with 100 million dollars a year. Forgers get about the same. A fourth of this amount covers railroad freight thefts.

Bonding companies' books show that between 1910 and 1922 the losses from burglaries increased 1200 per cent, while embeslements jumped 500 per cent. These figures are based on money losses. The average criminal "job," of course, involves more money than it used to. Putting it on a straight dollars-and-cents basis, and eliminating moral considerations, the theft of $200 today is equivalent to the theft of $100 gefore the war.

Even thieves have to figure on the increased cost of living.

A prominent expert attributes the increase in financial crimes to discontent, envy, unemployment, desire for luxury beyond earning capacity, carelessness of people whose funds are stolen, unfairly low pay, and "widespread disrespect for property rights and law, caused partly by the World War."

That last reason may be the most important one.

Comparing the national crime bill with the total income of the American people, about $1 in each $15 or $20 that is produced by honest effort is stolen by the parasites.

They had their liquor problem, too back in the "good old days," also the gent who lies awake nights worrying about other people's troubles.

The Boston Gazette in 1765 printed this letter from a reader:

"To me it seems high time for us to abate in our extravagances, for at present our folly has scarce any bounds as to eating and drinking. In a few years we shall all become turtle eaters, and a number of vessels may be employed in that branch of fishery. As to drinking, it must be punch or wine; malt liquor the doctors don't think wholesome, and cider is almost prohibited.

"French brandy is encouraged to be smuggled in, and it's the town taste as well as the country's. If the French have no hand in making our laws they have great benefit by some of them.

"We run into the same extreme in dress, so that there is scarce any distinction between persons of great fortune and people of ordinary rank."

This old-time stuff seems quaint and laughable to us of 1923. But don't laugh too confidently. For future generations will dig into our newspapers and laugh at many of the best of our modern devices and institutions.

The airplane, for instance, is just as crude now compared with what it will be in the future, as the cordwood-burning locomotive—hauling passenger cars that looked like stage-coaches, even to the detail of side brakes—seems when we compare it with the snorting steel monster that rushes our fat trains through the night.

Everything becomes antiquated and ridiculous—it's just a matter of time.

Theatricals Of Year, 1734

We always suspected it when we saw amateur theatricals at the high school—those old-time Colonial gents in lace cuffs and knee pants found it difficult to wear a sword comfortably. A copy of Bradford's New York Gazette, dated 1734, carried this ad:

"Lately imported, a choice parcel of swords. The blades are old, but the handles are made after the newest fashion. They may be worn indifferently by men, women and children without hurting themselves or any other persons."

A sword must have kept getting in the way when sitting down, not to mention tripping up strangers in a crowd.

By the way, do you realize that it's only a matter of less than a couple of centuries since men had to carry swords or cudgels to protect their lives? Policeman does it for us now.

BOILING CEREALS.

All cereals should be stirred into boiling water and they should boil. Salt should not be added at first.

FOUR HORSE POWER PHOTOGRAPHS

Electricity is now used extensively in the direct or indirect relief of human suffering and, in experienced hands, there seems no limit to its utility. Amongst its many medical applications, those of X-rays have probably taken firmest hold of popular imagination, both as regards their curative properties when skilfully applied, and their remarkable power of penetrating bodies which are opaque to light. In a typical British equipment for general medical use, more than 4 horsepower of electrical energy passes through the vacuum of the X-ray tube when a pressure of 100,000 volts is employed—the latter being 1000 times the pressure used in many house-lighting circuits. By the aid of this apparatus an X-ray photograph of a man's chest can be taken, developed, and studied, all within the space of a few minutes from start to finish. Many factors influence the duration of the exposure required to obtain a good photograph, and it often happens that a practitioner with years of experience obtains disappointing results owing to a variation in the degree of vacuum within the tube or a change in some other condition of operation. In order to overcome these difficulties and enable even a novice to obtain perfect radiograms of any part of the body, the British equipment previously mentioned has an ingenious "technique director." This device, when turned to indicate the part of the body which is to be radiographed, shows the correct voltage, current, distance, and exposure to be employed. The necessary adjustments occupy only a few seconds, and the operator then presses a foot-switch which causes the photograph to be taken automatically. The element of uncertainty is eliminated and the best possible result—on which so much may depend—is obtained with mechanical ease and precision.

A NEW TYPE OF ELECTRIC FURNACE

Recent advances in the metallurgy and heat treatment of steel have made it more than ever important to employ a clean source of heat, free from fumes and ash and under very accurate control. These requirements are fulfilled completely by the electrically heated muffle furnace. Heat is generated by the resistance offered to the flow of electric current through wires or rods of special composition and, as there is no combustion, there is no waste of heat or material and no possibility of contamination. Also, the degree of heating can be regulated instantly by varying the strength of the current. Generally, the heating wires or rods are placed outside the refractory tube or chamber which forms the furnace, but a British firm of engineers, who have specialized in furnace construction for many years, have perfected a method of heating the furnace internally. The furnace chamber is built to any desired shape and size by the use of a new type of refractory brick. Grooves in the bricks form continuous channels for the reception of the heating wires or rods. The latter are quite free to expand but they cannot fall out of the channels and, although the channels are open on the inner side of the furnace, the heating elements cannot come into contact with the work in the furnace. This construction amounts to making the inner surface of the furnace the source of heat and it is, of course, uniformly hot all over. Apart from the advantages in point of thermal efficiency, there are mechanical features which make the new furnace exceptionally durable. By building the heating chamber from standardised components it can be made of any size from 2 cu. ft. (0.05 cu. metre) up to 3000 cu. ft. (85 cu. metres) or even larger. The applications of these furnaces cover an equally wide range; for example, the baking of pottery, the annealing of sheet metal and wire, and the heat treatment of locomotive cranks, coupling rods and billets.

TRADED BABY FOR A HORSE

The Mother of Fourteen Children Adopted Child in Return For Horse and Buggy.

SHREVEPORT, La., Aug. 25.—A trade's a trade—even if it's a 14-months-old infant swapped for an old horse and a dilapidated buggy.

That's how half of Shreveport looks at the recent decision of Judge Bell here, when he awarded to a foster mother the child she secured by trading—one of the most amazing cases in the history of the south. And this half is raising a fund to help the real mother in her fight for the child her husband disposed of.

"I thought he was fooling when he offered to trade the baby for the old horse and buggy," says Mrs. Edward Jole, the mother of 14 children, as she recounted offers made her by Arthur Mausay, father of the infant she admired.

"Finally, we thought we could give the child a good home, and took it—but first we secured adoption papers, signed by both parents."

Mausay sold the horse and buggy for $20, it is alleged. Then, his wife charges, he deserted her.

Seeks Child Again

Crying aloud that her maternal instincts had been outraged and that only through fear of her husband had she consented to the adoption transaction, Mrs. Mausay went to the Jole home with deputy sheriffs armed with a habeas corpus writ and had Arthur brought to court.

"I've borne seven children," the mother sobbed. Two are in juvenile homes in Arkansas. One is with a family in Texas. Another is in a juvenile home here. And I lost my last one. I gave up the others, judge, when my husband insisted. I was afraid to refuse him. Now all my mother love—everything that is capable of good in me is wrapped up in little Arthur here. And I need him, judge. My heart aches to hold him. He stands for all that I have lost. Please give him back to me or I shall surely die." A muffled scream shut off her entreaty and with that she fainted Plainly, Judge Bell was disturbed. With minute care he carefully weighed the evidence. The simply worded adoption papers were brought to him and a further report by welfare workers who had investigated conditions in the Mausay home.

Judge Disturbed

It was with measured voice, not without kindliness that Judge Bell announced his decision.

The adoption was legal, he declared. Arthur should stay with Mrs. Jole. Altogether it was for the best—for Arthur's good as well as for the community.

As though she had heard her doom, Mrs. Mauzay leaped terrified to her feet. The primitive in her was roused to fury. Like a jungle beast guarding its young she hurtled across the floor.

"You have murdered me! You have murdered me!" she screamed. "Oh, God, is there no justice! Must I pay for the brutality of my husband! Give me my boy! The law did not suffer to bring him into the world. Motherhood is greater than the law."

Refuses Return

At these anguished supplications, Mrs. Jole offered to restore Arthur to her, but the court said no.

Now, in Shreveport, which has been divided by dissenting opinions over the tragedy, certain factions have raised a subscription to enable the mother to carry her fight to the highest courts.

All of which means nothing to little Arthur, who all day romps in the Jole home with the other Jole children, happy with his new playthings and utterly unmindful of the tragedy which centers about him—unmindful even that he has been "bought and paid for."

EFFECTS OF THE MIGRATORY BIRDS TREATY ACT

When the white man first came to the North American continent, one of the attractions, not least among the many which appealed to those early settlers, was the great abundance of bird life, which not only afforded pleasure to both eye and ear, but was also a definite and unfailing source of food. Since then, the hunting and killing of game birds has been continued by succeeding generations, though the meat now obtained is no longer one of the principal means of subsistence. Men of today hunt more particularly for the sport of hunting and for the sake of the recreation afforded by an outing in the unspoiled outdoors. Many a tired business and professional man looks eagerly forward each year to his annual excursion to the woods, where with his gun he may spend a week or two of pure joy, away from all the cares and worries of his daily life back in civilization, returning, after his brief sojourn in the wilds, rested and strengthened, with renewed ambition to perform his share in the big world's work.

The early hunters brought back with them large bags of game. Then the bags grew smaller, and gradually it became evident to thinking men that our game birds were in danger of extermination if the decrease in their numbers was to continue. In fact, a number of species, once plentiful, have actually become extinct. These include the Exkimo Curlew, the Labrador Duck, the Passenger Pigeon, and the Breat Auk. Others, such as the Whooping Crane and the Trumpeter Swan are in exceeding ly grave danger of extinction at an early date.

Great need for preserving our game birds as a natural asset, not everyone, perhaps, is fully aware of the value to the farmer and indirectly to all humanity, of the insect-eating birds, because of the immense quantity of injurious insects devoured each year by these birds. Should their numbers become reduced, a marked increase might be observed in the damage to field crops, orchards and forests, caused by insect pests—damage which is estimated to mount to millions of dollars annually in Canada alone.

Many of our Canadian birds, both of the game and the insect-eating varieties, spend the winter months in the Southern United States, or pass through the United States in the course of their migration, and come back again in the Spring to propagate. It therefore became evident some years ago that any measure, taken with a view to the protection of our migratory birds, must be carried out in cooperation with the United States, if it were to be effected. The futility of protecting birds in one part of the country, only to have them killed in another section, was also recognized by the United States authorities, who, in 1913, enacted their Federal Migratory Bird Law, which gave uniform protection to migratory birds throughout the various States of the Union, with equable open seasons fixed in accordance with local conditions.

There was now uniform protection throughout the United States, and conservationists both of that country and of Canada immediately took steps urging the necessity for an international treaty for the protection of migratory birds. Their efforts were finally crowned with success when, in August, 1916, the "Migratory Birds Convention" was signed by the representatives of Great Britain and the United States. This treaty provides for the absolute protection in both Canada and the United States of game birds during the Spring months and of insectivorous birds throughout the year. It also provides for an open season of three and a half months, during which the sportsman, wherever he may live, is free to hunt game birds, fully aware of the fact that he is not being discriminated against, but has an equal chance at the birds with all other sportsmen in either country. Regulations setting forth the dates for the open seasons for each part of Canada, may be obtained from Mr. J. B. Harkin, Commissioner, Canadian National Parks, Department of the Interior, Ottawa, by whom the Dominion Act based upon the Treaty is administered.

As most of the provinces have amended their game laws to conform with the Migratory Birds Convention Act, thus making it possible for them to enforce the terms of the Treaty within their respective territories, the principal work of the Federal Department, in this connection, is the education of the people to a knowledge of the law and its benefits and the encouragement of a sympathetic attitude towards bird protection. At the same time it has enforced the law in remote sections and in some provinces.

A very important means by which the Act is enforced is through the medium of a large force of Honorary Game Officers—men and women who voluntarily give their services, each in his own locality, for the furtherance of bird protection work, with no thought of financial remuneration, but simply because they are in sympathy with the cause of the birds. These include men from all walks in life, including business and professional men and farmers and fishermen, and the fact that their numbers are steadily increasing is most encouraging for the future welfare of Canada's bird life.

The prospect for the future is most promising in every way. Already a noticeable increase in game birds is apparent, and it seems practically certain that, due to the wise precautionary measure which has been taken in the passing of the MiMMMMMMMMM passing of the Migratory Birds Treaty, Canadians of the future will be able to enjoy the same delightful hunting expeditions as their forefathers and to experience the same thrills of conquest that have been the delight of every hunter from time immemorial, as well as having the health-giving opportunities afforded by such expeditions.

If a wise policy of protection for our migratory birds is continued, it is not improbable that new industries may develop. One possibility is the production of eiderdown, which is now obtainable only from the European markets. At present the numbers of eider in many parts of Canada have become sadly reduced, but due to the absolute protection afforded them under the Migratory Birds Treaty Act since the year 1918 and to the practical surety of their future protection as deemed necessary, there seems no reason why these valuable birds should not afford one of the coming industries for the coasts where they breed.

Cave Girl

EMMA ADAMS.

TOPEKA, Kas., Aug. 22.—Emma Adams, 15, was offered a far better home than she enjoyed, educational advantages and feminine finery—

But she tearfully begged to be allowed to go to a cave on a river island, to eke out an existence selling fish and cutting wood. Which proves, if anything that sentiment counts for as much as convenience in home making.

Estranged from his wife, Emma's father lost his position several years ago. He could not get new work. Finally, with Emma and her 17-year-old brother, he moved to an island in the Kansas River, 10 miles from here. They have made an uncertain living selling fish and cutting wood, while in Swiss Family Robinson style, they have lived in a cave.

The dome of Kansas' capitol was always in sight of the girl. Civilizing influences were almost at her elbow. But, clad in overalls and barefooted, she was reveling in her freedom when probation officers visited the island and brought her here for a hearing.

"Dresses feel queer," she told the judge. "I'm used to boys' clothes and going barefooted. I love my chickens and ducks. And I was able to help daddy, too, in keeping house. In town I'll be a laughing stock. Let me go back."

The girl wept. So did her shoeless and hatless father, who fears his daughter will be both unhappy and unhealthy in restricted new environments. So, too, did a number of spectators. But the law was adamant.

Meantime, investigation shows the girl had several years of school before she went on the island—so a debate is arising as to whether she should be forced to leave a healthy life she loves for the superficialities and confinements of what is called civilization.

SAFETY ON HILLS

The force of gravity will not be denied and, of vehicles ascending a hill, it may truly be said that those which do not go forwards, go backwards—unless an adequate holding force be provided. The ordinary brakes should be, and generally are, capable of holding the vehicle on the steepest hill, but the cautious driver of a heavy load usually seeks to relieve the brakes of some of their responsibility by placing a "scotch" block behind the wheels. This, when jambed between the wheel and road, acts as a wedge and affords valuable support to the vehicle, particularly at the moment when the brakes are eased preparatory to making a fresh start. Putting a loose scotch block in place is not a particularly easy operation, neither is it altogether safe, particularly if a stone from the wayside has to be used instead of a properly shaped block. Recognizing these practical points, a British engineer has devised a simple mechanism by means of which a steel scotch block, flat on the road surface and curved at the top to fit the tire, can be dropped into position from the driver's seat. The equipment, which is equally applicable to goods-carrying or passenger vehicles, whether horse-driven or power-driven, consists of a a arm carrying the scotch block and pivoted on a bracket attached to the rear axle. A short lever, attached to this arm, is connected by a steel cable to a lever near the driver. Normally the scotch is held clear of the ground but it can be lowered instantly and accurately into position by means of the control lever.

REVOLUTIONIZE THEORY OF AGE

Scientist Has New Idea of Rejuvenation of Human Body.

By CARL D. GROAT.

BERLIN, Aug. 23. — (United Press).—Professor Steinach, Vienna, discoverer of a fountain of youth, is now working on a startling improvement of this rejuvenation method.

It may, according to his colleague, Dr. Peter Schmidt, revolutionize the whole theory of youth and age. What the basic principle is, neither Steinach nor Schmidt will now reveal. But Schmidt, in an interview with the United Press, hinted that another quarter will see the birth of an idea, surpassing even Steinach's previous marvel-workings or the rare accomplishments of the noted Paris operator, Voronoff.

The new scheme, Schmidt hinted, may add even more years and more strength to human life than the present method—a method which, he says, has no harmful effects, but generally great benefits.

"Incidentally," he commented, "my experience and the experience of other Steinach operators has proven that, in the most instances, a man once operated on does not relapse to a condition worse than his initial state at the time of operation."

While the treatment is wonderful for humans, it also has a very practical application for animals. It can be used to fatten beef cattle before slaughter; or it can be made to improve furs and skins of animals.

"Sociologists come to me and are astounded at the results," Schmidt said. "They say governments ought to investigate and adopt the Steinach idea. They say it helps the human race to produce better and to think better. They do, however, urge that it be so, regulated that the aged will not be permitted to bring forth children.

"And, I must admit that I hear considerable from the clergy. They say this is an interference with the laws of nature and hence, sacrilegious. Our answer to that is, 'Yes, anything surgical or medical is, in a sense, an interference with certain things in nature; but it is for the betterment of mankind.'"

CORONER'S JURY EXCUSES OFFICER

Finds Constable Justified in Shot Which Killed Malinoff.

MONTREAL, Aug. 24—That Constable Adonias Breton, of the Notre Dame de Grace station, was excusable in fatally wounding John Malinoff, 21, while in the execution of his duty, was the verdict returned by a coroner's jury at the continuation of the inquest before Coroner McMahon.

Malinoff died early last Monday morning from a bullet fired by Constable Breton at the automobile driven by Malinoff at the corner of Marlowe Avenue and Sherbrooke Street, following an alleged attempt to steal a tire from the back of an automobile belonging to Michael Asch, of 118 Northcliffe Street. He was accompanied by Maxwell Silver, who at the first sitting of the inquest told of how he carried the body of his companion into Lafontaine Park after the constable's bullet had caused his companion's death.

The evidence went to show that Silver was in the act of removing a tire from Mr. Asch's automobile, while Malinoc remained at the wheel, when they were discovered. According to Silver's own evidence the policeman ordered them to stop after Malinoff had shouted to Silver to "jump in quick." The driver put on more gas and as the automobile turned the corner the policeman fired a shot.

Was No Doubt.

The coroner, in his charge to the jury, said that there was no doubt that an attempt had been made to remove the tire from the back of Asch's automobile. This was corroborated by various witnesses outside of Breton's evidence, which showed that the two young men had stopped their automobile at the back of Asch's car and Silver worked at the catches holding the tire.

Breton, in his evidence, declared that he ordered the chauffeur to stop, but instead the driver went ahead and the constable had to jump out of the way to escape being run down. He fired as the car was turning the corner in order to cause the chauffeur to stop He did not know at the time that he had hit the chauffeur.

Coroner McMahon pointed out to the jury that the question to be decided by them was: Had the policeman been imprudent in his act? He showed the jury that if a policeman tried to stop a runaway, whom he had reasons to believe to be a robber, his duty was to shoot in such a way as to stop him, but not kill him, but this applied to a person who was running and at whose legs it was possible to aim. In an automobile, however, which moves at a fast rate of speed and which is hard to overtake, and therefore in a position to allow robbers to escape the law, it is more difficult to find a spot to hit in order to stop the chauffeur from running away.

The jury was satisfied that Breton had acted in such a way as not to be blamed, and after a few minutes' deliberation, returned the verdict.

BERLIN POST OFFICE WITHOUT STAMPS

BERLIN, August 24. United Press—A stampless post office is the latest worry in moneyless, foodless, forsaken Berlin.

All the printers in Germany are so busy turning out paper marks that they have no time to print postage stamps. A stamp famine threatens.

The Government is raising postage rates 2000 per cent. to-day when a rate of 60,000 marks for foreign letters goes into effect.

Stamps are being rationed as a result of the shortage and only 1000 marks stamps are now available.

To-day's foreign letters are expected to look like twelve sheet bill boards.

FIFTY MEET DEATH.

MOSCOW, Aug. 24. — (Canadian Press).—More than fifty persons were killed and approximately 100 injured when a train proceeding from Vilna to Warsaw left the tracks near Lida and crashed into a dam early yesterday morning.

The impact burst the dam, the ensuing rush of waters helping to swell the casualty list.

BIRDSEYE VIEW OF ENTENTE RELATIONS

Most of World Longs For Normalcy But France Keeps Europe in Ferment.

By CHARLES P. STEWART

England has said to France, in substance:

"We think you have no right in the Ruhr.

"Your method of trying to collect from Germany, besides failing, is making it impossible for other claim ants like us to collect anything, either.

"Maybe we can't force you to quit the Ruhr, but there's one thing we can insist on. Since you don't care hat we think of your German policy, we want you to pay what you owe us right now."

Not Very Hopeful

Part of France's answer has been to grow severer still in the Ruhr.

As to her debts, she says she can't pay anything until she knows what she can get out of Germany, and she can't tell how much she must insist on having from Germany until she knows how much Americans expect the French to pay them.

France owes close to four billions to the United States, but not many Americans "expect" to get it, considering the attitude of the French towards their war obligations.

Sixes and Sevens

Anglo-French relations are such that the "entente" may fairly be considered ended.

This doesn't imply an immediate clash bupt it almost certainly does mean continued European unrest. It's upset the value of European moneys even worse than before, and it threatens to mark the beginning of a period of Anglo-French unfriendliness and rivalry, the logical tendency of which is toward another war.

Long for "Normalcy"

Italy sides more with England than with France.

So do most of the war-time neutrals, like Spain, Holland and the Scandinavian countries.

Belgium is so overshadowed by France, that she has to follow the latter's lead, but there are signs she doesn't like the Ruhr situation.

The United States having suggested an international board to decide how much Germany can pay—a plan which suits the British but not the French—England counts on American sympathy, too.

All this is natural. France is keeping Europe in a ferment. The rest of the world wants "normalcy."

Paying Nothing Now

In some respects, Dr. Stresemann, Germany's new chancellor, is more defiant of the French than his predecessor, Herr Cuno.

Cuno wasn't paying any cash to France on account of her reparation claims, but he was turning over considerable quantities of manufactured goods and raw materials. Stresemann has cut off even this tribute.

All that Germany's got, he says, she needs right at home.

Danger Both Ways

Stresemann is a little more the "people's" representative than Cuno was, but to a considerable extent he stands for German "big business," nevertheless.

He faces two dangers —on one side, an uprising of the royalists; on the other side, an uprising of the reds.

DIED AS RESULT OF CAR TURNING TURTLE

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press). — Theophilus Young, this city, received a badly fractured skull and died soon after, when the motor car which he was driving turned turtle on the Kennedy Road early this morning. His wife, Emma, two children, Archie, aged three, and George, aged eight, and a stepson, Whitefield Wiseman, all escaped with minor injuries.

The family were returning home after visiting friends near Stouffville, Ont., when the accident occurred.

ANOTHER FIRE VICTIM PASSED AWAY, ORILLIA

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Miss Elizabeth Carroll, one of the maids at the ill-fated Wawa Hotel, died at Orillia last night as the result of her injuries.

This makes a total of nine dead from the Sunday morning holocaust at the Lake of Bays.

Miss Carroll was a sister of Miss Annie Carroll, who was burned to death. Both were Toronto domestics. A third Carroll girl, Miss Kitty of New York, was severely injured in jumping from the tower rooms in which the girls slept. She is recovering at the Toronto General Hospital.

BELLEVILLE WILL GET ALBERTA COAL SUPPLY

BELLEVILLE, August 24. — Canadian Press. — Alberta coal will come into Belleville shortly and citizens will have an opportunity to burn two carloads of the four to six thousand tons which will be shipped into Ontario at a low freight rate for experimental purposes.

Manufacturers, merchants and citizens went on record as favoring the Ontario government making efforts to bring about a reduction of freight rates, so that Alberta coal may be brought in on a basis that will make competition with the United States Anthracite coal possible.

CIRCLE WORLD BY AIRPLANE SAY BRITISH

Government Official Says Only Safeguard in Home Defence Is Fleet of 500 Planes.

INDIA IN 72 HOURS.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—(Associated Press). — An Imperial air line stretching out to India and the Far East and eventually encircling the earth, is foreshadowed by the Duke of Sutherland, Under-Secretary for Air in the British Government. This airship scheme, upon which the Cabinet is expected to give a decision shortly, is a far-reaching one, says the Duke, and it may be possible soon to fly to India in 72 hours.

The new British Home Defence Air Force, the Under-Secretary said, would consist of not fewer than 500 airplanes. The purpose of this force would be to protect Britain against air attack by stronger air forces within striking distance of this country.

"This is the only way to ensure peace," said the Duke. "I don't wish anyone to think I am accusing any of our great and friendly neighbors of wishing us ill."

The Under-Secretary said great extensions and improvements were now being considered, especially in regard to the amalgamation of the various companies concerned in civil aviation and the employment of large sums of private capital, which he believed was the only way of attaining eventually commercial success without government assistance.

LOWER RATE ON COAL

and you get all the value there is in the coal. The more air you burn on the top of the coal the more value you get out of it."

Ontario spends $100,000,000 a year for American coal, the speaker said, in referring to the economic question involved. Not only this amount but the turnover must be considered. The normal turnover is four to seven times a year, but supposing the turnover to be three times, there is $300,000,000 a year, or the total national debt of Canada for ten years. In addition to this, retaining the money in the Dominion would give business to the plants which are now idle part or whole time, and would eliminate the labor unrest, which arises out of unemployment. The West would be able to pay its debts and buy goods from the East.

The Railroad Rate.

"There are three factors which make it appear reasonable that we should ask for a lower freight rate. First, was your difficulty in obtaining an adequate fuel supply. Second was the railroad situation. The sidings in the West are crowded from April 1st to September 1st with empty box cars. The movement of coal would not cost the railroads much expense, and would give employment to the men who are laid off when the rolling stock is idle. The third reason is the fact that the mines in Alberta are now working at only half their capacity, with resulting idleness among the workers and expense in maintenance to the owners. There is at least six months idle time during which the greater part of the work must be carried on in the mines without any coal production. This causes expensive coal. The miners in the West are the highest paid in the world.

Rate Negotiations.

Recounting the negotiations with Sir Henry Thornton, leading to the $7 per ton rate, the speaker said the Canadian National Railway agreed to move a limited tonage to Ontario at that rate. That the coal is moving now is evidenced by telegrams which he received a few minutes previously. Some of them were:

From Fort William, asking for a train load of Drumheller coal.

From Orillia, saying the first shipment had arrived, and a repeat order given.

From Windsor, asking for coal.

From St. Catharines, complaining that they could get no more coal under the $7 rate, their quota being used up, and asking for assistance in securing more.

"The railways will listen to you if they think you are anxious to secure our coal. If Ontario hollers loud enough and hard enough the low freight rate will be forthcoming," the speaker said.

Competition Expected.

"We know the kind of competition we may expect. When we come in with our coal, and the American operators take us seriously, they will slash prices, so you win heads or tails. In order that we may have a fighting chance we must have a low rate that will compete with anthracite coal. There is a 22,000,000 ton market in Eastern Canada, and the American anthracite operators will not lost it without a struggle."

Mr. Stutchbury told of a conference at which a representative of the American anthracite mines was present. This representative said, "We are not going to give up the Canadian market. If you gentleman cut your prices 50 cents, we will cut ours $1. We did not get into the war as quickly as you did ,but we are further developed now. If you want to fight we are going to give it to you."

In closing the visitor said the Alberta government is giving all the protection in its power to buyers of coal from that province, and he assured his hearers that the best quality of coal would be shipped to them.

Warns Coal Dealers.

Mr. McIntyre spoke at length on the cost of delivery, in connection with Alberta coal. Coal dealers everywhere are being warned, he said, that since the mine operators and the railways are handling the coal at cost, the dealers and the distributors must not charge exorbitant rates for delivery.

The chairman of the meeting was James Hamilton, Chairman of the Peterboro branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association. Several coal dealers attended, and the audience consisted of about thirty.

Peterboro's Allotment.

As an outcome of the meeting the Alberta Commissioner allotted three car loads of Alberta coal to Peterboro under the $7 per ton rate.

This will be handled by Ed. Cooney, who has been appointed distributing agent in the city. It is expected that the coal will range from $14 to $18 per ton delivered.

THIS IRISH LAD TRAPPED IN CAR

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press).—An extraordinary story of privation, hunger and thirst was told yesterday by John MacBrade, an Irish lad of seventeen years, who, while working at the coal mines at Calder, Alberta, was trapped in a box car and carried a prisoner for ten days across the country until released by workers on a Canadian National Railway siding in London.

According to MacBrade's story, he was at work at the mine when a shipment of coal was being loaded in a box car. He climbed in, and a moment later the car checker closed the door and sealed it. MacBrade hammered on the sides of the car with his fists, but in the din around the mine, was unable to make himself heard. He was famished and exhausted in repeated vain attempts to attract attention. When he heard teamsters near the car on the siding at Bathurst and Maitland Streets here, he shouted, and within a few minutes he was liberated. MacBrade stumbled to a barrel of oil coaled rain water and drank greedily. Later he was taken home by one of the teamsters, and for a time was unable to eat or drink the food given him.

DISPUTE AT CHEMONG REGARD TO LAKE FRONT

Man Who Raised Objections Makes His Position Clear.

With reference to an article that appeared in last evening's paper, reporting a dispute between Chemong Park residents regarding the use of the lake-front, the gentleman who did the objecting has made his position in the matter quite clear. He reports that he had no intention of disputing the right of any citizen to bathe at any time or anywhere in Chemong Lake, or use any portion of the lake front that he wished to use, as, in his opinion, the original thirty-foot Esplanade marked off for public use is still almost intact. His objection was to the indiscriminate use of his own private property in the shape of a boat-house wharf which belongs to him, and which the general public persists in regarding as having been placed in its present position for public use.

It appears that any resident of the Park has an equal right to erect a boat-house on the public property, but that only two or three have availed themselves of the opportunity. The particular boat-house in question, situated as it is at the foot of the narrow strip that gives access to the beach from the upper levels, is handy for intending bathers, who take advantage of it on every possible occasion, according to its owner.

On Sunday, a Park resident had left some of his outer clothing, along with that of his family, on the boat-house wharf, and the owner says that he was compelled to push it out of the way to avoid tipping a water-filled boat over it. Some of the clothing fell into the water, in the process, and aroused the ire of the intending bather.

CAMP FOR CHILDREN WILL CLOSE TO-MORROW

The summer camp for underprivileged children of the city, maintained by the Peterborough Health Association at Jackson Park, closes to-morrow. The weather of the past week has been rather trying for the children, and the committee in charge thinks it advisable to close the camp this week, instead of waiting until the beginning of September.

From June 26 until September 25 is almost three months that the city's children have been enabled to take advantage of the lovely Park and the comforts and conveniences of the Health Association's camp. In every case, the children have gained in weight and have given evidence of improved condition generally by their sojourn, and the committee in charge feels greatly encouraged by the season's work and is grateful also to all who have contributed in any way towards the success of the undertaking.

A total of 225 children, of varying ages, creeds and condition in life, have been sheltered, and fed, and amused at the camp, during the summer months.

Donations during the season have been acknowledged weekly. Gifts for this week include ice cream from G. A. Gillespie, of the Peterboro Creamery; chocolate bars from Mrs. H. Cameron, and candy and vegetables from Mrs. R. R. Hall, and ten pounds of cooked fish from G. James, proprietor of the Fish and Chip Restaurant on Charlotte Street. This is Mr. James' third contribution of delicious cooked fish to the camp.

Canadian Stock Exchange — And Mines | New York Stock Exchange — and Curb Prices

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

MARKET IGNORING COAL MEN

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Laidlaw and Co. says: The market resumed its upward course to-day in rather impressive fashion. Stocks were more active than they have been all week, and the market exhibited a tendency to broaden out.

Particularly good advances were recorded in Steel, Dupont, General Motors, American Can., and others in which speculative interest has been large.

The market apparently is paying little attention to the threat of a coal strike on September 1, and has given serious consideration to-day to the reports of increased buying in a number of industrial lines.

The fact that the market for finished cotton goods has shown considerable improvement in the last few days has been a factor of very large importance.

A STRONG MARKET.

NEW YORK, August 24 (United Press). — Indications pointing to an early resumption of the representatives' conference and extraordinary improvement in the position of the nation's banking system were reflected in a generally strong stock market in the early dealings in the stock exchange. Erie issues continued to lead the rails, First Preferred attaining a further new high for the year at 25. Steel Common jumped a half-point to 92 on the initial transaction, and fractional gains were scored by Baldwin, General Motors, American Can., and other leaders, continued strength among the industrial traders gave the general list a strong tone in the first hour.

General Motors made further upward progress on the expectations of an extra dividend Dupont forwarded this issue into new high ground on the movement.

The approach of the producers' and refiners' dividend meeting this afternoon found that stock nervous over the outlook. A new low for the year was set up at 24 3-8. This issue weakness unsettled the whole oil group. Kelly, Marland, Sinclair, and Cosden were subjected to special pressure, but the general market maintained its ground in the face of this irregularity, though the volume of dealings suffered contraction. One of the features of the current recovery of the industrials is the light transactions on which it is being accomplished. Studebaker, Baldwin, American Can., Dupont. Steel, and other speculative Bell-Wethers have rallied 5 to 9 points on transactions of around six hundred thousand shares daily.

Traders believe that before the upward movement subsides there will be numerous 1,000,000 share day.

Theer were no definite coal strike developments over night. The action of the stock market suggested Wall Street still believed there would be no strike. The coal strike would be a strike without public sympathy, and history shows that strikes of this kind are not lasting.

One morning paper suggests that there might be an oil strike in sympathy with the coal miners. This is a development that shareholders of oil companies would be welcome. It would take a long time to exhaust oil in storage, and labour unions would hesitate before attempting to stop production.

Edison is Indisposed But Not Seriously Ill; Goes for Hike With Ford in Michigan Woods

ISHPEMING Mich. Aug. 24. — Rumors concerning the health of Thomas A. Edison caused considerable commotion in the Michigan Upper Peninsula yesterday. Meanwhile the inventor, who with his wife, Henry Ford and Mrs. Ford, Harvey Firestone and Mrs. Firestone, has been camping near here for several days, was resting quietly in camp "a little indisposed but not ill," according to a Ford official. It was under stood Mr. Edison had suffered a slight injury to one finger.

Mr. Ford and Mr. Firestone were said to have gone for a hike through the woods this afternoon. The reports concerning Mr. Edison are believed to have grown out of news sent out last night that he was not feeling well and had been sticking close to the caravan during the Peninsula trip.

E. G. Kingsford manager of the Ford properties in upper Michigan, in an effort to quiet rumors which finally grew to the point of stating that Mr. Edison had died of apoplexy, issued a formal statement this afternoon that the inventor was not ill. Mr. Kingsford indicated that his chief's friend simply did not feel well and therefore had remained in camp.

LAST TRIBUTE TO SIR W. MEREDITH

Obsequies of Late Chief Justice of Ontario Marked by Simplicity.

TORONTO, August 24.—(Canadian Press)—Burial of Sir Wm. Meredith, late chief justice of Ontario, this afternoon was marked by almost severe simplicity. The Governor General, the Dominion Government, Provincial Government and many other prominent bodies were represented at the funeral.

The remains were interred in St. James cemetery with burial services of the Anglican church.

Writs issued on Ontario supreme court cases at any point in the province must now bear the name of Chief Justice Sir Wm. Mulock instead of Sir Wm. Meredith.

HOTELS BLAME OFFICIALS TOURISTS SHUN BERLIN

BERLIN, Aug. 24 (Associated Press) —Germany's soil seems relatively free of the tide of tourists reported to be surging over Europe, for June's 30 days brought only 1,475 more foreigners to Berlin than the 16,024 who made this a stopping-place during the 31 days of May. The firms interested in tourist traffic are furious at such a condition in the height of the travel season, and indignantly blame the government for its "scarecrow" taxes and other measures inimical to foreigners.

Some of the newspapers have been bitter of late in attacking the authorities for their lack of consideration in "killing Berlin as a joy magnet" for strangers. There is not only a 60 percent lodging tax for foreigners, but restaurants and public places of amusement are required to lock up at 12 o'clock every night and public dancing is permitted only four nights a week. Any guest found after midnight in a place which should close at that hour is liable to punishment the same as the proprietor.

The closing hour was advanced from 1 o'clock, and certain dance days were cut out as a "sign of mourning" at the time the Ruhr was occupied. The papers protest vigorously against a continuahce of the present conditions.

PEOPLE WARMLY GREET THE RUSSIAN REFUGEES

HARBIN, Manchuria, Aug. 21 (Associated Press).—Five sturdy Russian peasants, remnants of General Dieterich's last small band of "Whites" who stood out against the Bolsheviki at Vladivostok until the decisive battle that settled the fate of that town, drifted into Harbin one night recently, having run the gauntlet of Chinese bandits from Kirin, 300 miles away.

The experiences of these refugees were typical of those of thousands who were scattered broadcast when the anti-bolshevik campaign in Siberia finally failed.

When the Russian wanderers arrived the beach of the broad Sungari river where the Chinese Eastern railway crosses, connecting Moscow with the Pacific Ocean, was crowded with holiday makers from Harbin. Yachts and small boats dotted the stream, and Chinese junks moved slowly before the wind against the swift current. One craft approaching the shore attracted attention. It was long and narrow with high prow and stern, Russian fashion, and carried a single sail. Nosing its way to shore a rope was flung out, followed a moment later by a tall, sun-tanned Russian of the Siberian type. He made the rope fast to a post, then slowly removed a shabby head-piece bearing some resemblance to a fur cap and began crossing himself with the fervor of one who has reached haven after a perilous voyage.

The holiday crowd drew nearer and watched the five occupants of the boat as they unloaded their few belongings, meanwhile plying them with questions. It soon became known the strange travelers were from Kirin, and they were given a warm welcome.

For eighteen days they had drifted down the river from that place, through a bandit infested region, headed for Harbin, the only Russian city not under Bolshevik rule. They hope here to find some means of earning a living until better days, when they may return to their own country.

NO MORE CIRCUSES

(By GUS M. OEHM)

BERLIN (By mail to United Press) —Germany is about to see the end of the wandering circus.

Little Hans and Fritz, back in 1914, could take in any of 20 or 25 big circuses which wandered here and there under their big tops about Germany. To-day only five major circuses remain in Germany and these have dwindled so that they really amount to very little.

The Situation results, as almost every other new development, from the economic situation in Germany. The German public is just as interested in and just as anxious to go see a good major circus today as it was in 1914, but the high costs of feeding animals, employing world famous acrobats, clowns, etc., simply puts the price of tickets beyond the reach of even Germany's millionaires.

Circus entertainers are able to find employment in other countries, since theur type of work is international in its appeal.

MILD LOOKING

A mild-looking cat emerged from a George street store doorway last evening and trotted down the street. It was a small cat, young and rather scrawny, and plentifully marked with dark spots on a grey ground. It looked like a dark edition of the animal that watches in flabbergasted surprise on the Parker Dye Work' posters, as an enterprising gentleman "rubs out the spots."

A passing lady called ingratiatingly "pussy, pussy." Up went the grey tail, but the cat continued on its way, in a businesslike manner. It disappeared within a neighboring doorway.

Down the street came a tall man and a small boy with a lively-looking Boston bull pup. The dog spied the disappearing feline, and stepped into the doorway space with a conquering air.

Presently came sounds of conflict Shrill yelps of pain rose on the air. Pale with apprehension, the passing lady, evidently confronted with a mental spectacle of that quiet-looking mouser being torn to pieces, rushed back.

The grey cat emerged alone from the doorway fur bristling, but otherwise quiet all right. It continued on its way, in a businesslike manner.

AUTOMOBILE SMASH

A car driven by W. J. Irwin usurped the right-of-way of a street car on George Street this afternoon and was violently pushed aside.

The car was completely wrecked, and a lady passenger badly shaken.

The driver of the automobile said two wheels were caught in the track, and he was unable to turn out.

The World's Distress WHY?

---"millions now living will never die"

RAMSAY MacDONALD, MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT, says: "There is no settlement in Europe. There is no peace in Europe. Governments can do nothing. They are afraid to do anything, and they stand by and allow things to go from bad to worse. . . . 1923 is worse than 1914."
SENATOR BORAH: "War is imminent upon the continent of Europe."
SECRETARY OF WAR WEEKS, in The Nation's Business: "The United States is preparing for war that would tax us to the utmost in man-power resources."
BRIGADIER GENERAL GEORGE LASSITER: "The units now being definitely established will provide a force of about 3,000,000 men."
LLOYD-GEORGE: "A new chapter opens in the history of Europe and the world, with a climax of horror such as mankind has never yet witnessed."
FREDERIC J. LIBBY: "Airplanes, poison gas, and hatred mixed together are spelling the doom of civilization. America is preparing for war on a scale so colossal that it has no parallel in the history of the world. Our civilization will perish unless we strive for international peace." ..... .....
DR. BERNARD I. BELL: "Before the war people often supposed that ours was a Christian Culture. The war has revealed us to ourselves. Civilization is pagan."
H. G. WELLS: "We have come to the crossroads, and no one knows the way out."
DR. H .L. BRAILSFORD: "The future is very dark. We have reached the twilight of civilization."
SIR PHILIP GIBBS: "No man, unless he is drunk with optimism, can deny that the world is very sick, and it may be a sickness unto death."
VISCOUNT GREY: "I think it is certain that if there be another such war again, civilization will never recover from it."
JESUS foretold the gathering of all nations of the world to Armageddon, the great battle of the Lord God. (Rev. 16: 13 - 16.) He furthermore said: "Then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time; no, nor ever shall be; and except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved. But for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened." Millions of people will be brought through the trouble and live. WILL YOU BE ONE OF THEM.

CARBIS WILL TRY TO SET A RECORD

Man Who Swam Across Lake Erie Will Now Tackle English Channel.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 24.—Swimming the English Channel in 16 hours and 33 minutes—

Humph! What's that?

Enrique Tiarbbochi, from way down south in Argentina, did it just the other day.

So Carbis A. Walker sees absolutely no reason why he can't go Luis Angel Firpo's countryman one better.

Walker, you remember, recently swam Lake Erie. And he's the only white man who ever did it, in so far as the books reveal.

He made the 2 miles from Point Pelee Lighthouse on the Ontario shore to Lorain O., 35 miles northwest of here, in 20 hours and 15 minutes.

A couple of days later he was giving exhibitions in local amateur meets.

Carbis is on his way across the pond now. He expects to dive into the channel not later than the first week in September, while, as he puts it, the "water is still warm." And that's his idea of a vacation!

The trip is being financed by a group of Cleveland business men. Carbis wants to get back to his desk here around the middle of September. He's a civil engineer by profession.

Former Pupil Of "Duke."

But he's a regular duck. He's never satisfied unless he's trying to hang up some new aquatic record.

In his youth he spent considerable time in Honolulu. There he was an understudy of Duke Kahamonka.

One time, over in Hawaii, he proved to folks that an apt pupil could do some things better than his teacher. That was when he defeated Duke in a 25-mile marathon.

For several seasons, Walker has been wearing the colors of Central Y.M.C.A. here.

"I'm just doing this stunt for the fun of it," he commented before leaving for New York.

But he'll probably get as much glory as fun out of his exploit.

LAKEVIEWS APPRECIATE OSHAWA "Y" WELCOME

One of the pleasant experiences of the Lakeview baseball team in Oshawa on Wednesday was the hospitality they received at the Y.M.C.A. Garnet Galley, formerly of Peterboro, welcomed the team at the "Y" wheer he is in charge, turned the gymnasium over to them for dressing quarters and after the game gave them full use of the baths. He made the Peterboro boys feel at home, and since their return they have been telling their friends of the kindly reception that was extended to them for which they are deeply gratful to Mr. Galley.

Jack Johnson Will Also Try a Come-Back.

NEWARK, Aug. 24.— (Canadian Press.)-- Jack Johnson, former world's heavyweight champion, will meet Billy Miske at Dreamland Park here on Sept. 10 according to announcement yesterday by a local athletic club. The bout will be for 12 rounds, no decision.

This will be Johnson's first fight of any importance since he lost the title to Jess Willard.

KINGSTON TEAM HERE TOMORROW

Fast Junior O. B. A. A. Fixture Scheduled For Riverside Park.

Peterboro fans will have the opportunity tomorrow of seeing a most interesting tilt when the Circle Six team, Junior champions of Kingston will meet the Lakeviews at Riverside Park, in the first of a home and home series in the third round of the O.B.A.A. Junior race. The Lakeviews have just finished polishing off the Oshawa team in the second round and are in good shape for the hard battle they expect tomorrow. The Kingston Juniors are very highly thought of in the Limestone City and down that way they expect the Circle Six team to go right through to the championship.

The Lakeviews, however, played errorless ball in Oshawa and with Whitehouse, their clever young southpaw in fine fettle, Manager Lebarr's outfit hope to put the skids under the Easterners.

The game is called for 3 o'clock sharp and will be handled by Alex Kay of Peterboro and George Sullivan of Kingston.

With long jumps to make it is an expensive operation running a team in the O.B.A.A. series and it is up to the fans, if they want to encourage the budding material, to turn out tomorrow and encourage the Lakeviews by giving them a bumper house. The game should be well worth seeing for the Lakeviews have been going great guns and if the Kingston crew live up to their advance notices the sparks should fly. The winner of the series will be the Junior champions of Eastern Ontario.

American League Featured Three Close Games Yesterday — Chicago Swamped Philadelphia.

DETROIT, Aug. 24.— (Canadian Press.)— The New York Yankees lost its first series in the west this season when they dropped yesterday's game to Detroit, 2 to 1. The best the Yanks can do is to win today's remaining game, which will make this series stand two losses and one victory. Heilman made his fifteenth homer of the season in the last half of the second, after Phipp had cracked out one in the first half. Everett Scott, the Yankee short-stop played his 1100th consecutive game.

EGYPT USES JAPANESE TOBACCO.

TOKIO, Aug. 24.—(Associated Press.)—Japanese tobacco of inferior quality is being sent from Japan to Egypt in increasing quantities, blended there, brought back as "Egyptian" cigarettes and sold by the Japaneses tobacco monopoly at high prices.

In 1922, according to the Japan Economist, approximately 1,168,000 bales of this tobacco were thus treated and the amount will be exceeded this year.

FIRST SCHEDULED COLONIAL DEFEAT

C. G. E. Girls Turned the Trick Last Evening By a Score of 9 to 5—Good Fast Game.

The C.G.E. team did the unexpected and seldom performed feat of trimming the Colonials last evening when they beat the champions by a tidy 9 to 5 score. The game was the fastest yet played in all respects. There were fewer errors, better pitching, good hitting, and fast plays. The game went the full nine innings in less than an hour.

Miss Milliard pitched steady ball for the C.G.E. and received support that hadn't a puncture in it. Dorothy Hayes stood out as the fielding star for the winners taking seven chances without a miss. G. McCarthy was the Bambino of the winners her hitting sending across many runs.

Mrs. Lee twirled in her usual good form but her support was not as strong as it might have been. Miss V. Wade made a nice running catch of a hard drive to deep centre.

Both catchers turned in great games folding in all foul flies.

The C.G.E. took the lead from the start and the Colonials were only dangerous in the eighth when they sent in three runs.

The lineups:

Colonials—Plunkett, c; Bradshaw, 1b; Lee, p; M. Todd, 2b; Sanders, 3b; T. Todd, 2b; Greenhaw, ss; T. Wade, rf; V. Wade, cf; Scott, lf.

C.G.E.—McCarthy, lf; Hayes, 2b; Sanford, ss; Stapley, c; Taylor, 1b; Milliard, p; E. White, rf; Bolam, ss; McClaren, 3b; D. White, cf.

Score by innings:

PACKERS WON BY THE ONLY GOAL

Defeated the Quakers Last Evening—Shaw Scored on a Foul Kick.

The Packers defeated the Quakers by one goal to nothing in the Peck Cup tie played at King Edward Park last evening. The Packers were out in full strength for the game while the Quakers could only muster nine men. The only goal of the game was scored by Jack Shaw from a goal kick. Both teams played a great game throughout and there was a good crowd on hand to witness the contest.

The early stages demonstrated that the Quakers, with nine men would give the Packers a hard struggle. A raid by Foster along the line left the forwards around Curtis. Mayette passed back to G. Logan who was close in on the goals and all he had to do was touch it through but the ball rolled on the outside. Bill Gatfield gave Griffin a scare at the other end when he landed the ball over the cross bar. Foster missed an open goal, then Follis in Quakers area, tested Griffin with a low ground shot which he caught on the goal line. "Gatfield got a fruitless corner. Honour cleared to Foster, who with Logan, played a close combination attack which was repulsed near the goal by Wag Hotston. The play was fast and even at this period, with each team working hard to get the lead, but both goal-keepers were very steady at the critical moment. A foul against Jury looked dangerous for Packers until Wag cleared. Half-time arrived with the ball in midfield and no scoring.

Both teams set a fast pace on resuming, and the Quakers made Curtis show his ability between the sticks with rocket shot from Logan and Montgobery. Lasenby punted up field, Young and Underwood tried to trap the ball but an accidental foul against Quakers gave Jack Shaw the opportunity with a foul kick. He picked a hole between Griffin and the upright for the only goal. Bob Willshaw and Honour were stooping the Packers forwards on dangerous raids. Honour carried the ball up the left wing and sent in an excellent effort from the touch line. All four forwards of the Quakers would go down in a body to the Packers territory, they would be in front of goal with the ball but try as hard as they would, goals could not be got. Darkness was creeping on and with only six minutes to go the game was stopped. Packers 1, Quakers 0.

Quaker Ooats — Griffin, goal; Young and Willshaw, backs; Shaw and Honour, half-backs; Foster, G. Logan, Montgomery and Mayette, forwards.

C.P.C.—Curtis, goal; Wag Hotson and Jury, backs; Bradburry, Shaw and Batley, half-backs; Gatfield, Follis, H. Hotston, Lasenby and Underwood, forwards.

Referee—J. Clark.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press)—Yesterday was moving day in the training camp of Luis Angel Firpo, the Argentine, who will attempt to wrest the world's heavyweight title from Jack Dempsey in New York on the night of September 14. After a morning jaunt of about four miles along the board walk, and four rounds of light sparring with two punch catchers in the afternoon, Luis Angel Firpo assisted members of his party in transferring their effects from a hotel at the resort to a well appointed cottage in an exclusive bungalow colony.

Dempsey Pounding Sparring Partners.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press)—Jack Dempsey switched from light to heavyweight sparring partners yesterday, confining his work with the gloves to two rounds each with Jack Burke, Pittsburgh heavyweight and George Godfrey, 225-pound negro.

Although Burke and Godfrey are suffering from the bombardment received while prepating Dempsey for Tommy Gibbons, they were forced to take another pummeling. Burke managed to evade Dempsey's hooks for the first round, but Dempsey, drove him into a corner in the second and all but knocked him over with a right across to the chin.

Dempsey's left hooks and jabs were working to perfection against Godfrey who faced the champion for the first two rounds.

WATSON DID WELL WITH THE GIANTS

Connie Mack Turned Him Down But He Made Good With New York.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 24.—Even the greatest of managers, leaders of the John McGraw and Connie Mack type, can make mistakes in their judgment of ball players.

Pitcher John Watson of the New York Giants is delighted that Connie Mack was unable to see him as a pitcher and after a thorough trial sent him back to the minors.

Watson some years ago was secured by Mack from the Eastern League. At that time Connie's pitching staff was in such shape that any pitcher who could simply throw the ball had a chance.

Watson met with some success and much failure as a member of the Athletics. Perhaps his most noteworthy feat was the pitching of a double header. He lost both games but by close scores. Watson seemed to have plenty of stuff but according to Mack didn't learn fast enough and he was shunted to the minors.

Fate first frowned and then smiled on Watson. He came back to the majors as a member of the Boston Braves. In the spring of the year when the Braves seemed destined for the cellar, McGraw bought Watson.

Since joining New York, Watson has pitched good ball and is now on the high road to prosperity. He seems certain to cut in on a fat portion of the world series.

PROTEST COMMITTEE MEETING.

A meeting of the protest committee of the City Baseball League will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in Dan McCabe's cigar store, Hunter and Queen streets. The members are F. D. Craig, George Paxman and Dan McCabe.

HERE AND THERE IN SPORT

The Lakeviews are scheduled to play their first game with the Circle Six team of Kingston at Riverside Park on Saturday afternoon. The game is called for 3 o'clock and the boys are sure to show a great brand of ball. The return game will probably be played in Kingston on Wednesday.

The riot act was probably the order of the evening in the McGraw camp last night. The New York Nationals with the pennant almost within their grasp have shown a decided reversal of form. St. Louis, considerably nearer the bottom than the top of the list, broke even with them on a double bill yesterday and in the series with Pittsburgh, just closed, the New Yorkers did not show to any great advantage. Cincinnati has been steadily crawling up and is now but three games from the top. New York has 34 games left to play and by winning 26 can cop the pennant regardless of what the other teams may do. The question is can they win 26?

Two men have swam the English channel in the past couple of weeks, and another swimmer has crossed Lake Erie by self-locomotion. These are extraordinary feats and is evidence that the art of swimming is receiving more attention than formerly.

* * * * * * * * *

It is also encouraging to find that the channel navigators are to be awarded with $5,000 each. This is a small sum in comparison with the fabulous amounts paid to even a second rate prize fighter, but it is a start in the right direction and it is to be hoped that wealthy patrons of clean sport will make proper inducements for forthcoming events that require the supreme test of condition, stamina, courage and proficiency.

The father of Baseball was talking one day
(As great geezers do, in a casual way)
And, speaking of baseball made modern, said he;
"The game has become too commercial for me.

"The game has become too commercial by far—
It costs a small fortune to buy one big star.
All games should be pastimes. The greatest will fail
The moment 'tis put on a plutocrat scale.

"In the days long ago in the dawn of the game,
The players thought less about money than fame,
And, being an old man, I clearly recall
The time when a ball player LOVED TO PLAY BALL!

"Now it's money in bushels and money in bales
And nothing but money that's turning the scales.
Perhaps I am wrong to be talking this way
But that's how some players see it to-day!"

Waite Hoyt, star pitcher of the New York Yankees, Monday was indefinitely suspeided by Ban Johnson, president of the league, for his attempted attack on Umpire "Brick" Owens Sunday. Bill Barrett of the Chicago club was called safe on a close play at the plate, when he scored the winning run in the eighth inning. Hoyt protested the arbiter's decision and made vain efforts to strike Owens. Other players restrained him from doing so and he was led off the field.

CANNOT RESIST THE LURE OF THE GAME

Many of the Big Leaguers Find They Cannot Give Up the Game Even If Playing Days Are Over.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 24.—Their names were bywords on the diamond just a few years back.

All the fans acclaimed them. And the sport editors heralded them widely.

They were big league stars then.

But age finally got the best of them. And they drifted out of sight. Now the world practically has forgotten them.

Returns After Six Years.

Yet they're still playing ball. They can't resist the lure of the old game.

Take for instance Harry D. Lord, for years captain and star third sacker of the Boston and Chicago American League clubs. After leaving the majors he managed the Buffalo team in the Federal League. Then he returned to Portland and entered the grocery business.

For several seasons he piloted the Lowell (Mass.) outfit in the New England League. Then he captained the Portland club. In 1917 he quit baseball. But this season his friends up in Dixfield, Me., prevailed upon him to take over the reins there.

Harry finally consented. At first he stayed on the bench. But he couldn't stand being idle when the fray was getting hot. He returned to his old position at third. Now he's fielding in great fashion, and clouting the pill for better than a .300 average.

They're Coaching, Too.

There's Jack Coombs, the "Colby Iron Man," formerly one of the "Big Four" of the Athletics, and later with the Brooklyn Dodgers. He's coaching baseball at Williams College and managing the Kennbunport (Me.) nine. Right field's the place you'll always see him.

And Freddy Parent, who did such brilliant work for Chicago and Boston and the Baltimore Orioles, is running the Easterns at Brewer, Me. In the spring he coaches at Colby, Coombs' alma mater. His son, Freddy Jr., plays on the same team.

Another ex-big leaguer in Maine summer baseball is Ben Houser, former first sacker for the Athletics and Boston Braves. He's baseball mentor at Bowdoin College and manager of the Augusta (Me.) club But he gave up active playing two years ago.

Looks like the baseball itch is pretty hard to cure.

Two Veteran Stars Are on the Ragged Edge.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—It seems that the present season will mark the passing of two great shortstops, Everett Scott and Rabbit Maranville.

Scott is slowing up badly. His arm is as good as ever and his accuracy on a ground or fly ball when he reaches it is uncanny, but his legs are failing him.

Scott, once a wonder in going to his right or left, is no longer a demon in either direction. Many a ground ball is getting past him for a base hit that would have been an easy chance five years ago.

It is said that the New York club has secured Shortstop Boley of Baltimore to replace Scott. Boley is said to be ready for the big show. Scott, however, is certain to hang on for several years more, even if 1923 marks his passing as a regular.

It is said that Maranville's speed episode during a recent trip of the Pittsburgh club to Boston has worn out the "Rabbit's welcome as a Pirate. His license to drive a car in Massachusetts was taken away.

When Maranville may not pass from the majors, it is almost a certainty that Barney Dreyfus will have a new man at short when the 1924 season is ushered in.

KINGSTON JUNIORS WHO PLAY HERE TOMORROW ARE A CRACK BUNCH

Are Well Fortified in Every Position and Expect to Win the O.B.A.A. Title.

LINE ON THE PLAYERS

The Kingston Whig has the following to say in regard to the Circle Six team, who play the Lakeviews at Riverside Park to-morrow in the Junior O.B.A.A. series:

Once again the Circle Six Sports Club is lined up in championship struggle, namely, the junior provincial play-offs of the O.B.A.A., and is prepared to put forth every ounce of energy it possesses into the fight for athletic honor. This determination has been manifest in past years chiefly in hockey circles, in which branch of sport the boys have won the junior juvenile cup, in the city series, and during the coming winter the second bid for the senior city league trophy will be made. A great deal of success of this club of young players is due to the splendid organization apparent at all times, and the secretary is at present occupied in drawing up a revised constitution which should do a great deal to prepare the club for a strenuous winter.

The baseball team which represents the club this summer is of the same calibre as other teams sponsored by the Circle Six organization. Most of the players have figured in many hockey and rugby games under the colours of K.C.I. and the Frontenac Hockey Club. A brief resume of the athletic career of the members of the team is given herewith so that all the fans may become acquainted with the junior baseball champions of Kingston, individually and collectively:

Jack (Senator) Powell, who was appointed manager of the team after the departure of H. Bird, needs no introduction. Mr. Powell has a splendid reputation in hockey, as player, manager and good sportsman and is well and popularly known throughout the jurisdiction of the O.H.A. Last winter he managed the Circle Six hockey team, which made a splendid bid for senior city honors.

Donovan Clark, captain and pitching ace of the team, is a charter member of the club, and is equally well-known at K.C.I. He performs on the slab regularly and has shown splendid form and improvement during the season.

Howard Reid, relief pitcher and one of the most promising centre-fielders in Kingston, formerly attracted attention on the ice. He is recognized to be a rapidly developing pitcher, a useful hitter, and a cool, certain fielder.

"Pick" Albertson, relief pitcher and utility infielder, is a quiet youngster, who will be heard from before the season is over. This is his first summer in organized baseball and he has delighted the fans wit hhis adaptability, form and good sportsmanship.

"Lonny" Purvis, pitcher, first-baseman and all-round player, is the "Iron man" as well as being one of the most valuable members of the team. Always right there with the goods, on attack or defence, he is a great steadying factor on the team. He played last seeason with the Lakeviews, and also starred with various Public school teams. He was offered several chances with teams of higher classification this summer, but remained loyal to his team.

Frank Leggett, well-known in hockey with K.C.I., Circle Six and Junior Frontenacs. He is one of the most "snappy" short-stops in the city league. His hitting is timely, and more consistent than sensational, while his fielding average is A-plus.

Gilbert McKelvey, whose hockey and rugby exploits are matters of local fame, is a brother to "Red" McKelvey, Queen's rugby and hockey star. He is rapidly becoming a first class third baseman, while his records at the bat are such as to make opposing pitchers quail.

"Sandy" Richards, catcher and utility fielder, and a recruit from the Mercantile league, has recently developed into a certain hitter and a reliable back-stop. His fingers have suffered during the season, but he is now in good shape for the play-offs.

Russell McCullogh, catcher, is at present out of the game with a bad knee, but expetes under the able ministrations of "Billie" Hughes, to be able to show his old speed in base-running and his big league ability behind the bat during the play-offs.

"Buster" Hartley may safely be classed with his team mates as a star in his own department. He is a sure fielder and holds down the left hand corner to perfection. His hitting is steady and timely.

Charlie Smith, a recruit, is showing all the signs of a snappy fielder, either on the diamond proper or out in the tall grass. Constant practice is improving his batting and he is likely to travel with the team.

"Bill" Godwin, utility fielder and first baseman, is now showing the old form which made him noticeable in lower company during past seasons. At the bat, his keen eye always proves useful, and his services for this reason, among others will soon be recognized.

"Wes" Powell, the youngster of the team, is a recruit from the Park Nine, and is used at short-stop or in the field. Should his services be required he is certain to show up well.

Lorne Arkely and Herb. Inman are also to don the catcher's mask if the need arises, but hardly expect to be called upon this season, in spite of their value as utility men.

With this aggregation of stars blended into strong team, "Jack" Powell should be able to bring home the "bacon" stamped with the junior O.B.A.A. seal.

RUGBY MEETING MONDAY NIGHT

Everybody Interested Should Note Meeting in Chamber of Commerce

Dr. Ed. Wood as president of the Peterboro Rugby Club has called the annual re-organization meeting for Monday night at eight o'clock in the Chamber of Commerce. All those interested in the game are invited to attend as it is hoped that the work which was begun last fall will be carried farther and more successfully this season. Dr. Wood has in view an intermediate O.R.F.U. team with senior and junior city leagues and a school league. There should be plenty of good rugby material in Peterboro and if anything is to be accomplished in this sport the effort should be begun early.

SACRED HEART VS. CURLERS.

Masterson, for Sacred Heart, pitched a no-hit, no-run game against the Curlers at the Sacred Heart grounds last evening. Masterson issued one walk, struck out ten, while his team mates had 3 errors behind him.

Woods pitched steady ball for the Curlers, allowing five hits, issued two walks, struck out twelve, while his team mates attributed 3 errors. No earned runs were scored against him.

Sacred Heart won in the fourth when a walk, 2 hits and an error gave them three runs. They got their other run in the fifth, when an error and a hit scored Masterson.

The line-ups follow:

Sacred Heart—Kenneally c, Archambault ss, Rishea 1b, Masterson p, McDougall 2b, O'Brien 3b, Holland rf, Solmes cf, Grady lf.

Curlers—MacDonald ss, Barry 3b, Woods p, McLeish 1b, Baker c, Vincent cf, Ecobichon lf, Baird 2b, Frazer rf.

Score:

| | R. | H. | E. |
|---|---|---|---|
| Sacred Heart . . . 000310—4 | 5 | 3 | |
| Curlers . . . . . 000000—0 | 0 | 3 | |

Umpire—Rowe.

FORFEIT GAME IN THE SEVENTH

Umpire-in-chief LeBarr declared last evening's Juvenile game forfeited by Sacred Heart to Maple Leafs when the Umps took exception to the dilatory tactics of the south end team. The end came in the first half of the seventh with the Leafs at bat and leading by the score of 9 to 3.

Ab. Delahaye was painfully hurt when going into the plate in the first frame and could not go behind the bat. The Leafs sent in Jeff Hardill to which both Bradley and Sacred Heart entered a protest.

The game was a hot battle for six innings, with the Leafs taking a lead of two runs in the third. Sacred Heart went ahead in the fifth and the Leafs tied it up at 3 to 3 in the sixth. After two were out in the seventh, a pass to Bannon, Bradley's hit and Grant's clout to centre, started the Leafs on a scoring bee, Sacred Heart players helping some by throwing the ball over the lot.

TENNIS ENTRIES FOR TOURNAMENT

Entry forms for the Peterboro tennis championship have already started to come in and the indications all point to a real competition in all classes.

Blank forms may be obtained from Dr. A. W. McPherson, F. C. Weber, C. H. Roper, F. Bowness and H. A. Cranfield, 504 Bolivar street, telephone 1236.

They must be filled in and returned before Wednesday, August 29 at 6 p.m. The entry fee is one dollar for single entries and one dollar for each team in the doubles events. There will be ladies' singles, men's singles, ladies' doubles, men's doubles and mixed doubles. The draw for the first round will be announced on Saturday, September 1st.

The games in this championships tournament will be played on the Golf Club and Peterboro Tennis Club courts.

All those intending to enter this competition are urged to make their returns at once.

The Little Painted Steer

(By FREDERIC BOUTET)

Maurice arrived at his grandparents' house on Christmas Eve. The snow, which had been falling since morning, swathed in its mysterious white silence houses, pointed church towers and narrow streets.

Maurice recognized the deserted station, the comfortable carriage, the cautious old coachman and the tall family mansion which he hadn't seen for three years. He dutifully kissed his grandparents, who were very happy to have him with them again, answered their questions politely and learned that he had grown a great deal and was a big fellow for his eleven years. He ate an excellent dinner and enjoyed it. But the conversation was sprinkled with recollections of his early childhood. This annoyed him greatly, and about half past nine he asked permission to go to bed.

He refused any assistance from the old housekeeper and was left alone in the vast bedroom which had been prepared for him. He looked about at the dark, heavy furniture, the beautiful old lamp and the deep fireplace, in which some enormous logs were burning. He drew aside the curtains and peeped outside, where the snow was still falling. Then he turned away, his hands in his pockets and a frown on his face. In a tone of weariness, mixed with indulgence and contempt, he murmured:

"What am I up against here? Pure nursery stuff!"

He looked back with regret to the boys' academy, where he played with his little comrades at being a man. He regretted the loss of his usual vacation in Paris with his rich parents, always on the go. They spoiled him all the more during these visits because, in their egoism, they had rid themselves of him dor the rest of the year by sending him to boarding school. He thought of the holiday receptions, of the invitations to parties he sometimes received, of the pretty little girls before whom he loved to pose. He said to himself that his younger sister, Marceline, was an idiot to catch the scarlet fever at such a time, and that it would have been better for him to risk the contagion, to avoid which they kept him away from home, than to be consigned to this provincial village, this deadly country hole.

"Well," he reflected, with a philosophy beyond his years, "here I am, here I am! They adore me. I suppose I must make myself agreeable. In ten days I'll be back at school, and it will be all over. But I am out of luck. Talking about rotten Christmas vacations, this is certainly one."

He went to bed, full of resignation; read the last installment of a detective story, found it both improbable and flat and fell asleep.

Toward midnight a slight noise awakened him. The logs in the fireplace still vaguely lighted up the chamber. Maurice saw his grandparents glide silently toward the chimney, their arms filled with parcels. They bent down, arranged the things and then, with a glance at the bed, stole away on tip-toe.

Maurice hadn't moved, pretending to be asleep. At first he was unwilling to believe his eyes. He was stupefied. At the same time he felt keenly the ridiculousness of the situation.

"It is too much," he groaned, turning impatiently in the bed. "This Santa Claus business for me! It doesn't even make me laugh. It is too much, all the same!"

Nevertheless, since he was only eleven years old, he got up, and with a false indifference and detachment went over to the fireplace to see what they had brought him. He found in the shadows a pile of magnificent toys, sumptuous books and boxes of bonbons.

"They must have cost a lot of money," he said aloud, after examining them. "But it is all foolishness! I would much rather have had the cash. I need some more sporting clothes. But what's going on here?"

Something queer was going on, indeed. There was a strange movement in the toy pile. A small painted wooden steer, disengaging himself from the other objects, climbed to the top of the pile of books and planted himself squarely on the uppermost one facing Maurice, who was squatting on the floor.

"Here I am," said the little painted steer.

"Wonderful!" said Maurice.

"Don't pose," the little steer answered, severely. "That doesn't go with me! I was listening to what you said a moment ago. You are anything but a good boy. Look at your goings on because your grandparents buy you toys and are childlike enough to put them by the fire-place, as their parents did for them and they did for your parents."

"But it isn't done any more," said Maurice.

"Silence!" answered the little steer. "Not at boarding school, perhaps. It would be ridiculous to put toys in the stockings of forty youngsters in your dormitory. But here, in the country, with this old house, this big chimney, the white snow and the legendary silence of the night, nothing could be better. Your grandparents suspect that you don't believe in Santa Claus. They know that you know that they know this. But it is the old tradition with them. It goes back to their earliest memories.

"And then they took so much trouble to get all this ready for you. Your grandfather has been writing for two weeks to all the big stores; your grandmother has been hunting in all the closets. She gave me to you. And I can tell you that she lays great store by me. I was put, just as you see me, in her first Christmas stocking, when she was a very little girl. But they both wanted your first and perhaps your last Christmas with them to be the best you ever had. And you—you would like to give them a lesson! You consider yourself blase, indifferent ,quite above all this sort of thing. You criticize and complain. It is ungrateful, dishonest and foolish! You will see, in life, how you will be obliged to custom full of naive mystery and get for doing it a reward much less than all these beautiful toys and the joy of your grandparents."

"Yes, I'll admit that," said Maurice who seemed to have reflected a little. "Besides, you know, I love my grandparents very much and I shall tell them to-morrow that I am very happy. But you will find, all the same, that one must belong to his times, and that for an up-to-date boy, who is practical, prefers outdoors sports and knows also the value of things, there are entirely too many toys here."

"How so! How so! Too many toys? But look at them. They are marvels. I am astounded, myself. In my time children would never have suspected that anybody could make for them the hundredth part of such miracles Look here! In the first place, the aeroplane—the aeroplane—the flying machine! It's very dangerous for the man who sits in it and I don't understand how he has the courage to stay there It goes very high, you know Your grandfather tried it out yesterday and it amused him very much

"Then there is the railroad with its accident and all the passengers falling out in fragments They die all the time—these people do—to make entertainment for you And that is worth something! And then the North Pole, with the bears, the seals, the dogs and the explorers! They must be very cold And then the electric machine, the printing press, the compressed air gun and the beautiful books You have everything"

"I agree with you I5 is a fine collection," said Maurice, with a smile of superiority at the little painted steer's enthusiasm "If I were six years old, these things would probably take my breath away But at my age! Aeroplanes—we have seen too many of them They are old; they are commonplace We are tired of them As to the railroad and the accident victims, that isn't very cheerful And let us cut out the Pole It has no value from the scientific point of view It's good for two-year-olds only The compressed air gun—I haven't any intention of going to a military academy I am a pacifist rather And the printing press's That's nice enough; but for a year I've been editor-in-chief of a journal which we founded at our school, and we have everything we need in that line This one is only a toy It isn't serious

"And the books—astonishing and impossible tales of adventure, of men, prodigious in strength, bravery and skill, who never have anything but good luck! It isn't like that in real life It isn't like that in the colonies You don't always run across a stunning young woman, who is also a millionaire, whose life you save and who then marries you That stuff puts false ideas into your head It is bad for the easy marks and useless for those who know better It is pernicious No, you see, the most curious thing here that they have given me is—".

"Is what?" demanded the little steer

"You, of course For an automaton you are a wonder You move by electricity, I suppose, and you have a phonograph in your stomach!"

"I! A phonograph in my stomach!"

The little painted steer seemed to choke with anger

"My little boy," he said finally, "you are too much for me—too much for all of us We aren't good enough for you, it seems So amuse yourself without us Good night"

He turned about, descended from the book pile, rushed to the fireplace and disappeared behind the half-consumed logs The seals, the dogs, the bears and the explorers followed suit The railroad train, carrying the printing press, rolled away on its tracks; the gun burst into fragments; the books, set afire by a spark, were consumed in an instant The aeroplane flew away across the hearth in which nothing was now left

Maurice remained startled and a little frightened for a moment Then he shrugged his shoulders and went back to bed

The next morning about nine o'clock his grandparents entered the room and waked him up The daylight, made more dazzling by the snow, poured through the windows Maurice looked first at the fireplace It was perfectly bare

"My dear Maurice," said his grandfather affectionately, "we had thought of giving you some toys for Christmas gifts But, contrary to your grandmother's opinion, I decided that for a boy as big as you are, who goes to boarding school, money would be better and would give you more pleasure You can buy with it whatever you please"

Maurice looked at the banknotes The corners of his mouth twitched

"Well," asked his grandfather, "aren't you satisfied? What else would you have?"

The steer they gave to grandmother when she was very small," said Maurice with a sob

"I was sure of it!"

The old lady, touched and enchanted cast a look of triumph at her husband

"Take it, my dear I have brought it along for you It will always be yours"

GOLF NOTES

A team from the Peterborough Golf Club, composed of Robt. Abbott, F. M. Dela Fosse, A. Mowat, A. H. Stratton, J. W. McDermid, Joseph Wearing, B. D. Hall, Dr. Sutton, W. R. Widdess and Hugh Mason (pro) visited the Lakeview Club, Toronto, yesterday, for the purpose of a friendly match. The Lakeview course is probably the most difficult test of golf in Canada and only Robt. Abbott and A. H. Stratton were successful in winning their matches. The only plausible alibi was furnished by Mr. Dela Fosse, who first missed the C.N.R. train by which the team travelled and then went down on the later C.P.R. train without his clubs. A record of the Lakeview course was broken when Mr. Abbott, driving from the second tee, reached a deep gully which crosses the fairway in front of the green almost three hundred yards from the tee. Lakeview members stated that his feat has never been accomplished before, although at the recent Canadian Open Tournament which was held on the course, some of the longest drivers in the world participated. The return match will be held at Peterborough September 11th.

THEATRES

Capitol Entertainment

Whoever wrote "The Heart Raider" set out, probably, to prove the truth of the cynic's assertion that "the female of the species is more deadly than the male." The feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for this week-end has Agnes Ayres in the stellar role, and in it the demure Agnes proceeds to show her more backward sisters just what a feminine "go getter" is like.

It is the sort of a picture that will make the older generation shake a shocked collective head, and sympathize with the elderly gentleman in the production who got out of the picture in haste when Agnes sat down to dinner in her abbreviated bathing-suit. Just what effect such screen stories have on the younger portion of the audience is hard to say. The tale depicts the efforts of the wild, speeding daughter of a rich man to land an elusive swain. He has absolutely no use for her, but she determines to land him, nevertheless, and goes right after him. She stops at nothing, and finally the obdurate one capitulates, and the lady is victorious. The finale shows her in an apprehensive attitude, asking him if he will be as hard to hold as he was to get. Probably this is a future possibility, and maybe quite in line with feminine advancement along other lines. It looks a little bald, however, on the silver screen, in a city where the average audience is not quite educatd up, as yet, to such progressive methods. Otherwise, the picture is very satisfactory, without any flaws in the screening, background or characterization. It is probably an advance note on a future state, where the ancient ideas will be reversed. In fiction of years ago, the bold lady got a set-back, and the shy, unobtrusive damsel came out successful. Nowadays, according to such productions, the cards are all on the board, "speed" is the slogan, and the world is rapidly turning to an Amazonian state of mind.

The comedy, "No Luck," portrays in dream fashion the trials of a youth afflicted with an active jinx.

PLAYED PART 1348 TIMES.

Thirteen hundred and eighty-four continuous performances! This is the record which Claude Gillingwater made for himself in his creation of one of the title roles in "Three Wise Fools" the popular stage success by Austing Strong, which John Golden and Winchell Smith produced with such great success on the stage.

And so it was when King Vidor decided to translate this very human story to the screen in a Goldwyn picture, the most natural consequence was that Gillingwater should play the same role he had on the stage. In adapting the play Vidor has retained all of the delightful humor which surrounds the three old men and the role of Findley, which Gillingwater plays, is especially interesting.

"Three Wise Fools" comes to the Capitol Theatre for three days, commencing Monday matinee.

On Monday, the regular winter schedule of performances will commence, with matinees every afternoon.

"Conversation Circulation"

IN the days when "Conversation Circulation" statements were the basis on which the advertiser bought space, the advertising solicitor who put up his story in the most pleasing manner, generally got the business.

In case the advertiser questioned the figures he might possibly go to the newspaper office and look over the circulation records with his own auditors. But neither he nor his auditors knew the intricacies of newspaper circulation records or the possibilities for juggling figures.

Circulation differences and arguments caused bitter battles between many newspapers. Ingenious schemes were used by unscrupulous publishers to put up the appearance of a larger circulation than they had. The prevalence of these practices brought out the necessity for a reputable agency to audit and report on circulation matters.

The Audit Bureau of Circulations was started eight years ago by a nucleus of the leading advertisers, agents, newspaper, magazine, farm papers, and trade paper publishers. Today it has a membership of 1800. The purpose of the bureau is to make fair and impartial audits of circulation records and it is now accepted as the Standard Authority among space buyers throughout the United States and Canada.

Every Publisher-Member of the Bureau is required to make semi-annual statements setting forth the annual net paid circulation. Once a year the Bureau sends an auditor to the office of each publisher to check and if necessary correct his circulation statements.

Study the A.B.C. reports of the publications you are considering and it will not be necssary to argue about competitive circulation.

IN MEMORIAM

WILSON— To the loving memory of Pte. Royden V. Wilson, son of Andrew and Jennie Wilson, who was killed in action in the great war, on August 24, 1917.
Until the resurrection morn.
Mother, Father, Sisters and Brothers

IN MEMORIAM

DOWSON— In loving memory of our little nephew, who was drowned in the Otonabee River, Aug. 24 1922.
The fairest lilies are the first to fall
The sweetest first to fade,
The fondest, dearest, best of all,
Within the grave is laid.
Remembrance is a golden chain,
Death tries to break, but all in vain,
To have, to love, and then to part,
Is the greatest sorrow of our hearts.
The golden gates were open
A gentle voice said, "Come,"
And with a farewell unspoken,
He calmly entered home.
His memory is as dear to-day,
As in the hour he passed away.
Sadly missed by Auntie Lily Hettie and Uncle Jack.

IN MEMORIAM

DOWSON—In loving memory of our dear son, Henry Roy Dowson, who was drowned in the Otonabee River, Aug. 24, 1922, age 7 years, 10 months.
Pure and fair as a lily was his little soul within,
The Savious saw he was far to pure
To dwell in this world of Sin,
So he carried our darling to His bosom
Away to the golden shore.
And now he dwells with the Saviour, rejoicing for evermore.
He was the sunshine of our home
A treasure to us given,
Just when we learned to love him most
God called our darling Henry home to Heaven.
Sadly missed by Father, Mother, and Brother John.

IN MEMORIAM.

MILLEN.—In loving memory of our dear Minnie Millen, who departed this life August 20, 1922.
Oh, how we loved her, but Jesus loved her more,
And He did sweetly call her to yonder shining shore.
She heard His gentle voice say,
Come lay down thou weary one, lay down thy head upon My breast,
And with farewells unspoken she gladly entered into rest.

IN MEMORIAM.

In memoriam of our dear mother, Mrs. C. Mellen, who died Aug. 23, 1922:
When a mother breathed her last farewell,
The blow is more than tongue can tell;
Earth seems quite another place,
Without the smile of a mother's face.
Sleep on dear mother and take your rest
For God hath called when He thought best.
Our loss means pain, but yours meant gain,
In Heaven we hope to meet again.

GOING BACK TO SCHOOL HANDICAPPED

Most children are being forced to do school work under the handicap of a constant nervous strain, caused by neglect of Eyes that need help.

It is foolish to lose time in supposing that the child will "Grow out of it."

The time to put out a fire is before it amounts to anything.

The sensible time to stop eyestrain is before it amounts to anything.

Is your child going back to school handicapped?

Our examination will remove the doubt.

A LULL IN NEWS NOW REGARDING HOME BANK

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—(Canadian Press).—Following the meeting of depositors of the suspended Home Bank yesterday afternoon and the postponement by judgment by Judge Fisher in the applications of creditors to have the bank declared "in liquidation" there is a lull in the news in regard to the situation of creditors, depositors and shareholders of the institution.

The depositors stoutly protested against the granting of the liquidation order until, the Curator A. B. Barker had an opportunity to carefully ascertain the standing of the assets and liabilities of the concern.

Judge Fisher apparently acquiesced in this view when he adjourned the creditors' applications for two weeks to enable the curator to make an interim report.

SCRANTON SHORT OF COAL.

Head of the Anthracite Field Unprepared for a Strike.

SCRANTON, Pa., Aug. 24.—Demand for coal in this city, the metropolis of the anthracite region, is so heavy that several retail dealers have refused to take any additional orders. Many citizens who paid little attention to the threat of a miners' strike in past weeks now find themselves unable to buy coal at any price. Should there be a suspension or strike of long duration there is certain to be suffering in the homes built over the coal mines.

This section is unprepared for a coal mine suspension or strike. For the first time in years none of the large coal companies has a storage supply of coal available.

The fuel shortage here is due, local retailers assert, to the fact that the coal companies are shipping the fuel to more distant points where they can command a higher price for their product.

GERMANY STANDS BY CUNO PROMISE

Offer Made by Late Government for Meeting Reparations is Binding.

BERLIN, Aug 24. — (Canadian Press)—The present German Government stands by the offer madeby recent Cuno government for meeting of Germany's reparation obligations, Chancellor Stresemann told German industrial commerce club in addressing it to-day.

"For liberation of German soil for maintenance of our sovereignty and consolidation of our situation," Chancellor declared. "It would not be too great a sacrifice to offer part of German economic system as a productive pledge for carrying out Germany's reparation obligations."

AMENDMENTS WEAKEN LADY ASTOR'S DRY BILL

LONDON, Aug. 24 (Associated Press) —Lady Astor's liquor bill is regarded by the liquor interests as a huge joke —in fact so much so that they have made no serious efforts to hinder its passage.

The most persistent opponents of the bill when it was first introduced in the Commons now regard the amended form so harmless that some of them even went so far as to support it.

The original intention of the bill was to prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors to persons under 18 years of age, heavy penalties being provided for infringements. The committee in charge of the bill, however, inserted the vital words "knowingly under eighteen" and now the proprietor cannot be fined or arrested unless it is proved that he knew the consumer to be under age.

Another amendment to the bill permits persons under 18 years to be served with beer and wines with a meal. This has earned for the bill the title "Beer and Biscuit Bill" since the latter is recognized as a meal within the understanding of the English law. What is more, it is not necessary for the meal to be ordered in the saloon, hence a boy or girl may bring a biscuit with them and be served with as much beer as he or she wishes.

The only people Lady Astor's bill seems to have pleased are the anti-prohibitionists, for they believe that it has placed a barrier in the path of total prohibition, as it has used up all the energy of its supporters in seeking to have this bill passed and there is not enough left to put through the more stringent and less evasive measures. The only prohibitionist in the House of Commons spoke against the bill as being a "weak sister," which would do more harm to the cause than good.

Lady Astor responded to the attacks saying that she couldn't please everybody, and some vexations MMMMMM one, and some vexatious measure must be put up with. She said that if she did what she wanted to on a hot day she would take a jump into the lake in St. James Park.

To this another member cried out: "I wish you would, that has gone dry now."

RESORT TO SOFT COAL.

WASHINGTON, August 24, Canadian Press. — Coal commission today in an informal statement, said that while it was not again intervening in the negotiations between the operators and the miners, the commission considered stoppage of mining would constitute a public emergency and consumers might have to use soft coal to tide them over.

LETTER WRITERS DEMAND $1000 FOR LOST BABY

Father of Three-Months-Old Kidnapped Child Offered Daughter's Return for Ransom.

SEEKING WRITERS

NEW YORK, Aug. 26. — Pete McKenzie, father of three-month-old Lillian McKenzie, who was kidnapped from a perambulator at noon last Saturday in front of McCrory's store in West Eighteenth Street, near Sixth Avenue, received two letters at his home, 248 West Twelfth Street, demanding $1,000 ransom for the return of the child.

One of the letters bore a Brooklyn postmark and was written in pencil in a masculine hand. This letter declared that Lillian was stolen "just for the dirty tricks you did to me in the past year." The second letter, which was mailed in Rutherford, N.J., was apparently written by a man. It was penned with purple ink in a large, flowing hand and was signed "K. K. K."

McKenzie immediately turned the letters over to Captain William H. Funston, who is in charge of the 165 detectives searching for the child. He said that he believed the Rutherford letter was the work of a weak-minded man, but appeared to take the Brooklyn letter more seriously. Captain Funston expressed surprise when he was informed that McKenzie had revealed the receipt of the letters.

"He should not have spoken about either of these letters," Funston said, "no matter what he thinks of them. I certainly shall not discuss them."

"Do you attach any importance to the letter mailed from Brooklyn?" he was asked.

"My answer to that is that detectives are investigating this letter with the same degree of attention that we have given to any information that we have received in connection with this case," he replied.

No Place For Ransom Fixed.

McKenzie said that the Brooklyn letter was the first received by him. He said that the writer had informed him that Lillian was still alive and was being fed by him in accordance with special diet which had been prescribed for the child by the McKenzie family physician and which was published in the newspapers. He added that the letter did not enclose any instructions regarding the manner in which the ransom demanded was to be paid, but stated that the writer would outline a scheme for the payment of the $1,000 in a letter which would be mailed within a few days.

"What is your opinion of this letter?" McKenzie was asked.

"I don't know what to think of it," he replied. "If the writer knows me he certainly knows that I have not $1,000. More than that there is not a person in the world who can say that either I or my wife ever did a dirty trick to anybody."

"Did the handwriting appear familiar to you?"

"I don't think I ever saw it before. It appeared to be the work of somebody who was not used to writing. I have no means of running down the man who wrote it. That's why I immediately took both letters to Captain Funston. He appeared to be greatly interested in the Brooklyn letter.

Other Letter Well Written.

"The letter from Rutherford appeared to be the work of an insane man," McKenzie continued. "Under the signature 'K.K.K.,' in black ink, the writer said that the $1,000 must be placed in a smokestack at the entrance to the Rutherford Gas Company. It also said that the money was to be placed in a handkerchief and that if I did not comply with the demand Lillian would be killed between 3 and 4 o'clock Saturday.

"The writing and spelling in this letter showed that the person who wrote it had a fair education. If the letters were intended as a hoax, all I can say is that the persons who wrote them are brutally cruel to do such a thing like this to Mrs. McKenzie and I when we are in such distress over the loss of our little girl."

As McKenzie told about the receipt of the letters his wife sobbed bitterly in her bed, to which she had been confined at intervals for the last few days through grief over the kidnapping of Lillian.

"I can't believe that anybody would write letters like these without having a knowledge of the whereabouts of my child," she moaned. "We have never wronged anybody; why should they treat us in this way?"

Captain Funston admitted in his office at the West Thirtieth Street Station that despite the continuous activity of about 165 detectives under him not the slightest hopeful lead had been obtained regarding the whereabouts of Lillian or the person or persons involved in the kidnapping.

How the French Met Demands of Germany, 1871

In connection with M. Poincare's allusion to what happened to France in 1871 it may be recalled that France, with a population of 36,000,000, and a national debt of £1,000,000,000, paid an indemnity of £200,000,000, plus £15,000,000 interest. Collections were made by nurses in the streets, and private associations appealed to the nation for subscriptions to the loan to pay the debt to Germany. The women of France collected funds, and appeals for funds were posted up in every French city. French cities postponed schemes of improvement to find money for the Germans. All French private resources were applied to the payment of Germany. Every French instalment was paid punctually or before the stipulated rate, in 2½ years from signing the Peace Treaty. France thus paid £215,000,000 by September 5, 1873, in addition to war levies imposed by the Germans on various French cities, and cost of food for the army of occupation.

MAY BURY IRISH REPUBLICANISM

Votes Will Fall Like Clods of Earth on Coffin of De Valera Crowd--Government Confident.

LONDON, August 25. United Press. — Monday is likely to see a tombstone erected over the grave of Irish Republicanism, when the votes of the Irish people will undoubtedly fall like clods on the coffin of the De Valera crowd. The latest estimates give not more than fifteen out of the total of 153 seats to the Republicans.

While ten parties are putting forward candidates, only two of them are anti-treaty, namely the Republicans and the Larkin Laborites.

The Government has played a real Irish game, putting up candidates as independents and business men, thus under proportional representation, making sure of a majority in the principal constituencies.

The parties represented in the election are as follows: Ministerialists, Farmers, Independents, Labor, Town Tenants, Republicans, Women's Party, Larkinites, Business Men.

But Little Disturbance.

Meanwhile the election proceeds with less disturbance than was expected, the few scattered incidents merely isolate sympathy from De Valera.

The people realize that the government has restored order, made the conduct of business safe, and brought back the tourist trade.

The Independent candidates running under the government auspices emphasize the necessity for economy in the services of the government, whose financial policy is placing the Free State on a firm basis.

The Farmers' Party, representing the largest Irish community, support a platform which the government blesses, but points with sorrow and pride to the tragedies and achievements since the treaty.

Think Government Safe.

Owing to proportional representation it is impossible to give an accurate forecast of the result of the poll. The split in the Labor party is the most important factor. The present indications are that the voters are fully satisfied with the government under the Free State, and will demand its continuance.

PRISONERS IN PENITENTIARY WANT TOBACCO

Chewing Plug Costs as Much as 500 Days' Food Allowance—Strike Imminent.

CHANCELLOR'S TOUR

BERLIN, Aug. 25—(United Press)—The high price of chewing tobacco was blamed for the strike of 1,500 prisoners in the penitentiary at Naugarot, Pomerania, to-day.

The prisoners refused to work, demanding an increase in their food money allowance. The allowance is 200 marks a day, while a single plug of tobacco costs 100,000 marks. The prison guard has been reinforced to prevent a mutiny.

BOLSTER UP RESISTANCE.

Chancellor Stresemann departed for Munich to-day to confer with Premier Knilling of Bavaria about the internal situation. During his absence the Premier will visit other south German capitals, bolstering up popular resistance to the French and preparing the way for the enforcement of the new Government's tax programme.

DR. F. C. BANTING PRESSED BUTTON

And Opened Toronto's Big Annual Fair Today —"Warriors' Day."

TORONTO, Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press).—Toronto's big annual Fair, known as the Canadian National Exhibition, was opened for its forty-fifth consecutive showing to-day.

The opening ceremonies this afternoon were featured by the honoring of Dr. F. G. Banting, the Toronto doctor who has become famous during the past year by his discovery of insulin. Dr. Banting pressed the button which officially opened the Exhibition.

This was "Warriors' Day," according to the programme, and returned soldiers and their relatives were guests of the Exhibition directorate.

The officials of the Exhibition are aiming at an attendance of one million and a half during the two weeks of the Fair this year.

ALL PARTY PRESS APPROVES SPEECH

Chancellor Stresemann Struck Popular Notes in Declaration of Reparations Stand.

BERLIN, Aug. 25. — (Canadian Press.) — Approval of Chancellor Stresemann's latest expression on the reparation issue is voiced to-day by the Press of all parties. The Nationalist editors lay stress upon the emphatic manner in which the Chancellor rejected any compromise with regard to Germany's sovereignty over the Ruhr and the Rhineland, while the Socialist organs think the Chancellor displayed laudable sincerity in dealing with the issue. Chancellor Stresemann's speech, says the Deutsche Allgemine Zeitung, organ of Hugo Stinnes, marks a distinct progress, in that it makes clear to the world the points of difference existing in the way Germany and France look at the question. It goes straight to the crux of the whole issue says the newspaper. "Does France want reparations or the Rhine?"

Would Prevent British Peer From Speaking Before American Audience

NEW YORK, August 25 (Canadian Press). — Characterising the references to Woodrow Wilson by Viscount Birkenhead, former Lord Chancellor of Great Britain, in his address before the Williamstown Institute of Politics, as "Impudent," Henry Brokenridge, Assistant Secretary of War under Wilson, to-day protested in a letter to John W. Davis, president of the American Association, against the Viscount being permitted to speak at the Association's annual convention.

LITTLE 12-YEAR-OLD LADY IS HELD ON THEFT CHARGE

Alleged to Have Crawled Through Window and Got Away With $45—Two Other Children in Toils

MONTREAL, Aug. 25—With one 12-year old lass charged with burglary and two more of 13 accused as adventuresses, the girls before the Juvenile Court made exploits of the boys pale into insignificance. All the boys could do was to play ball on the streets and steal apples.

The prize prisoner was the alleged burglar. A cute little lady, she was supposed to have crawled through an unlocked window leading to the cellar of an east end house not far from her home. While the people were absent, she is said to have gone through the place, stolen $45 in cash, then to have bought herself a gold watch which was in her pocket when Sergt. Detectives Barrette and Lemyre arrested her. But the plea is not guilty, she has a lawyer to defend her, and the case will be heard next week.

Two Disappeared

The 13-year old voyager led Detectives Finel and Pelletier a merry dance before they were picked up in a St. Lawrnce bouleward amusement place.

According to parents' stories, the two girls disappeared from their homes at the same time on Saturday. They came back Sunday. Each child told her mother she had stayed the night with the other girl. Parents checked up and found somebody was lying. Things looked black for the ladies, and when the mothers were ready for the lecture and perhaps something else more severe, the girls were gone again.

The two slueths got on the trail, found that girls had walked from Montreal to Valois on Saturday with the idea of spending the night with some friends. But, finding nobody they knew, they had sleep out in a field. Then they had gone home Sunday. Leaving the same day, they had gone out to Valois again, each girl with her baggage in parcel under her arm. That time they had found friends and had stayed there. They had sought work, but there was none

Came Back to City

Thursday they came back to the city. The police were watching for two little girls with parcels under their arms, and found them in an arcade on the Main. Told they were under arrest, they related a wonderful story.

They were sisters. They had been born in Limoilu, Que., and their parents lived at St. Johns. They had come to Montreal and were on their way to the United States to see relations.

No good. One girl had a wee snub nose, the other a long straight nose. And their parcels were under their arms. So they did not long combat the detectives' questions and are staying for a while with the Sisters of

TIME INOPPORTUNE FOR DISCUSSING AIR FORCE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press). — President Coolidge believes the time is inopportune for the conference for limiting airplane armament which has been proposed by the American Legion. This view was expressed at White House to-day with the comment that European conditions are such at present that it would not be advisable to attempt to bring interested powers in to a conference of this subject.

The United States is setting an excellent example, the President was represented as believing, in refraining from embarking on a competitive building programme.

RAILROAD MEN ASK INCREASE

Suggest Return to 1921 Schedule of Wages Entailing 14 Per Cent. Increase.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press.)—Demand for wage increases on the part of the station, shop, sheds, round houses and clerical employees of the Canadian National Railways will likely result from a meeting of the men's committee in Toronto, commencing on Monday next.

It was announced here this morning by headquarters officials of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railroad Employees, that the chairman, vice-chairman and secretary of the general committees covering the Atlantic, Central and Western regions would participate in the conference, with A. R. Mosher, president of the Brotherhood, in the chair.

Uniformity Wanted.

Besides the questions of wages, the meeting will ask for the amalgamation of the three wage and working condition schedules so as to secure uniformity of these groups of employees on the C. N. R. lines in all parts of Canada.

It is stated on good authority that the employees are seeking a return to the wage rates of 1921, which were about 14 per cent. on an average higher than at present. Some 12,000 men are affected.

COLLIER RESENTS HEYDLER'S ATTACK

Says His Remarks Are Unjustified--Urge Investigation of Sports Charges

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.— (Canadian Press.)—John A. Heydler, president of the National League, declined to-day to comment on the criticism directed at him by Bert E. Collier, publisher of Collier's Eye, Chicago sports weekly, which recently printed charges that players Bohne and Duncan of the Cincinnati Reds, had been approached by gamblers in an effort to have them "throw" a crucial series with the New York Giants. Collier, in a message to Commissioner Landis, accused President Heydler of unjustifiably attacking his paper and urged thorough investigation of the gambling charges.

"Collier's statement has no bearing whatever in the case, so far as I am concerned," President Heydler declared. "If there is any basis for his charges I want to know it and at my suggestion, the players involved will begin legal action against the publication in an effort to establish their truth or falsity. That seems to me to be the best way to proceed right now."

The league executive added that he believed Duncan and Bohne, who flatly denied Collier's charges at a hearing on Thursday, would delay taking legal steps until the Reds return to Cincinnati the latter part of next week.

RUM RUNNERS CHASED AWAY BY OFFICERS

Provincial Police Found 1,500 Gallons of Alcohol in Farmer's Barn—Value $30,000.

Two Men Escaped.

One man was arrested, and two managed to make their escape as they sighted the officers coming towards them. They vanished in the darkness amid a rain of bullets from the Provincial officers' guns.

In the seizure the officers found 300 5-gallon cans of alcohol, or a total of 1500 gallons, valued at $20 a gallon The alcohol and cars were brought to Toronto to-day.

RAIN SAVED VILLAGE AFTER WELL RAN DRY

L'EPIPHANIE, Quebec, August 25 (Canadian Press). — A deluge of rain which opportunely fell during the night saved this village from destruction by fire. It had been feared a fire which was burning in the general store of J .A. Majeau would spread to the village, which was at the mercy of the fire owing to a well running dry after water had been pumped from it for a short time.

May Place Embargo On Coal to Canada

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25. Canadian Press. — The expectation here is that the question of the placing of an embargo on shipments of anthracite to Canada in the event of a strike, will come up at the Governors' conference in New York on Tuesday. Persons in close touch with the situation predict that there will be either an embargo on hard coal to the Dominion, or such a system of priorities on the railroads as to make it impossible to ship anything like the usual amounts there, and that Canada will very largely have to depend upon soft coal.

The official view of the situation, however, continues to be that work will not be suspended in the anthracite mines.

FOWL APLENTY LOCAL MARKET

Abundance of Green Corn Was Also Outstanding Offering This Morning Butter Plentiful.

Plenty of fowl and plenty of green corn were the outstanding offerings on the farmers' market this morning. Corn which doesn't appear quite as well rounded out as in previous years, sells for 25 cents a dozen.

The fowl, with which the upper room tables were loaded, was mainly of the young hen variety, and sold for 25 cents a pound. Ducks were 35 cents a pound.

Butter and eggs were plentiful, also, the former at 40c, 39c, 38c and 37c a pound, eggs selling for 27c to 30c a dozen.

Potatoes this morning were 50c. a peck, in good quality, carrots, beets and onions 5 cents a bunch.

The guardian of Duchess apples, carefully retrieving a specimen from an inquiring customer's hand, said they were worth 50 cents a peck.

Blue plums were selling for 60 cents and $1.00 per small and large baskets.

Watermelon was 30 cents a-piece, and early squash 10c and 15c.

Honey was selling at one stand for 75c per 5-pound pail at another for 85c.

Upstairs and downstairs, the flowers were in profusion. Golden Glow and marigolds made bright notes, with gladioli and asters and feathery cosmos One woman had bouquets of pure white and heavy pink geraniums at 40 cents a dozen.

TIE UP RAILWAYS DURING HARVEST

One Big Union Proposes Paralyzing Transportation to Compel Wage Increase.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25. Canadian Press. — Urging a general tie-up of the Canadian railway lines during the harvest and western grain rush, as the only means of forcing the Railway Association of Canada to accede to the demands of the railway workers for increased wages and other conditions, a "call to action" will be sent out to-day by the One Big Union to ascertain the prevailing sentiment, of both organized and unorganized railway workers throughout the West, R. Ball, Secretary of the Central Labor Council, announced last night.

TORPEDOED VESSEL DISGORGES BULLION

LONDON, August 25 (Canadian Press). — All but about thirty bars of the gold that was lost when the White Star liner Laurentic was torpedoed off the coast of Ireland, has now been recovered, and about four million pounds in bullion has been brought to the surface.

Hungry Lions Raid African Villages; Acquired Taste for Humans in War

LONDON, August 25. — Man-eating lions, which acquired a taste for human flesh during the war, are terrorising parts of the Tanganyika territory, formerly German East Africa, according to an official report issued to-day.

The lions' boldness, says the report, is incredible, and whole villages have feen terrorised by their presence, but as they lie up in the dense bush in the day time, their extermination by native trappers, trained and sent out for the purpose, is a matter of much difficulty.

In the first half of the year, rewards were paid for the destruction of 300 lions and 800 leopards. Elephants also do great damage to the crops, often ruining a whole plantation in a single night, or, entering villages, they strip the roofs off the grain storehouses and scatter or consume the contents.

RIVER INVADED BY WEEDS SINCE BOATS STOPPED

Many Wharves in Disuse and Other Signs of the Effects of the Automobile on Navigation.

MENACE TO TRENT

Weeds slowly encroaching in the old boat channels of the Otonabee River and Rice Lake may be regarded as an eventual menace to the successful propaganda and exploitation work of the Trent Waterways Development Association.

The shadow of the automobile has fallen upon the water blighting its ancient traffic, for the present at any rate, and leaving nature free to reproduce herself in places where she was formerly held in check by the coming and going of men.

Earlier in the year the Examiner reported the fact that commercial navigation in these waters had practically disappeared. Once or twice a week of late the old Rainbow, with her passenger rights reported cancelled, has been in towing and will continue these irregular trips possibly to the close of the season. In the meantime there have been rather frequent excursions from the city to Wallace's Point on the river, or beyond that to the lake.

But the navigation of other years has been pathetically reduced, not only in respect to the larger boats but also in the number of small craft which with their shallower draught used to spread out beyond the charted channel and cut down the weeds that ventured too far from their preserves along the shore.

Preference For Water

Even now the river and lake are not deserted, for there will undoubtedly always be persons who by their personal preferences and tastes will follow the quiet joys of the lake and river rather than rush madly after the thrills of the motor hum ming along a dusty and comparatively crowded highway.

But the number of freight and passenger steamboats and the smaller gasoline craft are only a few today in contrast with the number of a few years ago, and, as this river traffic was withdrawn, weeds began to invade channels from which they had been excluded for generations. The western or Jubilee channel into Rice Lake is practically blocked. The course is there but looking at it and recalling the wide passage that used to wind up from the lake to the old lighthouse the open water seems narrow enough to hop across.

Even in the eastern channels the weeds have pushed out until they are almost touching the sides of passing boats.

Wharfs Rarely Used

And of the wharfs on the river and lake only a few of them have have been used this year. The rest have been only an artificial touch to nature's shoreline. There may be some freight, hogs and grain, shipped from some of them this fall, but for the most part they are obsolescent, with weeds fringing them around about and a general dispirited air of desertion hanging over them. It would perhaps be interesting to know how many of these wharves were visited or used at all this summer. From Peterboro to Rice Lake they formerly served the farmers in two counties as facilities to reach the market in Peterboro, but those days appear to be gone forever. Provincial highways are faster than nature's waterways. There was no market service at all this yea.

It is even said that the dock at Gore's Landing discloses the invading rank of weeds with their front lines pushed up into new positions, and the mouth of the Indian River below Keene was so clogged that the Canal Department recently dragged the course with an improvised chain rake, and opened it up. Unless, however, ordinary traffic is going to be regular and frequent enough to keep the channels clear it will impose a new and expensive and almost impossible task upon the Department to keep the weeds cut along the Trent.

The encroachments, already noticeable, are not particularly serious, but they indicate the activities of nature which tend to choke the stream except where the current is fast enough to maintain an open channel. Just as grass will overgrow a path that falls into disuse so are the aquatic plants pushing out into the river with the possibility that if the intrusions of the last few years are continued at the same rate the old Otonabee will undergo a great change in its appearance and perhaps in its usefulness.

GERMAN CHANCELLOR REITERATES HIS POLICY ON THE RUHR SITUATION

Dr. Streseman Made An Official Announcement of His Stand at Luncheon Given By Commercial Leaders.

GOOD INDICATIONS.

BERLIN, Aug. 25. — Dr. Gustav Stresemann the new Chancellor, yesterday delivered at a luncheon tendered him by Industrial Financial and Commercial leaders, his first official declaration of his government's stand in the reparations controversy.

Beyond giving a slightly more precise formulation to Germany's previous offer to pledge an integral part of her industrial, commercial and financal organism as security for reparations payments, the Chancellor's speech contributed no new elements to Germany's side of the issue.

Without specifically mentioning passive resistance or the evacuation of the invaded areas, Dr. Stresemann nevertheless permitted the inference that the German government believed such tangible "pawns" as portions of her economic system were not too high a price to offer for the restoration of German sovereignty. This statement is viewed in political circles as merely paraphrasing his inaugural statement before the Reichstag in which he made the complete rehabilitation of German official and private jurisdiction in the Ruhr and the Rhineland a condition for abandoning passive resistance. In his address yesterday he opposed any attempt to make the Ruhr and the Rhineland objects of negotiations in any solution of the reparations tangle.

The speech in its entirety is viewed here as a temperate and conciliatory statement by the government. Political leaders view it as a material contribution to an attempt to create an atmosphere which will enable an early resumption of formal pourparlers between Germany and the Entente powes.

Among the luncheon guests were Rudolf Hilferding Minister of Finance Hans Von Raumor, Minister of Economics; Dr. Buecher, president of the League of German industrialists; Dr. Sorge, head of the Krupp directorate and representatives of the Berlin Chamber of Commerce and other commercial organizations. Dr. Duisburg had of the Bayer Chemical and Dye Works presided. He praised Chancellor Stresemann for the courage manifested in taking the helm of the ship of state while the craft was being "badly tossed by the high seas and threatened with foundering."

Dr. Duisburg advised the Chancellor to get rid of the surplus crew and needless ballast in order to make room for passengers and cargo. The ship also needed a new compass, he said, in order to enable it to find its way into open water, as it now was threatened with being caught in the "Scylla and Charibdis of Anglo-French relations."

The fact that Chancellor Stresemann was permitted to unfold his program at a luncheon tendered him by "Big Business" is viewed as an indication that the industrialists and their allied interests are in full accord with the government's attitude on reparations and its program of radical taxation and financial measures.

In opening his address the Chancellor said his government stood by the offer the recent Cuno government had made for settling Germany's reparation debts. Despite the heavy new taxation of property a lasting recovery in Germany's finances was impossible without a previous settlement of the foreign situation.

"The world," said the Chancellor, expects from its statesmen a return of normal conditions of international commerce, instead of the present chaos. Such a possibility is opened to us in the last official publication of the British government. The French premier, too, at Charleville indicated a practical solution as the aim of his policy by claiming positive pledges for German reparation deliveries, namely the German railways and control of the German economic system and of German customs. This principle also was expressed in the German memorandum of June 7, which, to our regret remained unanswered.

For us in Germany there is no Rhemish question to be solved internationally. The Rhinelanders have the right to determine their relation to the Reich. Hitherto they have not expressed the slightest desire for a change in their loyalty to the Reich and to Prussia.

"We accept with satisfaction the French premier's declaration that he is pursuing no political aims or ideas of annexation; but this declaration is incompatible with his proposed solution because they actually would mean special treatment of the Rhine and the Ruhr, both economically and politically, thus barring the way to a settlement which would be acceptable to Germany."

The Chancelor said the German government would be accused of political dilettantism if it based its policy on a division of the Allies. Germany, he declared, could only hope some way would be found by which the just claims of the Allies might be satisfied while Germany at the same time, was assured the possibility of future development.

POULTRY ASSN. HELD MEETING

Fifteenth Annual Meeting Was Held at Ottawa — Results of Investigations Are Told.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press.)— One of the interesting things disclostd at the terminating session of the 15th annual meeting of the American Association of investigation and instruction in poultry husbandry this afternoon was that as high as 25 p.c. of the hens in most flocks might be culled out without seriously impairing the quantity of eggs produced by the flock aggregate. There are some hens, that are brooders and not layers, or for some reason, are not of the laying strain, and these can be dispensed with without loss.

A. R. Jones of Prince Edward Island, who spoke on "poultry promoter work in Canada,' 'also said that some eggs were unfit from the very moment they were laid, for human consumption, and that an egg was not to be judged by age or size but by well defined tests which only an egg authority could apply. Once the fiscal advantages of better eggs were demonstrated, the department found itself besieged with calls for assistance; assistance in showing how to establish a standard tor eggs.

Proper feeding also bulks large in egg productivity; statistics brought forth by P. E. Riley of Perdue University Lafayette, Ind., showed this fact to be an indubitible one. Hens were taken and fed on a prepared mash for three weeks. Before the feeding test a certain number of hens produced 29,996 eggs. After three weeks proper dieting, the same hens produced 52,117 eggs in the same given time, or a 72 p.c. increase.

A number of other papers were read during yesterday's session.

The final reports of the meeting were devoted to discussing the feasibility of sending delegates to the International Poultry conference to be held at Barcelona, Spain, in 1924. It was decided to send the following men should finances permit: American delegates, Prof. M. A. Jull, Macdonald College; M. C. Kirkpatrick, Frenchtown, N.J.; A. J. Phillips Purdue, University, Lafayette, Ind.; H. Clyde Knandel, State College, Penn.; Leslie Card, University of Illinois, Urbana; N. E. Chapman, University of Minnesota, St. Paul; W. A. Lippincott, Davis, Cal.; James E. Rice, Connell Ithaca, N.Y.; H. R. Lewis, Davisville, R.I.; Harry H. Kaupp, Purdue; J. C. Graham, Massachussets Agricultural College, Amherst, Mass.; W. C. Thompson, New Brunswick, N.J.

Canadian delegates—F. C. Elford, Ottawa; W. A. Brown, Ottawa; W. R. Graham, Guelph; Rev. Bro. Liguori, La Tappe, Que.; Prof. M. C. Herner, Winnipeg; Prof. E. A. Lloyd, Vancouver.

HARVESTERS IN GREAT DEMAND

No Man Need Be Stranded in the West If He Wants Work—More Men Needed

MONTREAL, August 25. Canadian Press. — In connection with the recent statements widely circulated in the press on both sides of the Atlantic, that a number of the British harvest labourers brought out to Western Canada have been unable to find employment, and are stranded in the west, without work or means of livelihood, the following telegram was received here yesterday from Colonel J. S. Dennis, Chief Commissioner for Colonization and Natural Resources for the Canadian Pacific Railway:

"There is no foundation for the statement made that British harvesters have been refused employment, and are destitute in the West. All men brought forward by us to date have been placed. Articles published in the Winnipeg and other western papers to-day contain the statement by the Superintendent of the Government Labor Bureau that all men have been taken care of. Some trouble was caused owing to delay in harvesting operations, but all of the men wishing work will be taken care of."

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25. Canadian Press. — "No man who wants to work in the harvest fields need remain idle in Winnipeg because he is broke," declared Major L. F. Howard, Superintendent of the Dominion Employment Service, yesterday, in commenting on the harvest situation. "All such men who are actually desirous of going to work are being provided with food ,lodging and transportation by the Imigration authorities and the railways."

"We still have calls for thousands of harvesters from Alberta and Saskatchewan," Major Howard added, "and the influx of men from Great Britain and Eastern Canada has about ceased, so that if any danger exists, it is one of a shortage of workers rather than a surplus."

EDMONTON, August 25. — Canadian Press. — For the first time in the history of Alberta harvesting a number of farm hands have been sent into the Peace River and Grand Prairie country by the government employment bureau. The big crops in the north this year have necessitated outside help in the way of harvesting.

It is said that every effort is being made by Federal and State governments in the commonwealth to make their exhibition the oustanding one so far as the colonies are concerned.

MINES MAY BE FLOODED IF MAINTENANCE MEN GO OUT WITH STRIKERS

Strike on September 1 Now Seems Certain and Mine Officials Have Ordered Firemen and Pumpers Out Also.

MORE DISCUSSIONS.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 25. — Canadian Press. — Representatives of the anthracite mine workers in the United States yesterday took the last step necessary to shut down the mines on September 1. Though news came to them from Washington that Governor Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, with President Coolidge's support would seek a last word before the impending struggle in the anthracite region, Scale Committees from the three union districts authorized by unanimous vote the issuance of "work suspension" orders, and walked out of their meeting room to take the trains which last night were carrying most of them to their homes.

Their officials however said that any request which Governor Pinchot might extend for further conference probably would be accepted. In this view members of the operators' policy committee, which was still held in the city also joined. The employers would refuse no request for discussion, it was said, however slight might be the prospect for a settlement.

Phillip Murray, vice-president of the United Mine Workers, and Thos Kennedy, C. J. Golden, and Rinaldo Cappelain, presidents of the anthracite districts, met with the union scale committees and reported upon the fruitless negotiations. There were "18 miners from the pit," as prescribed by union law, delegates for their fellow workers, on hand to listen. At the end of three hours of executive session, the miners trooped silently away.

"We are writing to-night a new set of rules which will govern the suspension of work on the part of our members that automatically comes about September 1st," Mr. Murray said "It will be printed Sunday night or Monday morning, and will be mailed on Tuesday from somepoint in the anthracite region in order to reach all of our locals by August 31.

"For the first time, the rules will also call for all of our members who are employed as firemen, pumpmen, engineers and maintenance men to cease work when the miners go out. These men have hitherto been left in service in order to keep the mines from flooding and caving in. The scale committee, however, authorized the international and district officials to complete any satisfactory arrangement with the operators if the operators desire to continue the employment of our members in such capacity, which will have that result."

The mention of the continuance in service of enough anthracite workers to prevent the incalculable damage that would result to the mines from flooding and cave-in, covered a point to which observers attached great importance and which operatbrs and the union appeared to be staging an entirely new controversy. A. B. Jessup, for the operators' policy committee, said that past relationship between the union and the employers, had set up precedents by which the men should be held to their tasks, regardless of suspension orders to the rank and file of miners. He indicated, however, that if the union was obdurate, some sort of special conference might be asked by the operators to make the issue clear.

Insistent suggestion was made to the miners' contingent yesterday concerning the prospect of local or general strikes of bituminous miners during the progress of the expected anthracite suspension.

International officers and all responsible spokesmen for the union carefully refrained from making any public statement that such outbreaks might be looked for.

COOLIDGE SUPPLIES AN AVENUE OF MEDIATION IN ANTHRACITE CRISIS

Has Appointed Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania to Act As Special Mediator Between the Factions.

GRAVE EMERGENCY.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press).—An avenue through which anthracite miners and operators of the United States might come together in further effort to reach a settlement of their existing differences was provided by President Coolidge yesterday in the designation of Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania as special mediator.

Maintaining the conviction that suspension of anthracite coal production Sept 1 would be suicidal to both employees and operator the government's action was said to be designed to furnish a medium through which conciliatory influences on both sides might operate without damage to the strategic position or the dignity, of either.

After a luncheon conferences at the White House, Governor Pinchot returned to Harrisburg with the announced intention of getting in touch with representatives of the miner and operator groups. It was stated that no definite proposal had been evolved at the White House meeting and that Mr. Pinchot's first move probably would be to ascertain whether a basis for further discussion exist, despite the unequivocal tenor of the statements issued at the conclusion of the Atlantic City conference.

Describing the relations of Governor Pinchot to the Federal authorities as "solely co-operative," a spokesman for the president pointed out that his selection was a particularly happy one because the anthracite fields are located almost exclusively in Pennsylvania and because of the unusual legislative safeguards thrown around the industry by four state laws. Possibility of the Pennsylvania statutes licensing mine operations being used in the effort to reach a settlement as discounted by Mr Pinchot, however.

Chairman Hammond, of the coal commission which has been the designated agency of the United States government in dealing with the anthracite crisis participated in the White House meeting, and, it was announced later will co-operate heartily with Governoh Pinchot. The commission will furnish data and information bearing on the subject to the Pennsylvania executive, an administration spokesman said, and will hold itself in readiness to assist to a further extent if it services are desired.

It was said at the White House the injection of Governor Pinchot into the picture should not be taken as a change in the policy of non-intervention hitherto followed. The government still holds, it was added, that a cessation of production in the anthracite industry would be a folly impossible of consummation by sensible men.

The optimistic view of the coal crisis which has marked the government's attitude, since the disruption of the bi-party discussion was more pronounced to-night. A review of the situation, made public by the coal

THE SUMMER CAMP.

The Peterborough Health Association is to be congratulated upon the splendid work accomplished at its summer camp at Jackson Park for children of sub-normal health, which closed to-day after being in successful operation since the last week in June.

225 children in all were looked after at the camp this summer and the days spent in the beautiful surroundings and with the nourishing food that was provided have left their stamp upon almost every youngster who was a guest of the Association.

Gains in weight in most cases were reported and the children have shown a considerable improvement in health, the setting up they have received as a result of their experience strengthening them for the rigors of the long winter that lies just around the corner.

The summer camp at the Peterborough Health Association is a community asset of great value, and it is satisfactory to know that the results achieved this year have been such as to encourage the Association in carrying on with its fine work.

Those who have assisted in any way in promoting the success of the camp have the reward of knowing that over 200 youngsters have had a happy time during the hot weather and have been built up in health as a result of their sojourn at Jackson Park.

THE DEADY FEMALE.

If Kipling's choice phrase "The female of the species is more deadly than the male," were true two decades ago, how much more true it is to-day, says the London Advertiser. Woman whom poets have been wont to picture as the sweet, the tender, the angelic, has been behaving herself in a rather "deadly" manner of late, to judge by the numerous accounts of fatal brawls in which she assumes the star role.

Perhaps it is due to her new freedom which all the intellectuals are so fond of discussing that every morning newspaper recounts in glaring detail the latest escapades of daring female crimesters. In olden days connubial infidelity and matrimonial difficulties were the prime sources of female crime. Since then woman has launched into a broader sphere which takes in robbery, violence, murder and arson, if stories from Detroit and other American metropolises are to be accepted as true.

What subtle changes in woman's nerve and hand and eye have taken place that she should have developed such alarming adeptness with the pistol when practicing on offending males Time was when the average woman would run at the sight of a gun and would as quickly twist a mouse's tail as she would touch one. But recently many of the gentler sex have shown no hesitation in taking at least some of their new freedom with automatics, to the demise of a number of men who had become the objects of their wrath. Rarely too they fail to hit some vital spot. They shoot to kill. Gone is the time when a woman with a gun was more likely to hit objects at which she didn't aim than the marks at which she sighted. She now gets her man with the certainty of a movie cowboy.

IS IT ANY WONDER?

Is it any wonder that there are motor-car accidents?

Wednesday Cobourg was the mecca of hundreds of motorists from all parts of Eastern Ontario and the Kingston road and all the main arteries of traffic leading into it were black with automobiles.

If ever there was a time for careful driving it was on this occasion with literally thousands of cars on the highways.

Yet a group of car owners discussing the trip were overheard giving their experiences about as follows:

"At one stage I was travelling 65 miles an hour", says Motorist No. 1.

"Well, we did fifty-five for a while", came back the second driver.

"We made the trip from Cobourg in a hour and four minutes", boasted No. 3.

"It took us just under the hour", the fourth declared.

"None of that speed for me, I like to let her ramble along at a steady 35 or 40 miles an hour", confessed the more conservative fifth.

Can you imagine that?

The speed limit is 25 miles an hour in the country.

Yet these drivers admit that they drove at a rate close to a mile a minute, and some of them even faster than that on a day when the traffic was abnormally heavy and when every instinct should have counselled more than the usual caution and care.

A mile a minute on a heavily travelled highway with drivers of all shades of skill and experience cluttering up the road.

Is it any wonder there are motor-car accidents?

THE KINGSTON TRAGEDY.

Evidence at the inquest into the death of four Kingston young people who were drowned as the result of the capsizing of two boats in which they were crossing a lake, indicate that the accident was due to the inexperience of the victims.

They ventured forth in punts that they were unable to handle in the wind, one boat was swamped, the occupants of the other upset it in their excitement and four out of the eight passengers in the two cr[illegible] their lives.

It is a miracle indeed that there are not more of such accidents, especially in this district where the canoe is largely used and where inexperienced paddlers persist in taking chances with their own lives and those of others who are foolish enough to entrust themselves to their care.

In the Kingston tragedy the boats used were small punts, not very stable craft, judging by what happened to them and yet probably more substantial than a canoe.

If an accident of this kind is possible with a flat-bottomed punt it does not require a very strong imagination to visualize the chance that people take who boldly embark in a canoe with only a hazy idea of how to handle it.

Knowledge of the art of swimming might have saved some of the unfortunate victims, although one of them lost his life because of his confidence in his ability to swim to shore.

Those who were able to reach and cling to the over-turned boats were saved, the non-swimmers who could not get hold of the over-turned craft and the swimmer who took a chance on trying to swim to safety were not saved.

There is a lesson in the tragedy for all Peterborough people who visit river or lake.

ALBERTA COAL.

The visit of Mr. Howard Stutchbury, Trade Commissioner for Alberta, has increased local interest in the fuel situation, and those who heard Mr. Stutchbury speak yesterday were impressed with the fact that Alberta coal is of good quality and that there is enough of it to supply all Ontario's fuel wants.

The fly in the ointment is the cost of transportation.

If that can be lowered sufficiently to allow the Alberta product to enter the market here on a competitive basis there is no occasion for further worry as to a possible fuel famine in this province.

The whole situation hinges upon the question of freight rates.

They will have to be low enough to allow Alberta coal to compete with the American article for it may be taken for granted that there will be competition from the anthracite operators just as soon as coal from Western Canada begins to makes it appearance in quantities in Ontario.

The American mine owners have no desire to give up their Canadian market and much as they hate to cut prices they would have no hesitation in doing so once they are convinced that their product has a serious rival.

It becomes necessary then if Alberta coal is to be given a fair chance, that it should be laid down here at a figure that will permit it to meet these efforts on the part of the anthracite operators to hold the field.

That rate will have to be lower than the $9 per ton originally announced by Sir Henry Thornton, and lower even than the experimental rate of $7 per ton now in operation in the transportation of a trial lot of Alberta fuel.

The best efforts of the Ontario Government and of the municipalities of the province should be concentrated upon an attempt to secure from the railways a rate that will make the importation of coal from the Canadian West on a large scale possible.

AN AMERICAN VIEW.

Virtue has had a small temporary setback. In the Toronto Police Court Judge Denton holds that the Ontario Betting Information act is invalid. The Dominion Parliament, in the Criminal Code, has dealt with the publication of betting information as a matter of criminal law. Can the Provincial Legislature deal with the same subject in an attempt to improve that law? I think not. This is not a case of the Dominion occupying part of the field, leaving the other part open for the Province to occupy. It is rather a case of the Dominion dealing fully with the subject, but requiring proof of intention before a conviction can be had, and the Legislature saying in effect by their act that proof of such intention shall not be required. The field has, I think, been covered, and the Dominion legislation must prevail.

The case is to be appealed, the Ferguson Government taking the same ground as its predecessor, the Drury Government, whose Attorney General is the author of the act. A strong body of opinion held that the statute exceeded the constitutional power of the Legislature. Before its enactment the Attorney General must have shared that opinion or have been in great doubt, for he drafted a Federal bill to the same effect, and had it introduced into the House of Commons at Ottawa. It slipped through, but the Senate changed it so essentially that the provincial law was passed. Evidently, the Dominion Criminal Code ought to be mended. What could be more reactionary than to insist on proof of an intention to commit an offense before convicting the alleged offender? This is no matter of ordinary innocence and guilt. The Ontario Legislature has taken high moral and economic ground. It abominates betting on horse races and everything connected with it, unless the betting is done on Ontario tracks and the Treasury gets its percentage. Thus, both the soundest morality and protective political economy cause the good to hope that the higher courts will sustain this enterprising and memorable law.

Publications given entirely to racing information are still prohibited; but, for the moment, Ontario and American papers will be permitted to publish racing news and record betting odds. Friends of vice have pretended to be puzzled by some details of the Ontario great moral revival. Grant that betting on horse races is a sin and a shame, how does news about betting odds the day before stimulate crime? Nobody in Ontario is going to lose any money betting on yesterday's races. Those who talk in this way are incapable of understanding the fine fervor of Ontario's hostility to betting save at her own protected tracks. Race track betting is an Ontario industry to be encouraged by the local government. News about the betting at pernicious, non-contributing American tracks tends to lower the Ontario moral standards of living.—New York Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The past week has made it easy for a lot of people to reconcile themselves to the fact that their summer holidays are over.

It is cynically suggested that the number of British noblemen who are marrying Montreal brides is merely another evidence of the fact that Montreal is the financial centre of the Dominion.

A despatch says that the Federal Advisory Fuel Committee is not worrying about the fuel situation. But unfortunately there are many people who have cause to worry.

There are two classes of people who are unable to buy their winter's coal now, those who can't find any coal to buy and those who can't afford to buy coal if it were available.

If the soft coal miners decided to strike in sympathy with the anthracite miners that will be hard on the public.

Trade Commissioner Stutchbury declares that Ontario will get a lower freight rate of it "hollers" enough. Let us get busy and holler.

BAKING BATTERS.

A good general rule for baking batters and doughs is to have a very moderate oven for the thinnest batters, increasing the heat as the batters thicken.

TORONTO CATTLE.

TORONTO, Aug. 25.—Drought and lack of pasture have forced Ontario farmers to ship a great many unfinished cattle during this week. There were 8,155 cattle received, 2,000 more than came in last week, and of this week's run only a few hundred were westerns. Rogers and Maybee bought for export 800 head of cattle at prices from $7.25 to $7.75, and 16 bulls at from $3.75 to $4.75. During the week 510 head have been shipped, and 400 head will be shipped today.

There have been many heavy cattle on the market this week that are not too rough and heavy for the domestic trade. They were bought by the abatoirs at a lower price, from $5.75 to $6.50. There is a market only for choice butcher steers and heifers weighing about 900 pounds. The common grades have been very dull all week. There is no market for them. Buyers will take good breedy shortkeep feeders and stockers, and milch cows and springers are in some demand. But there are about 900 head of common to be carried over until Monday.

Farmers are buying good western feeders probably because the price is low and the prospect for feed are good. It is reported that much of the western cattle are going to St. Louis and Chicago. Western cattle that arrived on the Toronto market this week are decidedly of a better grade.

With speculators taking six loads of calves for Buffalo the additional outlet was reflected in the strength of the market. Prices advanced a dollar a hundred, with tops closing at $11.50 to $12. An unusually large supply of heavy calves was sold at $6 to $9 with grassers at $3.25 to $4.

The hog market continued last week's advance, with a quarter rise on Monday, reaching $10.85 fed and watered for thick smooths. For the balance of the week prices remained stationary at this mark, with buyers predicting a slump in the near future. The premium generally paid for selects was $1.05 a hundred, making the select price $11.90. Packers talk of cutting the price of thin light unfinished hogs $4 per cwt.

This week's lamb run has been the heaviest of the season. Ten thousand and eight-seven sheep and lambs were received. The cut of $1.50 in the price of bucks announced for August 27 caused farmers to ship their bucks this week, and probably 80 per cent. of the lamb run has been buck. Farmers are buying good, but thin, lambs for feeding. With the heaviest lamb run of the season prices dropped a dollar and a half a hundred up to Wednesday, but regained a half dollar on Thursday, with light supplies. Wednesday's sales were made at $10.50 and Thursday's at $11. Culls sold from $7.50 to $9, with yearlings at $8 to $9. The sheep market finished a half dollar lower at $5 to $6 for choice handyweights. A fair inquiry developed for good breeding ewes, but the supply proves to be very meagre.

EGG MARKETS.

OTTAWA, Aug. 25.— (Canadian Press.)— The egg market is firm, with a slight advance to be noted for the higher grades at the principal receiving centres. A western Ontario heavy shipper reports the beneficial effect of the new regulations as reflected in the decided improvement in quality of receipts. Ontario track shippers are reported offering storage firsts in car lots at 36 f.o.b.

Toronto higher, extras jobbing at 39, in cartons 41, firsts 35, seconds 28. Country markets higher, demand keen.

Montreal good demand for specials at 41 to 42, extras 37 to 38, firsts 31 to 32. A lot of specials reported sold for export at prices said to be equal 42 f.o.b. Montreal.

Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta markets unchanged. Car of live poultry reported leaving Brooks, Alta., to-day for Montreal.

British Columbia jobbers quoting country shippers extras 40, jobbing extras 44, firsts 40, seconds 35, storage firsts 36, live poultry easy, unchanged.

CHICAGO WHEAT.

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.— (Canadian Press.)—Predictions of frost in parts of the northwest and reports of lower temperatures in Canada brought out some extensive general buying of wheat Tuesday and the market finished at net gains of 1 1-2 to 2 1-4c. with Dec. 106 5-8 to 3-4 to 106 3-4 and May 111 3-4 to 111 7-8; corn was 3-8 down to 1 5-8 up, oats 1-4 lower to 3-4 higher and provisions advanced 10 to 20c.

WINNIPEG CATTLE.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press.) — Receipts 918 cattle, 456 hogs and 214 sheep. Best grades of killing steers were steady on yesterday's market with the common kind 50 cents lower than a week ago, while butcher cows are from 50c. to $1 lower. Stockers and feeders fairly steady.

The hog market was unsettled with peakers bidding 25 to 50 cents lower yesterday morning, with no sales established at noon. Sheep and lambs continue steady, a few top lambs asking $11.50.

SICKENING HEADACHES ENDED BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Effect was splendid when she tried this Fruit Medicine

East Ship Harbour, N.S.

"For years, I was a dreadful sufferer from Constipation and Headaches, and I was miserable in every way. Nothing in the way of medicines seemed to help me and I was almost discouraged.

Western Wheat is of a Lower Grade.

WINNIPEG, Aug. 25.— (Canadian Press.)—Number one Northern closed on the Winnipeg grain exchange yesterday at a premium of 17 1-2 cents over the October price, and this premium was maintained in spite of an advance of 3 3-8 cents in the futures yesterday. October wheat last year was selling around $1.01 at this time. To-day it closed at $1.04 3-8, No. 1 Northern closing at $1.21 7-8.

The export trade at the seaboard is becoming alarmed at poor grading of the new crop to date, it is said in grain circles, and any of the exporters who have sold No. 1 Northern in advance are now anxious to buy back their committments. This brought about the advance of 4 1-8 cents in No. 1 yesterday.

It is the belief of the local trade that there will be a big premium on the top grades of wheat for most of the season unless later returns from the threshing show a great improvement over those at present coming in.

Mr. Wilson has passed the 80th milestone by four or five years but enjoys a trip as much as many a man half his age.

Sudden Death.

The death of Mrs. J. C. Scripture of Colborne from a hemorrhage to the brain, has removed a lady who was held in very high regard. Mrs. Scripture before her marriage was Miss Gretta Waite. She is survived by her husband and by two sons, Messrs. S. D. and C. S. Scripture of Colborne. Also by three sisters, Miss B. E. Bretnell and Mrs. G. H. Brown of Brighton and Mrs. Nettie Murphy, Edville. Two brothers also survive, Ruben Waite of Edville and Edgar Waite of Belleville.

Two By-Laws.

Trenton electors on Monday voted upon two by-laws. They decided in favor of deeding over to the Benedict-Proctor Company the building which they now occupy in the town of Trenton. 274 electors voting for and 69 against.

As to the spending of $70,000 towards the erection of a new school on College street, the majority of ratepayers apparently considered the town was not in a position at the present time to make so large an expenditure, hence the adverse vote, 120 for and 178 against.

Died of Heart Failure.

On Tuesday of last week, William Thomas Fleming came into town and called on a number of his customers. He is a traveller for the firm of Davis and Co., Montreal. On Wednesday he went down to Trenton and drove from there to Consecon. At tht latter place he was suddenly seized with a heart attack and was taken to a doctor's office, where he shortly afterwards passed away. He was a son of the late Rev. Wm. Fleming of Shannonville and is survived by his widow, a daughter of the late R. A. Fullerton of Shannonville, a daughter and a son.

Extend Telephone Line.

Mr. D. S. Austin, proprietor of the Massey-Brighton Telephone Co., is now busy extending the lines of the Frankford Division which he recently purchased from the Belle Telephone Company. Poles and wires are to be erected, it is understood for a distance of some four or five miles in concession 5 and 6, Sidney township with the object of serving some forty families, who ar expected to become new subscribers and several of whom have desired telephone service for years.

Ministers' Bad Fall.

Rev. F. E. Malott, Belleville, a well-known Bay of Quinte conference clergyman, suffered a fall from his bicycle, when it came in collision with the side of an automobile in Belleville on Tuesday afternoon. He struck on his shoulder, and suffered considerable shock. He was taken home by a motorist.

Baseball Nine Had Trip.

On Tuesday Belleville's baseball team were taken for a boat trip on the Bay of Quinte by Commodore Earle McQueen on the Yacht Senora. The party proceeded to Trenton and Twelve O'Clock Point, the well-known summer resort at the entrance to the Murray Canal. At Trenton the party had lunch, returning to Belleville early in the evening after enjoying a very pleasant trip.

Too Many Detours.

The several detours on the Provincial Highway between Oshawa and Toronto are coming in for considerable unfavourable comment. These detours in the vicinity of Oshawa are mostly over the base line. It is also pointed out that the Provincial Highway is in need of being dragged to remove the parallel ruts, which are a detriment to satisfactory motor traffic.

Flew to Oshawa.

An aeroplane passed westward on Sunday conveying Mr. C. E. Wilmot of Napanee, who was going to Oshawa, where he was the guest of Mr. William Davidson. Mr. Wilmot, who is a flyer of repute landed on the Athletic Park, Oshawa.

Funerals.

The attendance on Friday afternoon at the funeral of Mr. Harry Burkwell at Elizabethville was large. Rev. H. A. Bunt of Canton, formerly of Roseneath, conducted the services which took place from George's funeral parlours at Port Hope.

Rev. F. W. White of Welcome conducted the funeral of the late Mr. George Best, which took place on Friday afternoon, from his late residence Willow Beach, Lakeshore Road, to Welcome cemetery.

Holidaying at Consecon.

Rev. E. Harston, Woodville, a former pastor of the Camborne Methodist circuit and Mrs. Harston are holidaying at Consecon. Mr. Harston has been supplying the pulpit of Simcoe street Methodist church Oshawa, for a couple fo Sundays.

Crawford—McDenike.

The marriage took place very quietly on Saturday, August 18, at Hazenmead, the home of Mr. F. M. Field, K.C. and Mrs. Field here, of the latters' sister, Mrs. May McDenike of Colborne, and Dr. Hamilton Crawford of Marmora. Rev. W. A. Bremner, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Cobourg, conducted the ceremony.

Elliott—Vandervoort.

The marriage took place recently at Frankord of Miss Emma Vandervoort, daughter of Mrs. William Vandervoort of that place to Mr. Leslie Elliott of Toronto. Rev. I. Snell conducted the ceremony. The bride wore a tailored suit of blue with hat to match. The attendants were Mr. and Mrs. D. Vandervoort. The bride and groom left to visit friends at Colborne and Cobourg en route to their new home in Toronto.

Clayton—Gartshore.

At Brighton on August 14, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Gartshore, their daughter, Maude, was married to Mr. Lewis J. Clayton of Bowmanville. Rev. Mr. Best of Bowmanville officiated. The bride wore cream canton crepe and veil, with orange blossoms, and was given away by her ather. She wore also the groom's gift, a pearl necklace, and carried sweetheart roses. Miss Olson of Bowmanville was bridesmaid and Mr. Mason was groomsman. Mr. and Mrs. Clayton will reside in Bowmanville.

Burrows—Fullforth.

The marriage is announced to have taken place in St. Mary Magdalene church, London, England, in July of Mr. Milford Burrows of Foxboro, Ont., to Miss Ethel Fullforth of London. After a honeymoon spent in Devonshire they were expected to leave for Foxboro to visit at the home of the groom's mother before going to Clearfield, Penn., to make their home.

MRS. BUDGE SO WEAK COULD HARDLY STAND

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health

River Desert, Que.—"I used to have a severe pain in my side. I would be unable to walk fast and could not stand for any length of time to do my ironing or washing, but I would have to lie down to get relief from the pain. I had this for about two years, then a friend told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she had had good results. I certainly got good results from it, too, as the last time I had a sore side was last May and I have not had it since. I am also glad of having good nursing for my baby, and I think it is your medicine that helped me in this way."—Mrs. L. V. BUDGE, River Desert, Quebec.

If you are suffering from the tortures of a displacement, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness, or a pain in the side, you should lose no time in trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Baby Cutting Teeth Was Very Sick With Diarrhoea

When the baby starts to cut its teeth, especially during the hot weather, then is the time that the poor mother is under the stress and strain of great anxiety.

There is no remedy so safe and effectual, for the teething complaints of infants, as is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, no remedy that has had the endorsation of so many Canadian mothers during the past 78 years it has been on the market.

Mrs. C. W. Meyers, Clanwilliam, Man., writes:—"My baby girl was very sick with diarrhoea when she was cutting her teeth. I tried several different remedies, but nothing did her any good. She was getting worse when my mother sent me out a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. I gave her a few doses and the next day she was much better, and in a couple more days she was as well as ever.

Now I always keep 'Dr. Fowler's' in the house and recommend it to all those troubled with diarrhoea."

GREAT FIRE 1875 IS HERE RECALLED

Whole of Millbrook's Business Section Was Then Practically Wiped Out.

Probably very few residents of Millbrook are now aware that the original intention was to have the G. T. R. station located north on Tupper street near Dawson's Crossing. This idea was abandoned when Mr. William Sowden, whose name will always be connected with Millbrook history, gave the land upon which the depot now stands on condition that the building be at the west end of the village, his object being to have it near his own property.

Tupper street was evidently intended to be the main street of the village, and at the time of the "great fire" in 1875 had a number of business places, all of which were destroyed by the flame. The railway station being built on King street probably had a good deal to do with making that the chief thoroughfare.

The origin of the fire has always remained a mystery. Ford's circus was in town at the time and suspicion was cast upon its employees, for some reason. The proprietors afterwards sent $90 relief money, stating that the sum would have been larger only they resented the fact that any blame in the matter was laid at their door. A firm called "Mundle and Mains," tailors employing a number of sewing girls, and also selling material for men's clothing, had a store where the barber shop of H. Nattrass is now, and in this locality the fire began.

Business firms located here at the time of the fire, which wiped out practically the whole business section, included such familiar names as: Wood & Kells, L. S. Clarry, Howell Bros., Archie Armstrong, J. Beatty & A. Fee, Carveth, Coombe & Richards, T. B. Collins, Dr. Turner, Sr., John and Robert Deyell, John Fitzgerald, Powell's Bakery, A. Ferguson, William Vance, John Raper, A. Leach and others who will doubtless be recalled by older residents as memory travels back.

CHOOSE CANDIDATE.

Premier Taschereau, Hon. J. E. Perreault, Hon. Jacob Nicol, Hon. W. G. Mitchell, and E. W. Tobin, M.P. for Richmond and Wolfe, will be present and speak at the meeting which will follow the convention.

Premier Taschereau stated that the date of the Richmond meeting had not yet been set.

FIRST CHURCH IN CAVAN TOWNSHIP

Was Log Structure Built By Rev. Thompson, An Anglican Minister.

It is interesting to hear the fact recalled, as the Reunion is planned, and reminiscences of early days come to mind, that the first clergyman of any denomination in the township was Rev. Mr. Thompson, grandfather of the late Mrs. John Hutchison, of the 7th Line, Cavan. Coming out as a Church of England missionary, he built the first church, a log structure situated, as far as can be learned, on the corner of the lot, next the road, below where Cavanville school now stands. Struck by lightning and burned, it was replaced by a frame building on the hill, a little south of where the present St. John's church is located. The frame building was torn down when the brick church came into use in 1865. Old Boys and Old Girls from North Cavan, returning for the Reunion will share the general affection for, and pride in, the home church; and indeed it is doubtful if there could be found in any other rural community as beautifully situated, well-kept, and well-furnished, a church as St. John's, Ida.

The first rector, Rev. Samuel Armour, served the parish for twenty years, from 1833 to 1853, and a beautiful memorial window to himself and his wife, Margaret Douglas, who died in '73, has been placed by the family at the end of the chancel; it illustrates, "The Good Shepherd," and adds greatly to the beauty of the interior of the church.

Following Rev. Mr. Armour, the late Venerable Archdeacon Allen was rector for fifty-two years, his son, Rev. Canon Allen, being the third to occupy that position in the parish, taking up the duties upon his father's death in 1905.

When the parish celebrated its 100th anniversary in 1919, the congregation of St. John's installed a fine pipe-organ, the inscription reading, "To the Glory of God, and in thankful commemoration of his mercies during 100 years, 1818-1919, 'One generation shall praise Thy works to another.'"

On Easter Day, 1906, the congregation showed their love and appreciation of Archdeacon Allen by placing in their church a handsome brass lectern "in memory of his long and faithful ministry." Last year the sons of the late Archdeacon further added to the chancel by erecting a beautifully-carved oak reredos "in loving memory of Jessie W., wife of the Venerable Archdeacon Allen, late Rector of this parish."

The oldest member of the congregation at St. John's is Mrs. Henry Sisson, of North Cavan, who has worshipped there for over sixty years, and whose husband was People's Warden for twenty-five years, a tablet to his memory being placed on the south wall of the church. Mrs. Sisson, now in her eighty-third year, can recall many interesting reminiscences of early days in the township, and remembers attending the frame church on the hill before the present brick building was erected 67 years ago. She has in her home a bookcase which belonged to the first rector, Rev. Samuel Armour, and which her husband purchased at the sale of household effects after the rector's death in 1843; it has been used since as a cupboard for holding dishes.

The first cemetery in use in the township was that in which St. John's church stands ,other denominations burying there for a time because, in those early years, no separate burial grounds had been provided. Probably the oldest tombstone in the cemetery dates back to October 1st, 1826, nearly one hundred years ago. It is in memory of John McCarrell, aged 50 and bears the quaint epitaph:

"Dear wife and children, be content,
Mourn not for me, I'm gone to rest,
In Heaven with angels to be blest."

A little grandson, aged six weeks, son of John and Margaret McCarrell, who died on August 15th, 1847, is also commemorated on the stone but the epitaph was not decipherable. Inquiry so far has failed to reveal any families of this name now residing in the township.

The Allen family plot is in this cemetery, the late Dr. Norman Allen, who was born in Millbrook, January 2nd, 1865, and was the youngest son of the late Venerable Archdeacon Allen, being the last member of the family to be interred in the vault. Dr. Allen's death, under rather tragic circumstances, occurred in Toronto last fall.

LETTERS FROM FORMER MILLBROOK RESIDENTS

BROTHER BECAME MULTIMILLIONAIRE.

Toronto, Aug. 16, 1923.

J. N. McGill, Secy.,
Old Boys' Reunion.

Sir:

I received your invitation some time ago but have been very busy. However, I shall attend on Saturday, August 25. I shall motor up and remain there until Monday evening. I have friends in Millbrook, Mrs. James Fee, whom I used to help farm 40 years ago, for it was on July 14, 1883, when I dropped off the train in Millbrook in company with my brother, Arthur Letts, whom God called home on May 18. I enclose an article re his life as appeared in The Toronto Evening Telegram of this year, and were he alive he would be pleased to be with you for in his life he often spoke of Millbrook. He was helping John Martin on the farm on the Fallis line in July, 1883, but went from there to Toronto, etc., which the enclosed clipping will explain.

The writer's first work in Canada was done for Edward Lawson, on the Zion Line, in July, 1883, and often since as I pass the little Methodist Church when motoring past there, I have gone into the churchyard, God's sacred acre, and in reverence to many dead friends who long ago have passed away, I have offered a silent prayer for them and their families, for I spent many happy days around Millbrook and Cavan. Early impressions are long lasting and the Rev. Mr. Allen, a grand old man, who used to preach at the Marsh Church, who God has called from his labors long years ago, I understand, his son is now incumbent in place of his venerable father.

I sincerely trust the Ruler of the Universe will provide fine weather and that you may have a real good time, and that many reunions of friends and parents will have pleasant results. Again wishing you every success,

Yours very truly,
F. C. LETTS.

(Ed. Arthur Letts died on May 18, 1923, in Los Angeles, leaving a fortune of about twenty-five millions.)

NUCLEUS OF MILLBROOK.

A tradition that is as yet unverified but occasionally met with, is to the effect that the first few log houses built as the forest was hewn down and clearings made, with the first stopping place, forming the nucleus from which the village of Millbrook grew, was originally called "Village Inn." In time as population increased, a store or two began business, and a mill was built beside the brook, the name "Millbrook" was evolved.

Others have it that there is a "Millbrook" in England and some of the early settlers coming from that place, or its neighborhood, brought the name with them from the Old Country.

MARRIED BELLE OF MILLBROOK

Weyburn, Sask.,
August 13th, 1923.

To the Secretary, Committee of Management, Reunion of Old Boys of Cavan and Millbrook, Millbrook, Ont.

My Dear Sir:

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your kind invitation to attend the Old Boys' Reunion of Cavan and Millbrook, and to express my regrets at not being able to enjoy with you the association of the many Old Boys who no doubt will be with you, as well as the residents of the good old town.

I have known your town ever since June, 1872, when I went there as a child of the parsonage. Two of the last three years of my education was received there, the thought of which bring memories of such names as Goggin and Davey as teachers, and of schoolmates as Hetherington, Pendrie, Allan, Tooke, Eyres, Gardiner, Doak, Edwards, Hunter, Needler and many others. This was in the old school building on Union street.

In 1874 I left the town but returned in 1890 and was a resident continuously for 32 years until 1912 when I came to the great and glorious west.

It was my privilege during those years to participate in the business life in association with your late esteemed citizen—Wesley Walsh. In your municipal life as a member of your council and for two years enjoyed the highest office in your gift. In your educational life as a member of the school board. In your church life as a member of the Methodist Church, in all its departments but more especially in its Sunday school and in the various interdenominational work of the religious life of the town. I am quite confident that I was not a star in any departments of the town's life but it is a satisfaction to know that "I did my best."

In 1884 I had the good fortune to marry the finest girl in the town at that time and 28 years of happy family life was spent there.

The town was the birthplace of that good wife and her home for over 50 years, and believe me it was an awful wrench to pull her up and bring her to this country—sunny Saskatchewan. Then it was the birthplace of all our children and where they received their full education with two exceptions, who completed at higher schools than the town afforded. This brings grateful memories of the late Miss E. Hetherington and Miss A. Pendrie and of Miss S. Dean and Mr. Hampton who still live to grace your citizenship, enjoying a well-earned rest from long and exceedingly faithful labor. I would enjoy being with you on this occasion to say—among other things—thank you to these two to whom we owe so much for the part they played in the educations of the kids.

We are very conscious that Millbrook is not in the least indebted to us and gratefully acknowledge our indebtedness to the good old town. While memory lasts we will all cherish the most kindly remembrances of the old town and its loved citizens and when opportunity affords will be more than pleased to visit the hallowed spot and greet the kind friends of yore. I expect son Wesley will be there to represent the family. With very best wishes for a successful Reunion. I am,

Sincerely,
R. W. CLARKE.

commission gave in detail the influences which official observers considered to be working for ultimate settlement. These included the certain loss of valuable markets and the possible extinction of anthracite as a necessary fuel, from the operators' standpoint, and the reduction of employment during the coming winter with the possibility of extended depression, from that of the miners.

A tie-up of hard coal production, the commission said, while not sufficient to warrant "panicky" forebodings, would constitute an emergency which would warrant the exercise of every federal authority to supply the consumer. The statement gave latest statistics on existing and potential stocks of substitute fuel to show that with federal aid in distribution, every normal demand could be met.

STORY OF JOHN DEYELL FIRST ACTUAL SETTLER IN TOWNSHIP OF CAVAN

Came From County Monaghan, Ireland, in 1816 And Settled On Farm Now Occupied By Mrs. David Deyell.

A HARDY PIONEER.

The first actual settler in Cavan Township was John Deyell who came from County Monaghan in Ireland in 1816 and settled on the farm now occupied by Mrs. David Deyell, whose husband recently deceased was a grandson of the hardy pioneer. The latter, braving the severe toil and hardships of the early settlers' life, cleared the land which is still owned, and worked, by the fourth generation of Deyell's in direct descent, and which is situated less than a mile south of Centreville upon what is now known as the Provincial Highway. Married in Ireland to Margaret Lancashire Mr. Deyell's family numbered four sons and four daughters, and in his 95th year his descendants then living, were 74 grandchildren and 56 great-grandchildren. His wife predeceased him, but John Deyell himself lived until 1887, passing away in his 104th year.

Mr. Deyel assisted a Mr. Wilmot in making the first survey o. Cavan, and part of South Monaghan, and had the honor of naming these two townships, though his intention was that the one now called "Cavan" shou'd have been "Monaghan" after the county in Ireland from which he came. Somehow the names were reversed, however, probably when registration was made, and his land was recorded as being in Cavan Township. The first person born in the township, according to Mr. Deyell, was Florence McCarthy, and the first buried a Mr. Hyland. The first marriage was that of Mr. McGuire to Miss McNeil, Rev. Mr. Thompson, the first clergyman in the township, a Church of England missionary, performing the ceremony and receiving therefor the modest fee of one shilling.

The first mill for grinding corn was owned by a Mr. Thorne, but Mr. Deyell, who for years had carried his grist upon his back through the woods to Port Hope to be ground, erected the first grist and saw-mill in the township at what is now called Millbrook on the site where later Needler's large flour mill stood, and where since its destruction by fire some years ago, the chopping-mill and saw-mill owned by Attwool and Sheppard now stand. Mr. Deyell procured a boulder from the field and got a stone-cutter to dress it down as a mill-stone.

The first school-house, for which he gave a grant of one acre of land, was built upon Mr. Deyell's farm, and he also gave the land for the Presbyterian church and cemetery at Centreville.

The first hostelry, or lodging-house, in the township was built by Mr. Deyell on his farm, the sign which hung out for nineteen years, bearing the motto which he had brought from Ireland, and which he consistently reflected in his life and conduct, "Live, and Let Live." So truly was this axiom a description of his charitable and broad-minded disposition, and so often was it upon his lips, that he came to be affectionately known as, "Old 'live and let live' Deyell."

The late Mrs. Lancashire, of Millbrook, was the eldest daughter of John Deyell's eldest son, Robert, and her daughter, Mrs. E. Whyte, is the eldest living grandchild. Her son Dr. B. C. Whyte, now of Saranac Lake, N. Y., is a great-grandson, and his little daughter and son, Nancy and Geoffrey, are great-great-grandchildren. Mr. Robert Deyell, of Centreville, is a grandson, Mrs. J. R. Eakins, of Millbrook a granddaughter, and there are a number of great-grandchildren in Cavan and South Monaghan including the families of Mr. Robert, and the late Mr David Deyell.

Other hardy pioneers who came from Ireland and settled in Cavan Township, and whose axes wrought a mighty change within a short time, included such names as Stewart, McCamus, Swain, Dawson, Alexander, Graham and others. The descendants of many of these early settlers still reside upon the land cleared by their forefathers. The first mentioned, John Stewart, came from Ireland in 1817, taking up and on what is now the 5th Line, Cavan and living until September, 1877, his death occurring in his 95th year. His son, Johnston Stewart, was well-known in Millbrook and vicinity, caving here for Peterborough about fifteen years ago. During his residence on the family homestead the first chair made in Cavan Township was in his home, and was quite a curiosity in its way. George Bonner now owns and works the old Stewart farm. Arthur Graham, the first of his line to settle here came in 1819, and Robert McCamus in 1920. His 100 acres on the 2nd Line Cavan, is now occupied by a grandson William McCamus, and his brother J. L. McCamus the present reeve of Cavan, is another grandson.

The late Mrs. Lancashire, of Millbrook, was the daughter of John Deyell's eldest son, Robert, and her daughter, Mrs. E. Whyte, is the eldest living grandchild. Her son, Dr. B. C. Whyte, of Saranac Lake, is a great grandson, and his little daughter and son, Nancy and Geoffrey, are great-great-grandchildren. Mr. Robert Deyell, of Centreville, is also a grandson, and his children, Robert, Archie, Esther, Jessie and Ruth, are great-grandchildren. Mrs. J. R. Eakins, of Millbrook, is a granddaughter, and the family of the late Mr. David Deyell, who reside on the homestead, Douglas, Davina, Margaret, Bernice, Shirley, Virginia and Ruth are great-grandchildren. Mrs. T. B. Collins and his sister, Miss Annie Armstrong, of Millbrook, are granddaughters, and Mrs. Collins' children, Miss Mamie and Mr. Howard, Millbrook, Mr. Walter Collins, of Kitchener and Mrs. W. Lamprey, of Vancouver, B.C., are great-grandchildren. Mr Walter Collins' son, Robert, and his two daughters, Barbara and Francis, and Mrs. Lamprey's little son and daughter, Jack and Patricia, are great-grandchildren. Mr. Joseph Armstrong, of Cavan, is also a great-grandchild, and his son, Mr. Reg. Armstrong, a great-great-grandson, while his little son, Joseph, is a great-great-great-grandchild. Amongst other great-great-grandchildren in Cavan are the family of the late Mr. Henry Armstrong, Mrs. S. S. Staples, Gerald, Alfred, Hazel, Helena and Isabelle.

SCHOOL IS CALLED MONDAY AT 9 A.M.

Old Boys And Old Girls to Meet In Old Classes.

The decision to have school called for the "Old Boys and Old Girls" at 9 a.m. on Monday, August 27th, will doubtless provide one of the most interesting and enjoyable features of the Reunion, giving opportunity for recalling incidents of former student days that will be tinged with considerable amusement, and possibly in some cases with sadness as well. As far as can be arranged for the intention is to have pupils seated with former deskmates, and in the old classes, though the school building is not the same. Probably to many who may be here the old red brick schoolhouse which stood on the corner where Mrs. Fee's house now is, and which was burned in 1887, the fire being of incendiary origin, would be most familiar.

Naturally there will be many vacancies either through inability to attend the Reunion, or because a Higher Roll-Call has been answered as the years have rolled away. Former teachers who have taught either in Millbrook, or vicinity, whom it is hoped to have meet the returned pupils will include ex-Principal D. Hampton, Miss Sara Dean, Misses Emma and Nellie Hetherington, (Mrs. (Dr.) Rea (Miss Lottie Hampton), Mrs. A. Smith (Miss Eva Burton), Mrs. J. W. Walsh (Miss Charlotte Payne), Mrs. J. Porter (Miss Mamie Cochrane).

As far back as can be recalled the principals of Millbrook school have been: Mr. Goggin, Mr. P. N. Davy, Mr. James Stanton, Mr. J. L. Campbell, Mr. Mills, Mr. D. Hampton, Miss Ranson, Miss M. Money, and the one engaged for next year, Miss Hazel Todd. Whether any of these, other than Mr. Hampton, will be here for the Re-union has not yet been definitely ascertained.

MEMENTO OF BALL NEW YEARS, 1869

Dr. H. A Turner Has In His Possession Invite to Jolly Function.

Dr. H. A. Turner has in his possession an invitation to a "New Year's Eve Ball," held in the Victoria Hotel, Millbrook (the present Shaw building), dating back to 1869—fifty-four years ago. The card, which is quite artistically gotten up, is stamped "Mercury Print, Port Hope," the lines being printed alternately in black and red letters. It reads:

"New Year's Eve Ball,
To be held at the Victoria Hotel, Millbrook,
On the evening of Friday, 31st December, 1869.

Managers:
A. Leach, Millbrook; H. Sutherlan, Port Hope; R. Deyell, Millbrook; C. Warmington, Port Hope.
Good music will be in attendance.
Tickets :-: $1.50
W. M. C. Penton, Proprietor."

It may serve to recall social gatherings of former days should any of the "Boys and Girls" of half a century ago return for the Reunion in 1923.

REMINISCENCES OF THE FAMOUS CAVAN BLAZERS

Though Full Of Mischief, Not A Few Kind Acts Are Credited To Them.

NO WRITTEN RECORD.

It is an irreparable loss to the historical annals of the community, and the province, that no written record has been kept of the origin, and exploits of the famous "Cavan Blazers." It is said that the last of them, a Mr John Swain, died a few years ago, his home having been on the 10th Line Cavan. Few of the older settlers of the township are left to tell the tale of their doings. This makes it extremely difficult to obtain accurate information regarding either names or dates of events connected with them.

Doubtless many of the old boys and girls, returning for the reunion this month, will recall tales heard from their parents and older residents in their early years, such names as Grandy, Swain, Staples, Howden, McBain, Scott, Sutton, etc., being freely mentioned as forming the original "clan." The story that gains most credence as to how the name originated is that some members of the families listed, stalwart young men, full of life and mischief, had driven over to this neighborhood to buy chairs from Messrs. Jake and Tommy Hetherington who with Thomas Hutchison made their living from this industry, their home being near "Silver Creek," the old men and their frame house are still well within the memory of many of township. A quantity of pea straw had been taken along to pack between the chairs to protect from scratching, and while driving home one of the boys lit his pipe and the match falling among the dry straw set it on fire. Seeing them recklessly driving through the village with the blazing load someone made the remark: "There go the Cavan Blazers," and the name stuck always afterwards.

Though full of mischievous deeds, many kind acts are credited to them. If a neighbor fell ill during harvest they would go in the night cut and harvest his grain, cut wood attend to his stock —anything that needed to be done and for which help was necessary. Widows and orphans found them unobtrusive but very helpful friends; most of their charitable acts were done at night after the hard day's labor on their home farms was ended.

In the early days a Methodist church stood in the 9th Line cemetery; it has long since been demolished but at that time Sacrament Sunday was a solemn and very important occasion for which special preparation was always made, and one which no faithful member would willingly miss attending. Illustrating the mischievous pranks of the "Blazers" is related that they came one Saturday night after dark to the log house of one farmer and his wife who never failed to be present at this church on Sacrament Sunday, cut sods and packed them firmly in the doorway and framework of the two windows—all the house possessed. Waking early as usual, and finding the house still dark, the night seemed interminably long to the inmates. At last the farmer decided to open the door and look abroad if sunrise was not at least on the horizon. Imagine his surprise when the sods deluged him as the door was drawn back, and when the earth was cleared from eyes and doorway it was found that the sun was fairly high in the heavens and the hour too late for service that Sunday.

To rob the roosts of chickens, or turkeys, make for the woods and enjoy a "roast" was a favorite pastime. One farmer who boasted of how he fooled the "Blazers" used to drive his fat turkeys into his cellar every night. The joke was turned the other way however when the resourceful young men set fire to some straw in his barnyard and while the entire family was engaged in putting out the flames the mischievous lads concealed about the house carried off the turkeys feasted to their hearts' content their merr ment all the greater because of the stratagem which had overreached the owner's caution.

A love affair in the neighborhood immediately won their attention (not always welcome) and sympathy. In one case where the parents objected to their daughter's choice and had locked the lovesick maiden in her room the "Blazers" putting a ladder up to her window assisted her to the ground and kept sharp watch until the happy couple returned from the minister's as man and wife. The parents afterwards relented and bought furnishings dishes etc. for the home people seeing opposition then was useless.

The sons of Rev. Mr. Armour first rector of the parish of Millbrook and Cavan delighted to be associated with the "Blazers" in their pranks but on account of being sent away to be educated were not always of their number. To this day the descendants of the Armour family have a warm affection toward anyone coming from Cavan. One of the rector's boys in a vigorous scrap which was going on received a blow which knocked out a number of his front teeth and "Dean Armour" was the nickname which he went by ever after. The reason shows the light respect for age or piety in the minds of the young mischief-makers. Mr. Matthew Dean a man of sterling Christian character spoken of during his lifetime and by those who remember him ever since in terms of the highest respect and affection also happened to lack some of his front teeth—hence the choice of nickname for the disfigured boy.

To narrate all the stories told of the "Cavan Blazers" would be practically an impossibility and doubtless scores of others will be called to mind when the older folk gather together for a reminiscent talk either during the reunion here this August or on other occasions of social intercourse in the years to come.

MILLBROOK'S FREE LIBRARY FOUNDED ON SOUND BASIS

Due to Undaunted Courage and Persistence of David Hampton, For Several Years Principal of School —3000 Volumes.

The fact that Millbrook now has a free public library, up-to-date in its methods, and established upon a sound financial basis, is entirely due to the undaunted courage and painstaking persistence of Mr. David Hampton, for several years principal of the school here and one of the best-known and most highly-respected citizens. In face of very little encouragement, Mr. Hampton, in 1894, made a thorough canvass of the village, raising by personal subscription a sufficient sum to begin a Mechanics' Institute with a paid membership of 175. In 1895 this was changed to a free public library, and has continued ever since as a well-patronized institution, subscribing to a large number of the leading newspapers, magazines, and other periodicals and having now at least three thousand volumes on its shelves.

Rev. S. H. Pickup, of St Giles' church, Toronto was the first librarian, being then in his early student days. Mr. Beaver Van Homreigh, since deceased, followed Mr. Pickup, and Miss A. Hampton has assisted her brother in the work ever since.

In 1910 the "Dewey Decima" system of keeping record of the books given out was adopted and found so satisfactory that it has continued to be used since first introduced.

An agitation to take steps toward having a Carnegie library in Millbrook was begun previous to the war but, meeting with considerable opposition, was finally dropped; hence the original rooms over Bentley's hardware store are still in use. The reading-room and library are taken advantage of by residents of both village and township to a very considerable degree. In the fall and winter months, when most reading is done, at least 200 volumes per week will be taken out; subscribers outside the corporation pay $1.00 per year for the privilege and local patrons buy tickets at five cents each, a new one requiring to be purchased as soon as the space is filled; this constitutes a source of revenue to the library funds as do also the fines for keeping a book out over time (two weeks).

The younger element being among the greatest readers in the community, a speciality of juvenile literature of the best type has been made of late years, these books having a part of the library entirely to themselves. It is expected that Mr. Pickup, the first librarian, with other members of his family, will be here for the reunion, and that many of the visiting old boys and girls will find the reading-room a convenient meeting place during the time of their stay here.

First Reeve Of Cavan.

The first Reeve of Cavan Township was John Swain who was born in County Wexford, Ireland, in 1778, settling in Cavan in 1820. He was a member of the Municipa Council for 26 years, and was intimately connected with all the projects for improving, and advancing the interests of the municipality. In his 80th year he retired from public life, enjoying the confidence of the people, and the friendship and affection of his neighbors.

William Sowden was his successor in office; he was Reeve of Cavan in 1846, and was followed by the late Alexander Ferguson who was a member of the Counties' Council in 1878. The two deputy-reeves from Cavan mentioned for the same year are George Campbell and William Hunter.

FIRST CHURCH IN MILLBROOK A METHODIST

Old Frame Building Which Stood on a Hill West of The School Building.

BEFORE THE UNION.

Memory is the mind's treasury through which the past is lived over again, and at no time is this "storehouse of former days' experiences" as likely to be unlocked and its treasures searched out as when a Reunion is being planned and carried through. The returning Old Boys and Old Girls of Cavan and Millbrook, especially those who write that they have not been back for twenty-five, thirty, or even forty years, will find their greatest pleasure, not so much in the public programme provided, as in meeting friends and recalling incidents and places of former years. Some will doubtless remember the old frame New Connection Methodist church, since torn down, the first of any denomination in Millbrook, though a small "meeting-house," on what is now the school hill, had been in use before the church was built; the late Mr. Andrew Dean and Mr. Knowlson, settlers of the early days, looked after the "meeting-house" while service was held there—not for any financial reward but as a matter of pleasure in a good work. The New Connection church stood on the hill west of the school building but of the cemetery which surrounds it only two or three stones are left standing, relatives removing the bodies of their friends when other cemeteries came into use.

The tall white monument which marks the vault where James Deyell and his wife, well known settlers of Millbrook's early days, are interred, is a familiar landmark; a young Englishman who was drowned while bathing in Needler's pond one hot summer's day, is also buried in this now neglected spot, though the headstone, on which the circumstances of his death are recorded, has long since fallen down.

The New Connection church was not used after the Union, the Wesleyan Methodist church, built later at the east end of the village on the lot west of Mr. C. Garside's residence which was then, and for years afterwards, the parsonage, being the one chosen where the united congregations should assemble. But the first church had some pastors, then young men, whose names afterwards became household words for ability and piety: Rev. W. B. Caswell, Rev. David Savage, Rev. W. Williams, and Rev. C. Baritrop being among the number. The next church also had its share of talented ministers occupying the pulpit: Rev. James Hughes, Rev. William Young, Rev. T. Stobbs, Rev. Richard Whiting, Rev. Mr. Coleman, Rev. W. R. Barker, Rev. T. Cosford, Rev. W. L. Scott, Rev. W. Halstead, Rev. Edward Hill, Rev. J. L. Forster, Rev. Richard Clarke, Rev. Newton Hill are some of those who ministered to the people in spiritual things.

It was during the pastorate of Rev. Newton Hill, and with the help of Rev. I. B. Howard, then superannuated and living in Millbrook, that the present Methodist church was built. Rev. H. Matthews was the first minister in charge when the church was opened about forty-five years ago. Miss Carrie Hetherington (now Mrs. Thompson, of Peterborough), was the organist, and the late Dr. E. L. Burnham, choir leader. Other pastors who followed Rev. Mr. Hill were: Rev. William Burns (father of Rev. R. N. Burns, D. D., of Toronto), Rev. A. L. Phelps (superannuated), Rev. W. R. Young, D.D., now of College street church, Toronto, Rev. D. N. McCamus, Rev. Dr. Cade (deceased), Rev. H. B. Kenny, Rev. G. R. Clare, Rev. W. P. Rogers, Rev. William Higgs and Rev. S. T. Tucker. The present parsonage came into use during the pastorate of Rev. G. R. Clare.

OWES ORIGIN TO JUST EIGHT MEN

The Millbrook Agricultural Society Was Founded Sixty-Four Years Ago.

The Millbrook Agricultural Society, with its four officers, twenty-one directors, four honorary directors, auditors, executive committee, etc., evidently owes its origin to thefenterprise of eight men, who, nearly sixty-four years ago, organized the "Cavan Township Agricultural Society," the membership fee being $1.00 per year. Mr. W. W. Brown, 4th Line, Cavan, still has the original document, his father's name, the late Mr. William Brown, heading the list.

The "charter," written in a fine hand on blue linen paper and showing signs of age, reads as follows:

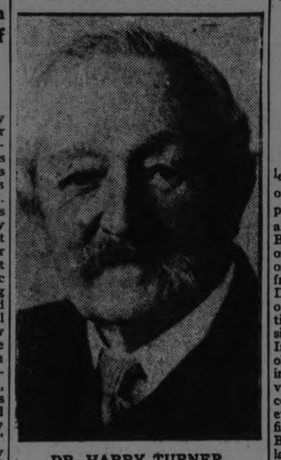
"We, the undersigned, agree to become members of the Cavan Township Agricultural Society and also promise to pay to the treasurer thereof one dollar each on or before the first day of May, 1862, for our annual subscription for the current year.

William Brown, paid
James Eakins
John Morifield
Johnston Stewart
Thomas Deyell
Samuel Areno
George Berry
James Fitzgerald."

The decision to have red, blue and white ribbons or tickets denoting first, second and third prizes is recorded in pencil on the reverse side of the paper. The word "paid" is written after most of the names, evidently as the fee was handed to the treasurer, the writing being in pencil. The name Arthur McQuade, and another which is not decipherable, are also in pencil on the reverse side.

BACK TO EARLY DAYS OF MILLBROOK VILLAGE SCHOOLS AND DOCTORS

A PIONEER DOCTOR



DR. HARRY TURNER.

Born in Cork County, Ireland, March 1st, 1828; died in Vancouver, B.C., March 1922, aged 94 years. Graduated from Dublin University, 1852 and came to Canada same year. Spent practically all his professional career in Millbrook, 1853 to 1900. During the Fenian Raids in 1866, was Instructor of Volunteers at Millbrook, Springville and Omemee; connected with 46th Durham Regiment, under Col. Williams.

Was lay reader in St. Thomas church under Ven. Archdeacon Allen, and Rev. Canon Allen, and had charge of the parish during the latter's absence in Palestine.

For 16 years was Ruling Master of J. B. Hall Lodge, A.F. and A.M. No. 145, and was twice elected District Deputy Grand Master. Twenty years ago he retired from active practice and moved to Vancouver to reside.

The Professional Men and Teachers Who Healed The Sick And Educated Children Of First Settlers And Descendents.

OLD SCHOOL HOUSE.

The settlement of Millbrook had at least one and sometimes two members of the medical profession in active practice, the order in which they came, as far as can be recalled, being: Dr. Brodie, whose office and residence were on the lot west of Dr. Turner's home, on the property recently purchased from Mrs. Whyte by Mrs. (Dr.) Rea; Dr. Brown, who with John Fitzgerald of Millbrook, went to Australia at the time of the gold boom, realizing a considerable fortune and returning then to Ireland; Dr. Rowan, who many of the older residents still remember practicing here; Dr. Might, who came to the village in 1833; Dr. Henry Turner, commanding the affection and esteem of everyone and practising here for nearly fifty years, from 1853 to 1900; Dr. Burroughs, who married a sister of the late George Needler, and afterwards removed to Lindsay where he was practising at the time of his death; Dr. Hamilton, Dr. John Hunter (1875), Dr. E. L. Burnham (1877), Dr. H. A. Turner (1890), Dr. Ough, Dr. Niddrie, Dr. Snelgrove, now of Toronto, and Dr. A. Russell who located here for a short time after graduation, and has since practised at Bailleboro.

Early School Days

As some of those who have spent practically all their lives in Millbrook let memory travel back through the years, the fact is recalled that the first school was a single-roomed building on the rear of what is now the tennis court of Mr. L. S. Clarry's residence, facing the house then occupied by Mrs. Hewson, now the Delbert Sanderson home, and on the roadway, little more than a lane of recent years, west of where Mr. A. Payne resides. When this building became too small to hold the pupils desiring to attend, the old Town Hall was used until the red brick school was built. Teachers in the first school, as far as can be learned, were: Mr. P. G. Gegan, who was here in 1848, Mr. Stark, and Mr. J. McGuire.

The late Mr. Thomas Medd purchased the school building when its use was discontinued, adding to it considerably and moving it to King street where it is now the comfortable and commodious residence of Mrs. John Deyell. Rev. Egerton Ryerson Young, in his early student days, was a pupil at this school, his father, Rev. William Young, being stationed here as pastor of the Wesleyan Methodist Church.

Mr. James Stratton and Mr. J. Young were among those who taught when school was held in the old Town Hall—the former the father of the late Honorable J. R. Stratton who was born in Millbrook, the family at the time living in a frame house on Tupper street. The house has since been remodelled and is a part of the former A. Leach homestead, now owned and occupied by Mr. L. S. Morton.

No one seems to remember the exact date when the red brick school, which stood on the corner where Mrs. Fee's house now is, was built. The smaller "Station" school, however, was put up about 1879 and was in use until the large new school was opened in 1890 when it was found there was plenty of accommodation for all the scholars of the village in the one building, hence the closing of the "Station" school. It has since been made over and improved and is now the cosy home of Rev. Joseph and Mrs. Wilks.

Apparently age did not add to the beauty of the old square red brick school for inquiry whether anyone possesses a picture of the building brings the reply: "Not likely; it was an eyesore." When it was burned in 1887 (the fire which started in the entry was always thought of incendiary origin), the "Station" school was used for one room taught by Miss E. Hetherington, Miss S. Dean had her pupils in the east room of what is now the McBride building, old Mr. Williams at that time keeping store in the west side of the block; Mr. Hampton, principal, Miss L. Hampton, and Miss E. Burton (Mrs. H. Rea and Mrs. A. Smith) taught their rooms over J. W. Gardiner's hardware store, now the "Mirror" printing office.

Quite a long list of teachers is given as having held the position of principal in the old school, several of them, however, being here for only a short period. The first two teachers after the school was opened were Principal J. Preston, with Miss Morgan (afterwards Mrs. Preston, but better known here as Mrs. Carry, having been twice married); as assistant. Other principals were: Messrs. Knight, Dimsdale, Moyles, Spencer, Vance, Harris, Goggin, Montgomery, Wilson, P. N. Davy, J. L. Campbell, Jas. Stanton, W. G. Mills, and D. Hampton.

The teachers who had charge when the new school was opened in January, 1890, were Principal D. Hampton, Miss S. Dean, Miss E. Hetherington and Miss L. Hampton. The four-roomed Continuation School which is being added to the building this year, and for which debentures amounting to $30,000 were issued, was made imperative by the increased number of pupils attending here each year, and is an improvement which may be viewed with pride by the citizens. It will also be one of the points of interest to the returning Old Boys and Girls who are here for the Reunion.

IS NOW RUNNING A SUMMER RESORT

Samuel E. Nesbitt, Millbrook Old Boy, Makes Good At Spokane.

Samuel E. Nesbitt, who resides now at Spokane, Washington, was born on the tenth concession of Hope township, on February 7th, 1836, a quarter of a mile west of Indian Creek.

He attended Sam Wilson's school, and had for a first teacher Robert Gilroy. His family moved to the first concession of Cavan township, and his next teacher was Miss Jane McKinstry, whose home was near Gipson's Crossing. Some of his schoolmates were the families of Mr. Stewart, Mr. James Evans, Mr. James Trews and Mr. William Brown, as well as children from Manvers township.

At the age of nine years, Mr. Nesbitt removed to Michigan, and there, with his sister and brother-in-law, Thomas Abbott, went to school in Pontiac, Oakland County. When eleven years old, he came home to Canada again, and at thirteen years, went to serve his apprenticeship as carriage woodworker. In London, he finished his four-year term, while with W. J. Thompson on King street.

After that, he worked in Detroit, Michigan, then for nine years in Chicago. He married Miss Anna Marshall, from London, England, and removed to Belvidere, Illinois. There he lived for twenty-two years, running a carriage and blacksmith and painting business. There ten children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Nesbitt; two girls and eight boys.

Two of the boys are telegraph operators, two conductors, one an engineer, one a brakeman, one an automobile salesman and one a carpenter, all living at Spokane. One daughter, Vera, married C. T. Henderson, an engineer on the Northern Pacific Railway, and the other, Cora, married Oscar Johnson, also an engineer.

Mr. Nesbitt, with his wife's help, is now running a summer resort, three miles from Spokane city limits. He says:

"It is on a paved speedway and we own half a mile on lake and river front. We operate a dance pavilion, boats and launch, a little store and an oil station, and we keep cows and chickens. I work from 5 a.m. to as late as 11 p.m. We have lived in this place for seventeen years. We have a good climate with cool nights and no flies to trouble our rest. We can stand a good wool blanket at nights here, but we have a different climate every mile or two.

"My relatives in Millbrook are Mr. William Kinyoun. Sister Margaret Kinyoun passed away. I have also nephews and nieces, Mr. and Mrs. Howden, and some others whose names I cannot just recall, as it is nearly forty-two years since I visited home. I have only one brother, Joseph, in Michigan, and one sister, Annie Abbott, living now.

"My brother taught school in Martin's school, on Oak Hill, and carried me five miles night and morning through the woods, when I was from three to five years old."

Letters From Former Millbrook Residents

AULD LANG SYNE.

Cando, N. Dak., Aug. 9th, 1923.
Mr. J. N. McGill, Secy.,
Millbrook, Ont.
My Dear Sir:

We received the Old Boys and Girls Reunion invitation to be in Millbrook, the place of our birth, on the 25th, 26th and 27th of August.

We are sorry that we cannot be with you and again meet the friends of "Auld Lang Syne," and enjoy the wholehearted good fellowship of our old days' friendships.

Remember us to all your dreams, to rose and bush and stem,
To days too short to hold your joys, remember us to them;
To all your secrets deep and vast, of things that are and were
And are to be, half-whispered in the twilight's dusk and blur;
Just say old friends, long away, but still remembering
Would have you know their hearts are full of memories that bring Delight to bygone fellowships, and they would have you tell
Them all we send them love and cheer, and wish them well.

MRS. JOHN DAVEY; MRS. JAS. THOMSON (nee Clemmie Davey); MRS. FRANK ROBSON (nee Jennie Davey; WM. DAVEY.

A HEARTY GREETING.

Bowmanville, Ont., May 29, 1923.
Mr. J. N. McGill,
Secy. Cavan Old Boys, etc.,
Millbrook, Ont.
Dear Mr. McGill:

Many thanks for your cordial invitation to the Reunion in August. I am very anxious, with Mrs. Moore, to be with you on the happy occasion. It's the right idea. Success in your efforts. If possible we will be there.

Should we fail, however, let me extend, through you, our very heartiest greeting and good-will to each and every Old Boy and Girl of Cavan and Millbrook assembled together, with the earnest hope that their coming together in the old home town may be in every way most pleasurable and profitable.

My two years' sojourn in that happy and hospitable community—20 years ago—as Pastor of Cavan South Circuit, still leave behind them only pleasing memories and endearing friendships. Believe me, sincerely yours,

S. C. MOORE.

A PARTIAL INVALID.

676 Euclid Ave.,
Toronto, July 5th, 1923.

My dear Friends:

Some time ago I received from you an invitation to attend a reunion of the Old Boys and Girls of Cavan, to be held at Millbrook, on August 25, 26 and 27, which I truly appreciated, and if my health permits, I would be delighted to accept and attend, but I fear it is not possible and must decline. I have been a partial invalid for the past seven years and don't get out of the city from my home, only short distances by auto.

The very thought calls to life many memories of the dear old home and of my childhood, and after years so happily spent there. I am now and have been for some years the oldest member of the once large Meharry family of Fairmount, Cavan. I was introduced into this big world on February 20, 1837, the historic year of the political unrest of our country, especially of our own province. Whatever influence this political disturbance may or may not have had on me, I have had from childhood, an intense interest in the various questions under discussion in our country's history.

In those early years questions discussed were of even more vital importance than now, in establishing our country on a firm basis of equality, law and order. Though we had not, as now, a prohibition plank in our political platform, in our home, we lived it truly.

Many dear friends of my childhood, especially two sisters older and two brothers younger, my earliest companions, and my dear parents, have passed on, out of life's journey. How much I have missed them.

I have often thought that we older children of the family had a great advantage over our younger sisters and brothers, in having the companionship of our dear parents. When they too were comparatively young, full of life and energy, active in state and church work, different in temperament, but both possessing sterling qualities of mind and heart. School companions farther on in life are still remembered as dear friends of the past in Fairmount.

Again thanking you for your kindness in sending me this invitation and wishing you all success, though not present in person, I hope to be with you in spirit.

Respectfully, your friend,
ELIZABETH MEHARRY SLATER.

HIGHLY HONORED.

Battle Creek, Mich.,
June 11th, 1923.

On account of illness I was obliged to take holidays in June when I visited my father's home and other friends on Fallis Line and in Millbrook, and this is a very busy season for Mr. Carpenter on the farm.

Looking Backward To the Village's First Postmaster

Looking backward, it appears that the position of postmaster at Millbrook was first filled by Matthew Knowlson, who also carried on a drug store at the same time. "Dick" Errott was his successor, and somewhat indolent in fulfilling his duties, if memories of those early days are correct. Richard Howden, Mr. Knowlson's son-in-law, was the next to take charge of the office, with George Knowlson as his clerk. The late William Vance, who was postmaster here for fifty years, succeeded Major Howden, and after his death, his daughter, Miss Lottie Vance, efficiently filled the position until last year when H. B. Collins received the appointment.

HE IS COMING.

Dear Sir:

I beg to acknowledge with thanks the receipt of the invitation of the citizens of Cavan and Millbrook to be present on the occasion of the O'd Boys' and Gir's' Reunion, to be held in your village on August 25th, 26th and 27th, and in reply beg to say it will, as a former resident of Cavan afford me much pleasure to be present at the celebration, health and weather permitting.

Hoping the committee's anticipations for the success of the event may be more than fully realized, I beg to remain

Yours very truly.

Dear Friends:

It is with deep regret that my husband and I will not be able to accept of your very kind invitation to be present at the Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion.

We would have enjoyed very much meeting our old friends of long ago, and to see once more the old home town, but although absent, we will be with you in spirit.

Wishing you a successful and enjoyable Reunion. I remain,

Yours sincerely,

Collingwood, Ont.,
August 3, 1923.

Mr. J. N. McGill,
Millbrook, Ont.
Dear Sir:

Received your kind invitation to join withe the Old Boys and Girls to celebrate the reunion which I appreciate very much. I was a resident of the old town back in 1878 for 18 months. I have been living ever since in western Canada. I have only returned a few weeks ago from the state of Florida where I have my winter home and large holdings. I am one of the largest tomato growers during mid-winter and am known as the Tomato King of Florida.

However, I will be with you if possible to renew old acquaintances once more. I think it is nearly 46 years since I left there.

If anything should detain me from getting there, give or extend my greetings and best wishes to all present. I remain, as ever,

One of the Old Boys,
J. H. FINLAY.

WASHINGTON WEST.

Auburn, Wash.,
August 6th, 1923.

To the Old Boys and Girls of Millbrook:

Dear Friends: Greetings from far away Western Washington. I should indeed be delighted to accept your kind invitation to attend your social good-fellowship meeting August 25, 26 and 27, but find that it will be impossible for me to make the trip.

Though I cannot be with you in the flesh I will be with you in spirit and hope that you will all enjoy three days renewing acquaintances and possibly you who know me personally will be pleased to learn that I and mine are well and happy. With best wishes for all for the sake of Auld Lang Syne. I am, as ever,

Yours very sincerely,
MRS. MARY E. EVERETT.

GIVES THEM PLEASURE.

Lakefield, July 18, 1923.

Mr. J. N. McGill,
Millbrook.
Dear Mr. McGill:

As I expected to be in Millbrook long before this date, I intended extending, in person, my thanks to the committee for the invitation sent to Mr. Porter and myself to attend the Cavan and Millbrook "Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion," August 25, 26 and 27.

We are planning to be present, and are looking forward with pleasure to meeting again many of the dear, old friends of long ago.

If you have not already done so, I would be pleased to have you forward an invitation to my brother, Lynden J. Cochrane, Coronation, Alberta. He has a very warm spot in his heart for the old town and I have heard him say that he would like to attend an "Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion" should there ever be one. As the crop prospects are much brighter in Alberta this year it is quite possible that he will try to come east for the celebration.

My brother Percy's address is 2228 Victoria Drive, Vancouver, B.C. My father lives with Percy.

Hoping that the "Reunion" may be a great success in every way, I am,

Yours sincerely,
MAMIE PORTER.

SENDS REGRETS

Mrs. T. B. Hando, of Bow Island, Alberta, formerly Miss Gertrude Richardson, in sending her regrets at being unable to attend the Reunion says:

"We received the invitation for the Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion in Millbrook, and we should both love to go but it is impossible. My husband is not well and has to go to the Coast for a while, and we feel we cannot go to both places.

"We sincerely regret that we cannot be with you and send our best wishes for the success of the gathering. Please give my kind regards to all the Old Boys and Girls."

UNCLE FOUGHT MACKENZIE IN 37

158 Lytton Boulevard, Toronto,
August 19th, 1923.

J. N. McGill, Esq.,
And all Old Boys and Girls.

Last October my son and I motored a long way from Toronto, around by Rice Lake, Peterborough and the old 12th line of Cavan. As we came through Millbrook and passed the houses I knew long ago and the homes where I was often a guest, I wondered if any one I knew was still living or remembered me. I would like to attend the Reunion, if even one old friend would be glad to see me, but I am prevented by my son holidaving at Timagami.

The 12th line of Cavan was my greatest attraction, where my parents, grand parents and great grand parents settled in the forest 105 years ago and made homes, cleared away the woods and made the country beautiful. Nine weeks and three days were spent in crossing the ocean and six weeks coming up the St. Lawrence and Lake Ontario from Quebec to Port Hope. They came from Cavan in Ireland to the new Cavan and many a story I have heard of the early life and hard times in the back woods.

The women and children remained in Port Hope until the men prepared the homes, carrying the fire from the Lawson settlement, south of Cavanville, nine miles. Lucifer matches were unknown, and friction and flint was tedious. No doubt the fire never died out.

My mother's father, being a clergyman, established a church in his home where it continued for years. Then the log school house was used until the Fairmount Church was built on my great grandfather's land where it still remains, and all looked in such good condition last fall. Mr. Thomas McIndoo is the only descendant remaining on the farm of those early settlers. My grandfather was his great grandfather. Two of those old families were united by the marriage of my father and mother, he 21 years old, she 16½ years. We stopped at my old home and I asked permission to go through the rooms where a large family had lived happily, from which six daughters had gone forth as brides to help make other happy homes and three sons had found brides in other homes to help them.

Death has made many changes, the old home has suffered from the change of owners, but the memories remain. One recollection is of my earliest school days, when with my hand in that of our teacher, Archibald Wood, afterwards the much respected citizen of Millbrook, I went day after day to the log school house. The brick school was built years afterwards and my last public school teacher was the late Dr. Wm. McCamus. Rev. Allan of Millbrook, who was for many years our school inspector. We were always glad to see him and to hear him say, "we had done well," and were to have a holiday.

To Millbrook we came to the township fairs, and many other gatherings of crowds. The teachers' conventions brought a smaller number but they felt very important as questions of school improvements were discussed, the lady teachers contributing music, literary selections, etc. We had a good time, of which pleasant memories come back and make my letter too long.

I will only repeat one more that has been told to me of 1837, the year that helped make history when all men were called forth to Toronto to fight for their country. Our old uncle, the valiant Captain Hundas, started immediately, and reached Toronto, or Little York, and obtained a musket and a blanket. The other men waited a day to leave affairs more comfortable for wives and children. They only reached Port Hope, their only defence being a stout stick cut in passing through a woods. My mother, 22 years old, was left with three little girls, the youngest a few months old. No wonder she was ever after a strong conservative. Brave men they all were, just as brave as their descendants—and I could count scores of them who bravely went to fight for their country in the late war and many of whom gave their lives. Their pictures are in my rooms.

Wishing every Old Boy and Girl of Cavan and Millbrook a very pleasant time. I remain,

Sincerely yours,
MATILDA MEHARRY WICKENS.

Dear Sir:—

We were delighted to receive the kind invitation of the Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion Committee to our old home town, of which our memories are very dear, but regret so much that we are unable to attend.

A Member of One Of Oldest Families Sends Her Regrets

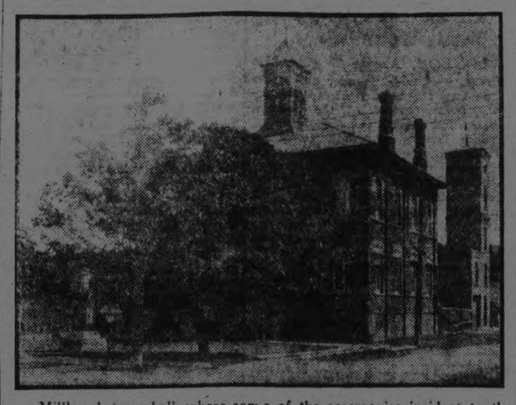
Annie E. McClung, of Winnipeg, who before her marriage was A. E. Meharry and a member of one of the oldest families in the township, writes:

I thank you most sincerely for the kind invitation I have been favored with and, had it been possible for me to be one of the "Old Boys and Girls" of Cavan, no one would have enoyed it more. I appreciate your kind remembrance of one of the "Oldest Girls."

Distance forbids my participating in the Reunion. It is 20 years since I had the pleasure of spending part of a day in Millbrook. To those who still remember me in my girlhood days I send this word out of my life's experience: "Sunshine and shadow for every one as the years roll on, but, by God's grace, always more of sunshine than of shadow."

MILLBROOK TOWN HALL AND SOLDIERS' MONUMENT



Millbrook town hall, where some of the ceremonies incident to the Millbrookw Old Girls' and Boys' Re-union will take place. In the foreground is the soldiers' monument erected in honour of those who lost their lives in the Great War.

Fire Hall Bell Has History

There is an interesting story in connection with the bell which hangs in the tower of the fire hall at Millbrook. The bell was originally sent from France to Bishop Grandon for use in the Roman Catholic Church at Onion Lake in the Northwest Territory. At the time of the Rebellion in 1885 this church was destroyed by fire and the bell left attached to two posts—all that remained of the building. Jack Steinthorpe, Ira Nattrass, and Ed. McCorry, members of the old Durham Regiment, then on active service in the locality, climbed up and took down the bell, afterwards bringing it home with them to Millbrook, where it was placed in the fire hall tower. Later Bishop Grandon wrote to Ottawa demanding the return of his bell, and Harry Ward, M. P., of Port Hope, came to Millbrook about the matter. It was claimed, however, as a trophy of war, considerable indignation aroused, and its return emphatically refused. Old Sargeant McCorry declared he would stand guard with a rifle and serious harm would result to any one attempting to carry it off.

The tower of the hall was then some feet higher than at present and when the building was damaged by fire the bell was cracked; but it is still used for fire alarm purposes, although the town bell is now rung on such occasions as well.

GLAD TO COME.

UNABLE TO COME

To the Cavan and Millbrook "Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion," Millbrook, Ontario.
Dear friends:—

HELD BY BIG CROP

Coronation, Alta.,
Aug. 14th, 1923.

To the Committee of the Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion, Millbrook.
Dear friends:—

I write to thank you for your kind remembrances and invitation to go back to Millbrook at the reunion celebration.

I am sorry to say that I am unable to partake of the joys of that grand reunion. I realize it is an opportunity I am missing that only comes once in a lifetime that enables one to see the dear friends of old times. I deeply regret that I cannot be with you on this occasion. We have had a series of dry years for the past three years. The harvest this year is early and will be on in a few days. It is a bumper crop we have this year, and it is of necessity that I must he here to attend it.

I left the dear little town about 20 years ago, just about the time that such men as Billy O'Brien, Levi Russell and Nick Burnham were coming into prominence. I understand they are still in it. I was in a few years' older class though and was a pupil of that old school as taught by Mr. Hampton and Billy Eakins. Billy only taught after the closing of the regular school hours and on Saturdays. Although it was somewhat of a handicap for him under those circumstances of irregular hours and scattered meeting places, still we made fine progress under Billy's able tuition, and the teachings of both those fine men are staying with me even to this day.

It is gratifying to me to know that the boys in whose class I belonged to, have come out right end up, and are taking active and important parts in Canada's affairs. I mention such names as Bert Nugent, Albert Craig, Charlie Walsh, etc., and so on.

Now, dear friends, I will not bore you further with my rambling sentiments. I take pleasure in the fact that many will enjoy the effect of your efforts to bring them together on this occasion, and I wish to say that should the committee require donations to take care of the expanse caused by the celebration, I would consider it a pleasure to do my bit in that respect. And if you will have any pictures of a line-up of the dear old boys and girls I will gladly purchase several. I would like very much to have some pictures. I wish you would remember me especially to Mr. Given. It's going to be a lot harder for men to die down there when he is gone.

Wishing you much success, yours affectionately,
LINDEN J. COCHRANE.

"OLD BOY" HAS PASSED BEYOND

Midland, Ont.,
Aug. 18th, 1923.

J. N. McGill, Esq.,
Secretary Cavan & Millbrook Old Boys' Association, Millbrook, Ont.
Dear Sir:—

I have to thank you for invitation addressed to my late father to join you on 25th inst. in the Cavan and Millbrook Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion.

You, no doubt, were unaware that he had passed away about two years ago. I need scarcely say that it would have been a great pleasure to him, had he been spared, to have been with you on this occasion and to have met the few friends of forty-five years ago who may remain. My father was always fond of relating the incidents of the early days in Cavan, and particularly of the old Fallis Line. Mother, while her mind is still very clear, is debarred from attending by rheumatic afflictions. Her relatives, the Shaws of Manvers, have all either passed away or removed to other parts of Canada and U. S.

My own acquaintance with Millbrook and vicinity is largely second-hand.

You might hand this letter to your President, who, I think, will remember my father; and will be glad if you will both accept my heartiest good wishes for a very successful Reunion.

Yours very truly,
W. E. HAGGART.

GREETING FROM SASK.

Yellow Grass, Sask.,
August 13th, 1923.

To the Cavan and Millbrook "Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion," Millbrook, Ont.
Dear Friends:

I desire to thank you for your kind invitation of March 10th to attend the "Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion," which is being held in Millbrook, on August 25th, 26th and 27th.

I should like very much to be with you all on this occasion, but find it is impossible for me to attend.

I might say that I am enjoying good health and am getting along fine, and hope that all those present at this Reunion are doing as well.

With best wishes for a successful "Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion," I am,

Yours sincerely,
(MRS.) MARGARET D. STEER.

REMEMBER HAPPY YEARS

Red Deer, Alberta,
August 12th, 1923.

To the Old Boys and Girls of Cavan and Millbrook.
Dear Friends:

It is with great pleasure that we conform to your request, and send our greetings to the Old Boys and Girls assembled in our old home town of Millbrook. The regret we have is that it is impossible for us to be present with you. However, the fact of such a Reunion taking place has brought to our minds the many happy years we spent (both in childhood and in mature years) in your midst. For although

"It may be weakness, still it deserves some praise,
'Twas the play place of our early days."

We think that the idea of a Reunion, such as you are celebrating, is a splendid thing by whoever conceived, and the object very praiseworthy, and trust it may be such a success that other Reunions may be desired in after years, which might possibly give us a much desired opportunity of meeting with you.

We realize that the citizens of Cavan and Millbrook have gone to a great amount of work to make your gathering together possible, and sincerely hope that your efforts will be a success. May Providence give suitable weather for the occasion so that your three days, respectively, may fulfil your greatest desire.

Again we send our hearty greetings to the Old Boys and Girls of Cavan and Millbrook. Thanking you for the invitation which has made it possible for us to send this letter. We remain,

Yours sincerely,
MR. AND MRS. SAM BLAKELY AND FAMILY.

WAS THREE YEARS REEVE

Weyburn, Sask.,
Aug. 10th, 1923.

To the Committee of Management, Reunion of Old Boys' and Girls' of Cavan and Millbrook, Millbrook, Ont.
Dear Sirs:—

Just a few lines to express my regret at being unable to be present with you on the occasion of this your first reunion, but I assure you that although absent in person I shall be very present in mind and best wishes.

I have many pleasant memories of Cavan and Millbrook. It was there I spent some twenty years of the best part of my life from thirty to fifty years of age. It was there one half of our children were born. It was there that all of them received the foundation of their education, a foundation that was well laid, thanks to the educational staff on duty during those years in connection with which I beg leave to mention the names of two who were on duty continuously during those years, viz. Mr. David Hampton and Miss Sarah Dean.

I understand they have both retired from active teaching since then but I hope they may both live for many years to enjoy the thanks and admiration of the many parents and pupils which they so richly merit.

It was also in Millbrook that I had the honor of presiding for three successive years as Reeve at the head of your Municipal Council, an honor which I still look back to with some degree of both pride and pleasure.

For these and many other reasons I regret being unable to be present with you on this the occasion of your first reunion, but I hope that some of my boys who are residents of Ontario still, will be able to be present with you and represent the family personally.

Signed on behalf of myself and family,

WM. S. PICKUP.

RECALLS MINSTREL SHOW

Toronto, Ont.,
Aug. 17th, 1923.

Mr. J. N. McGill,
Secretary Old Boys and Girls Reunion,
Millbrook, Ont.
Dear Mr. McGill:—

I am in receipt of an invitation to attend the above Reunion, and wish to thank you for remembering and considering me as an old-timer of Millbrook. I am not sure whether I shall be able to attend, but if so, shall take much pleasure in shaking hands with a few of the old friends.

My first appearance in that good little village was back in 1890. During that year, and five or six following I spent the falls and winters in charge of one of my late Father's grain warehouses, and I look back with no small amount of pleasure to those care-free days.

In looking over some old records not long ago, I came across a programme of an entertainment given in the Millbrook Town Hall by the "Millbrook Amateur Minstrels" on Friday, February 16th, 1894. You will notice that yours humbly was one of the end men, and our friend Harry Johnston, sat opposite. The late Harry Wood was Interlocutor, and a good one indeed he made. Perhaps you would like to have this on exhibition as one of the "relics" of former days. I am loaning you this, and would esteem it a favor if you would kindly return same after the Big Show is over. Millbrook was some live village in those days, and no doubt it will be recalled with pleasure by hundreds of others like myself.

With kind regards,
Yours truly,
EDGAR J. GUY.

TO HIS SCHOOLMATES

Spokane, Washington.

Dear Friends, Schoolmates and Early Acquaintances:

I read your very kind and highly appreciated invitation to join with my old schoolmates, neighbors and long-ago acquaintances in the reunion at Millbrook. I have put off answering your letter, hoping to be able to tell you that I could go, but now I see I cannot, as this is the busiest season of our year and it is impossible to hire reliable help. However, should I get a chance at the eleventh hour, I will wire you, and, in any event, although I may not be able to attend in person, I will surely be with you in thought and spirit.

I enclose a short biographical sketch, as requested, and I would surely like to hear from any of my old friends, neighbors or acquaintances, or have a visit from any of them.

I will now close with many thanks for your kind consideration of me. Hoping to get an account of your reunion, with love and kindly remembrance, I am,

Yours respectfully,
SAMUEL E. NESBITT.

PRESENT IN SPIRIT

Dear Old Boys and Girls:—

I travel to-day in my mind's eye back to the little town where I was born and spent my early youth. My heart reaches out across the broad vistas that separate us and I journey to you in spirit.

More than half a century has passed since I left my home in Millbrook. In 1866, I departed those genial precincts to try life in a new country. A family of five children have been mine and I have lived to bury three of them. Two grown sons, George and Harry, remain. They join me in praying Godspeed to your enterprise.

Wherever we go and whatever befalls us, our hearts ever turn with love and tenderness to the land of our nativity. So as you gather around the old familiar scenes this year I am cherishing in my heart the fragrant memory of the past.

It is with profound regret that my state of health must compel me to be absent from the reunion.

Accept my heartiest and sincerest wishes for a happy time.

Fraternally yours,
ANNIE J. ELDRED.

PROUD OF BIRTHPLACE.

Buffalo, New York,
171 Lexington Ave.,
July 28, 1923.

Dear Millbrookites:

Your invitation of March 10th to visit Millbrook again in August was greatly appreciated. I was fortunate in receiving two.

One notes that you feel secure in broadcasting these invitations to all parts of the world, omitting Ontario, in the address shown on your invitation.

Now being a native-born Ontarian I am extremely proud at all times to boast of my birthplace and the resting place of my parents. So why not boost your province and display the name.

One too rather resents these days in being called "Old Boys and Girls," no matter how young we are; but as I look back it has been a long time since I first went with my father William Henry Adams, to Millbrook at the age of five, to remain with my great aunts, Ann Cathcart and Ba'l and Miss Maggie Lowery until such time as he cou'd provide a suitable home with him, my mother having died when I was nearly three. My heart was broken at the age of nine by his untimely death. So from five years until 12 years I was one of you. Going to the old school, seeing it burn, going to the old Presbyterian Church with aunty in her old phaeton on stormy days, and standing with the old men, while prayer was in session (a funny custom now) and seeing her replace her Sunday bonnet for her bee c othes, having a hundred hives or more, and they ways swarmed on Sunday after church while I was not allowed to hop, sk p or jump, or do anything a little girl would like to do on Sunday.

But nevertheless my early religious training which I received by my aunt Cathcart's side and which she so instilled into my being with fear, has remained and I am as much an advocate of the "Blue Sabbath" as any one I know in good New Eng'and.

The shearing of the sheep at the old mill dam and the old miller shutting down the water, allowing me to get fish under the dam barefooted, were great summer pastimes.

Winter, I have neve seen such snow as you people had The stockings I wore in those days had six-inch bristles standing out from all sides. They were simply awful, and I used to wrap my lower extremities in swaddling bands, unknown to aunty, before I could put the scratchy things on, or else go bare-legged in the snow. No wonder I had pneumonia twice while I was in Millbrook, but how we al did love the doctor. I have heard his son is there now.

We kids loved to watch the old blacksmith at the end of the bridge after school, and in the evening try to scare each other by thinking we heard coyotes in the swamp. I used to look out at the Clarry's and wish I were one of them. They had such fun all together sliding down the carriage runway, and I was alone on the hill.

Mr. Smith, Elizabeth (now thirteen) and I visited you some eight years ago and I felt a touch of anxiety should I recognize an old friend or would the face of the pond be strange and unfamiliar, but sure enough, there was the cheery faced bus driver, who used to take "us kids up to see the train come in," those years back.

The new church in the centre of the village I noted replaced the one I went to on the outskirts. Very little change otherwise. The home I lived in seemed the most changed of any one place there, for I was so familiar with every inch of the place. The house seemed smaller, but not so really, the land (her wonderful orchard, cut up, fences changed, and the whole place had lost its tone of those years.)

May the same quiet, reserved aristocratic "atmosphere" remain with you "Millbrook" for all years. For "atmosphere" is the breath of life; and it is not the external and material things of nature that are beautiful; the beauty lies only in what we breath from them, into our inmost spirit.

I want to visit you if possible, if not, should like to hear about your splendid idea of a reunion

Sincerely,
CHARLOTTE A. SMITH.

HAPPY MEMORIES.

Anglican Theological College of B.C.,
Vancouver, July 15, 1923.

J. N. McGill, Esq.

Dear Sir: I beg to acknowledge the kind invitation addressed to me to attend the Reunion on August 25th to 27th. I very much regret that it will be impossible for me to attend. I have just returned from a trip to the East and cannot make the journey again. I need hardly say that the invitation has recalled many very happy memories of Cavan and Millbrook. I hope the efforts of your committee may be rewarded by a successful issue of the enterprise

Yours faithfully,
W. H. VANCE.

HE FELT LONESOME

W. H. Crossley, of Calgary, writes: In April when I was favored with my invitation I was just sick with that old feeling of lonesomeness, especially when I realized that the Reunion came at a time that is almost prohibitive so far as my being away is concerned. Still I have delayed writing in the hope that something would turn up that would allow of my going. How I would like to be there and see all the dear faces, and "swap" stories with the many "boys and girls." Believe me, I will be thinking of Millbrook those August days, and sincerely hope they will be thinking of me.

RED LETTER DAY.

58 North Forge Street,
Akron, Ohio,
August 11th, 1923.

J. N. McGill, Esq.,
Secy. Old Boys and Girls Reunion
Millbrook, Ontario.
Dear Sir:

It is a great regret to me that I shall not be able to be with you on August 25th, 26th and 27th. Be sure that if it were at all possible for me to undertake the trip to Millbrook at that time it would indeed be a pleasure and honor to greet all the old friends.

One of the happiest periods of my life was spent in Millbrook and I feel always that Millbrook is a real home. What a satisfaction it is to be able to write thus and at the same time with the utmost sincerity.

Please give my heartiest greetings to all my friends and tell them that although I have made new friends and am very happy in my surroundings now, yet the new place made by new interests will never crowd out the place in my heart made by the kindness I experienced when in Millbrook.

Will you allow me to congratulate you upon your enterprise in arranging such a unique and pleasant event as an Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion? Such a word coming from a town in which one spent happy hours marks a real "red letter" day in one's life.

May your "Reunion" be a success in every sense of the word and may you be blessed with very propitious weather, is my wish and prayer.

Yours very sincerely,
C. F. STENT

VERY GRATIFYING.

July 17th, 1923.

Miss Pearl Burnham,
Asst. Secy. Reunion Committee,
Millbrook, Ont.
Dear Miss Burnham:

Much as I could desire to revisit the scenes of a two-year sojourn that stands out in my recollection as perhaps the brightest period of my life it is so unlikely that that will be my good fortune that I already seek to convey to you my regrets. To have found that I have not been overlooked in the multitude that have a right to look back to Millbrook as the place of their nativity or temporary residence, is very gratifying indeed. This will add to the pleasure already great and constant that pervades my thoughts of those earlier days

Yours truly
C. M. TAIT.

FROM CHICAGO.

Chicago, July 10, 1923.

Miss Pearl Burnham,
Millbrook, Ont., Canada
Dear Miss Burnham:

The invitation to the Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion at Millbrook has been received and I am frank to admit that a keen desire and longing to go back to the "old stamping ground of childhood days" came over me, as I read it.

You know it has been ten years this summer since I was home and I sure would like to see all the old boys and girls again but it is with utmost regret, that as far as I know now, Mrs Duncan and myself will be unable to be there.

Tell them that while we are not there in body we surely will be in spirit, and that we send our best wishes for a successful reunion.

Kindest regards sincerely,
REG. DUNCAN.

P.S.—If by chance that anything should turn up that I can arrange to be with you I will advise later.

A WESTERN FARMER.

Newton Siding, Manitoba,
August 6th, 1923.

Dear Friends:

It was with a deep sense of appreciation that I read your very kind letter of invitation to the Old Boys' and Girls' Reunion of my childhood home.

I am convinced that nothing would give me greater pleasure than accepting your invitation, and taking some part in the gathering of old and true friends of days gone by, renewing old acquaintances and recalling old and dear memories.

Since coming to the west I have joined the ranks of the western farmer, having under cultivation at the present time nine hundred and sixty acres. And the harvest coming in earlier than we anticipated you can readily understand that at this season of the year I find it impossible to leave home

Kindly extend to all my old friends and schoolmates my heartiest greetings for the days of "Old Lang Syne," and deep regrets that I cannot join them in the anticipated Reunion.

I can assure you, though absent, my kindest thoughts will out to you on this occasion.

Gratefully yours,
HARRY WINSLOW.

FROM PENNSYLVANIA.

Riverside Rest,
Miquon, Penn.,
July 12, 1923.

Mr. J. N. McGill,
Millbrook, Ontario.
Dear Mr McGill:

Your kind invitation came some time time ago, and I have waited until the present to see if it were possible to accept. I regret to say that I can not be with you. There is nothing that I would enjoy more, and I trust it will be a grand success. Thanking you,

Yours sincerely,
IDA G. THOMPSON.

EFFORTS FRUSTRATED.

Cedaredge, Colo.,
July 27th, 1923

To the Millbrook and Cavan Boys—
Greetings

It is with sincere regret that I'm frustrated in my efforts to be with you on the occasion of your reunion. The pros and cons in the question of returning at this time have been duly weighed and the scales have tipped the wrong way, much to my discomfiture. The stage has a wonderfully attractive setting and to be one of the actors thereon has been my ambition since the word was broadcasted, announcing the event but though the pleasure of meeting with friends of bygone days is denied me at this particular time yet my thoughts and good wishes for the cause and producers thereof remains steadfast and unchangeable.

My wish is that the sun may shine bright and with golden results for each and every one of the faithful, including those who extend the welcoming hand as well as those who make Millbrook the mecca to which they pilgrimage at this time.

Yours for old Millbrook's prosperity,
NORMAN F. COOMBE.

Today's Quotations and Opinions and Reviews of the Markets.

MARKET REACTIONARY.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(United Press.)—Wall Street's response to the verdict of mercantile reviews that the fall demand had set in with satisfactory vigor, was a generally reactionary stock market at the week's close.

Probably professionals figure that it was just a development which the rise among the industrial stocks over the last two weeks had been discounting. They were inclined to take profits, or espouse a short position, on the theory that the market was entitled to a period of digestion until it was ascertainable how the industrial indications of autumnal recovery were going to be followed up. At any rate, the general list had to absorb substantial offerings during the two hour session, that it did so with no greater recessions than occurred was pretty plain evidence of a healthy condition within the speculative structure. In the face of irregularity in the list as a whole, a bullish demonstration was staged in the fertilizer group under the stimulus of one of Davison Chemical familiar spurts. This special strength, however, was offset by renewed heaviness among the oil stocks, Cosden dropping to a new low for the year on the realization that if the company followed Producers and Refiners example in reducing its dividend disbursements, such a policy would receive ample vindication from the present conditions in the petroleum industry.

American Can, Baldwin, Dupont and other industrial leaders showed substantial recessions from their recent highs.

Price changes in the early dealings on the stock exchange were confined to slight irregularities among the active stocks, but the general list displayed a confident undertone.

STOCK NEWS SUMMARY

Morning bulletin from Nelson & Martyn: Producers and refiners declare a dividend of 50c quarterly on common as compared with previous one dollar rate.

Bradstreets' report trade and industry show little change from last week, but there was sufficient business to show that the corner was turned several weeks ago.

Western Maryland reports July surplus of $154,537, after taxes charges against $6243 a year ago.

Dunns report more definite indications of enlarging business in some quarters.

DARK HORSES MAKE RESULTS DOUBTFUL

Feature of Irish Election on Monday Will Be Uncertainty.

LONDON, August 25. Canadian Press. — The morning newspapers carrylong special despatches from Dublin reviewing the election prospects for Monday. The correspondents record a general belief that the success of the government party is assured but admit the existence of sufficient unknown quantities to leave some doubt on this point, especially in view of the large number of new electors

Opinion seems to be virtually unanimous that however the government party fairs, the new Dail will contain a considerable majority in favor of the treaty and the Free State constitution One estimate is that the anti-treaty item will not obtain more than 25 or 30 seats.

WELCOME SIGNS REBUKE PARKING

Courteous Notification of Violation of Traffic Regulations in Southern City.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Aug. 25. — Associated Press. — "Welcome to our city," reads the tag the Morgantown police attach to automobiles of visitors who violate the city traffic ordinances.

That is what the first tag, a green one, says, but if the offense of incorrect or overtime parking is persistent or the traffic violation a serious one the red tag that summons the local motorist to the police court will be used.

The green tag, an answer to the complaint of visiting motorists that they were being fined for breaking ordinances of which they knew nothing, was an idea of the Morgantown chamber of commerce, which had the tags printed, and gave them to Chief of Police C. W. Smith, who distributed them to his patrolmen. It reads:

"The citizens of Morgantown, through its chamber of commerce, bid you welcome to our city.

"If we can render any service or in any way make your visit with us more pleasant ,kindly call at the headquarters of our commercial organization.

"By the way, you have violated our city traffic ordinance, and we suggest that you call at the chamber of commerce and secure a copy of our traffic regulations."

CHINESE BOYCOTT DESTROYS EXPORTS.

Japan's Trade Has Suffered Heavily and Steamship Companies Are Hard Hit.

TOKIO, August 25. — Japan's export trade to China has suffered enormously during the last few months owing to the Chinest boycott of Japanese goods. Steamship companies also have been hard hit.

Japanese merchants are up in arms and resolution after resolution is being passed demanding that the Government take some firm action to bring about a change. The Foreign Office, however, has found it impossible to do more than send ships to protect Japanese subjects and property and bring the matter before the Chinese Government with a request that local officials take steps to put an end to this unfriendly attitude.

From the beginning of the year to the end of May Japan's export trade felt off by more than 20,000,000 yen. Since then there has been no diminution of the boycott.

Household Suggestions

SPATTERING GREASE

When you are frying meat or anything that is apt to spatter grease, put newspapers on the floor about the range to protect your floor.

CLEAN TOWELS

Always put your clean towels at the bottom of the shelf on which you keep your linens. This way they all get an even amount of wear.

UNWASHED PANS

Leaving unwashed pots and pans around to dry or simmer on the stove is one way to invite disagreeable kitchen odors to your home. A little soda and hot water put into every pan as soon as it is emptied keeps it in good shape until you are ready to wash it.

ODDITIES IN NEWS

FASHIONS

The hoop skirt is coming back in England, and German women also are falling in line.

No danger of the style spreading to our country. You can imagine a woman in hoop skirts trying to board a crowded street car, wedge herself in a flivver or move about in a modern apartment without knocking the furniture over.

Congestion of population is gradually compelling us to dress sensibly.

Mexico offers to all its adult citizens, land. Property owned by the government is thrown open, for this purpose, barring reservations. In a general way, if a Mexican doesn't soon own a patch of land it'll be his own fault.

The Obregon government is wise. Its land action is insurance against the most dangerous form of discontent. The man who owns the land on which he lives with his family is rarely a revolutionist.

SWEETS

Men now eat as much candy as women, says Mrs. Ora H. Snyder of Chicago, queen of the candy industry, who started in business 13 years ago by investing a nickel in an egg and a cup of sugar.

Mrs. Snyder notices that men like candies that have to be chewed—taffies, butterscotches, ets. She says the only reason men formerly did not eat so much candy was because no one was making and advertising the sort of candies they like.

The Million Dollar Doll

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Teresa Desmond (Terry), exquisite and unbelievably innocent, has determined to leave her father. Terrence Desmond, the proprietor of a roadhouse, the Blue Moon. He is moody and selfish, bent on Terry's "bagging" a rich man. He introduces her to Eustace Nazlo, a wealthy Greek, who falls in love with the girl, and on an auto ride makes unwelcome advances. She escapes from him and goes to Juliet Divine, the stage name of her beautiful half-sister, known as the Million Dollar Doll, whom she has not seen for years. 'Juliet's' career has been somewhat sketchy, but she has a genuine affection for Terry, whom she greatly resembles. Miles Sheridan, Terry's Dream Prince, furnished the money for Terry's education at a convent when she was a child, partly to atone for a past rudeness of his wife Betty Sheridan, who is now making him unhappy with her infidelity. Hartley Phillips, a member of the Four Hundred, calls on Julia to tell her that Sheridan, in order to facilitate his wife's obtaining a divorce, will pay the Million Dollar Doll twenty thousand dollars t take a yacht trip with him. Except for appearing with her in order to cause talk, he wants to have nothing to do with her. Terry confesses to Julia that Sheridan has always been her ideal.

Terry is made unhappy by the discovery that Jule is going to marry a South American, Manoel Fernandez, and go to live in Buenos Aires.

Julia tells Terry that it is in her power to help Sheridan.

To help her 'Prince' Terry agrees to take the yacht trip, passing herself off as Julia.

Desmond in an effort to locate Terry, calls Julia.

Desmond is persuaded to let Terry remain with Julia and the latter arranges the details of the trip.

CHAPTER XXIV.

"I Shall Be In No Danger"

As for the money, though Terry had refused it in advance, it would be banked for her. Senora Fernandez would be very rich, and could afford a gift of twenty thousand dollars to her sister.

Manoel would suppose that it came out of her own private fortune, and in his jealousy of the past would think it a good riddance. Even Terry need never know where the "present" originated.

Julia glowed with a sense of disinterested virtue in her anxiety for Terry's welfare. She was ready for sacrifices, but there was one she would not make: she'd run no risk of losing Fernandez. So before deciding once and for all to accept Phillips offer, she studied the situation as it concerned Manoel.

She thought of his business trip to Europe, which at first glance had seemed to clear the coast. Suppose, while in Spain, he heard of Sheridan's cruise and the name of the girl who travelled with him? Would he jump to the conclusion that the woman he'd left in New York had run away with another man?

Despite his boisterous joviality, and his passion which overstepped the past, Julia had caught glimpses of Manoel's Latin temper. She pictured him rushing off to see for himself if the rumor were true; at Algiers, for instance, where the yacht was pretty sure to anchor.

If he saw Terry from a distance, he'd believe that he saw Julia, and then—well, the devil would be to pay.

She decided on the instant that this risk wasn't worth taking. She would marry Manoel and go with him to Spain, after all. Then she'd be safe, whatever happened to Terry.

Her engagement was very new. She hadn't told anyone except her father, her sister, and Phillips. She'd meant to have a quiet wedding in any case, because she didn't wish Senora Fernandez to be associated in people's minds with Juliet Divine.

She could slip away from New York with her husband, and hardly anyone would know what had become of the "Million Dollar Doll."

When she had mapped out her own private plans, Julia turned her attention energetically to business. Phillips was amused and a little disgusted with her shrewd bargaining.

She must have a maid to wait upon her on board "Silverwood." The money must be paid in two instalments, one before starting, and one at the end of the cruise. She would prefer cash rather than check. In her circumstances, large checks from Mr. Sheridan might lead to an awkward situation.

Also "mum was to be the word" about her presence on the yacht until the time for departure. After that, she didn't care how much talk there was. She quite realized that Sheridan was paying for talk.

Phillips agreed to all her demands, in the name of his friend, arranging also to let Miss Divine know the date of sailing, and soon. Meanwhile, she could prepare her wardrobe not only for the voyage, but for Monte Carlo and Algiers.

When everything was clear between them, he bade his hostess good morning and directed the chauffeur to drive to Washington Square. Miles Sheridan had a studio there, where he spent most of his time just now, more as an excuse for getting away from his wife than because he wanted to paint.

He had done some strange, haunting pictures of battle-fields, when he was fighting in France, and had been ready to arrange an exhibition of his work, when he stumbled upon the bald truth of Betty's affair with Paul di Salvano. He had abandoned the exhibition, had ceased to use his club, or to go anywhere except to the studio.

Hartley Phillips, his oldest friend, was the only person he had talked with during the three weeks since the bombshell burst. And Phillips knew that Miles would have given him no confidence, if he hadn't learned the truth about Mrs. Sheridan at the time when it broke upon her husband.

Miles had brought him home late one night, when the two men had been to Washington attending a soldiers' reunion. They had walked into the library of Sheridan's house, to find Betty and the Italian ex-airman together.

"I've fixed up everything with Miss Divine," Phillips told his friend. "Of course, you know I think you're a fool to throw away your reputation for your wife's sake. She doesn't deserve it. But since you're determined, you can't do better than follow my suggestion about this girl.

"By Jove, she's a queer combination. She's got the face of— — well, not of an angel: let's say a goddess; the brains of a parrot and the heart of a hawk. I'm rather interested to know what impression she'll make on you.,

"The same as on you, no doubt. Sheridan answered dully. "I shall see nothing of her at all on board."

"So you think," warned Phillips "But I wouldn't put it past that young person to make a dead set at you, my boy. She's supposed to be engaged to some chap—must be a damned ass to take her—but if she could fasten her claws into you, she'd drop the other prey so quick you wouldn't say 'Jack Robinson'"

"You don't need to warn me," Sheridan smiled grimly. "I suppose your scheme's a good one for the purpose, but I hate these painted harpies. They make me sick I shall be in no danger from Miss Juliet Divine."

WINKY WANK'S RIDE

"Now I'm an Aviator!" cried Winky Wank.

Everybody in Pee Wee Land was very busy. It was washing day for Mrs. Tiny Mite, ironing day for Mrs. Upsedaisy (who had washed the day before), baking day for Mrs. Pry (who had her washing and ironing all done and put away) and cleaning day for Mrs. Jumper.

Every single Pee Wee was busy—even King Snookums and his lord high chancellor.

But one person wasn't as busy as he should have been. Or rather he was busier than he should have been— for he was going to do something that he wasn't allowed to do. And he was sneaking off without anybody seeing him.

That person was Wink Wank Pee Wee.

He slipped out of Pee Wee Land, and skedaddled across the daisy patch and crept across the sass-patch garden to the porch of Farmer Brown' house, where a lovely vine with smelly flowers shaded it from the sun.

The next thing Wink Wank did was to climb the vine like a steeplejack and when he crawled half way up he slipped into one of the smelly flowers and waited.

By n' by there came a buzzing Pretty soon the buzzing stopped.

It was Mister Bee, and he had stopped on the very posey where Wink Wank was hiding. Winky Wank winked at himself and watched his chance.

When Mister Bee was busy drinking up honey juice, didn't the little Pee Wee boy give a spring and land right on Mister Bee's back!

And Mister Bee was so surprised that he almost lot his balance for a minute.

But he didn't lose it—quite—and the next minute he was flying away and buzzing like eleven airplanes He usually only buzzed like one air plane but he as so angry about Winky Wank stealing a ride that he turned on every buzzer he had

"Now, I'm an aviator?" cried Wink Wank, waving his cap with one hand while held onto Mister Bee with the other. I've always wanted to ride a buzzy bee, but mother wouldn't let me. Hurrah!"

What happened then I'll tell you to-morrow.

THE "TROUBLE SHOOTER"

TIMELY TIPS FOR THE AUTO OWNER

By E. H. SCOTT

Where to Have Repairs and Adjustments Made to Your Car

The automobile has not reached the perfect stage yet, although with ordinary care and attention, the modern car is so free from trouble, that a visit to the repair shop is a rare occurrence. However, repairs are sometimes necessary, and worn parts have to be replaced. When repairs are required, you naturally want to have them made promptly and efficiently, and at a reasonable price.

It is surprising the number of automobile owners who hate to take their cars near a repair shop, for they feel that if they do, the repair man will charge them all the traffic will bear and hand them a staggering bill.

I believe I know why such a number of owners feel this way. Here is a case that occurred not so long ago to the owner of a good medium priced car, who for a time was thoroughly convinced there was not a mechanic in the country who knew anything, and that they were all thieves and robbers.

His engine had developed an occasional miss, so he took it to a small repair shop not far from where he lived. The mechanic cocked his head to one side and looked wise, tested each cylinder with his screw driver, then gave it as his opinion that all that was necessary was a new set of spark plugs. A set was installed at a cost of $3.00, but they made no difference to the running were then fitted, for the mechanic in the Ignition. New points were accordingly fitted at a cost of $2.30 and $2.50 for labor to put them in. After this was done the car was taken away, but it still had the miss. It was brought back again, and this time the owner was told it was carbon in the cylinders, or perhaps a weak valve spring. The cylinder head was taken off, the carbon cleaned out, valves ground in at a cost of $12.50 and in addition a new gasket and a valve spring were fitted at a cost of $1.40, making a total of $21.70.

After this had been done, the engine was started up, and the miss still existed. The owner did not feel like letting this "expert" experiment any more, so decided to drive over to the dealer from whom he bought the car, and let the service man have a look at the engine. In just about five minutes, the trouble was found to be dirt in the Carburetor, which was removed, and inside ten minutes, the engine was started and ran just as smooth as silk.

The mechanics at service stations are specially trained men, who are thoroughly familiar with the construction and characteristics of all the various models of the cars they represent. They know every little peculiarity of the engine, and are expert at diagnosing the cause of trouble and in being able to say just what repairs or adjustments are necessary.

The mechanics of an authorized distributor are kept up to date by the visits, at regular intervals, of factory service men, who make the mechanics familiar with the latest and best methods and equipment to perform most efficiently all operations made on the car. This training enables the mechanics to do a job quickly and at a minimum cost.

The service station has all the special equipment and tools necessary to do each job the best and quickest way, and under his contract with the factory, the distributor is compelled to keep a supply of spare parts on hand, so that all replacements can be made without delay.

In work done at the small general repair shops, too much time is sometimes lost in making repairs, owing in most cases to unfamiliarity with the car, and in other cases to lack of the necessary parts or equipment to make the repair properly.

You can get a very good idea of the class a repair shop comes under if you note the cleanliness of the shop and the neat appearance of its mechanics and equipment.

Shops that have parts and tools littered all over the place, and mechanics wandering round in dirty, greasy overalls that have been used for months and never washed, are not the kind of shops that are likely to turn you out a good repair job.

Taking it all round, the best place to have any repairs or replacements made to your car, is at an authorized service station of the car or an established repair shop with reputation, as in the case of Ignition or Carburetor troubles or adjustments, at the service stations of the manufacturer of these units. They are equipped to do the work properly, and since it is to their interest to have you a satisfied user, it stands to reason you will receive more satisfactory service from a service station that is interested in the make of car you drive, or the equipment used on it.

DELICATE GIRLS NEED NEW FOOD

Rich, Red Blood Means Health and Strength.

The anaemia of young girls may be inherited, or it may be caused by bad air, unsuitable food, hasty and irregular eating, insufficient out-of-door exercise and not enough rest and sleep.

It comes on gradually, beginning with languor, indisposition to mental or bodily exertion, irritability and a feeling of fatigue. Later comes the palpitation of the heart, headaches, dizziness following a stooping position, frequent backaches and breathlessness. In a majority of cases constipation is present. There may be no great loss of flesh, but usually the complexion takes on a greenish-yellow pallor.

Cases of this kind, if neglected, become more serious, but if taken in time there is no need to worry. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which are free from any harmful or habit-forming drug, are just the tonic needed to remedy this wretched state of health. Though it is not noticeable, improvement begins with the first dose. As the blood is made rich the pallor leaves the face, strength and activity gradually return and the danger of relapse is very slight.

If any symptom of anaemia appears, prudence suggests that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be given at once, and the sooner they are taken the more speedily will their action improve the blood. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

NEW OVERLAND MODEL ANNOUNCED TODAY

The Red Bird a Cleancut Car With Distinctive Trimmings.

Following an era of unprecedented prosperity with Willys-Overland, the company made announcement during the past week of lower prices and decided improvements in their 1924 line of Willys-Knight and Overland cars. Among other things, it was announced that a bigger, more powerful engine was being installed in the Overland Sedan and Blue Bird models, and this same engine is specified for the new Red Bird.

The Red Bird is, as its name indicates, a car of maroon shade, with long clean-cut lines and distinctive trimmings. It is calculated to meet with instant approval. A genuine English dust-proof top, nickel radiator and fittings with such convenience as cowl lights, glass wings, back-up search light and luggage rack with trunk, combine to make it one of the year's most attractive cars.

Introduction of the new Overland Red Bird is being made at the Canadian National Exhibition and it is hoped that the extensive manufacturing program being follow at the Toronto factories will enable the company to get nation-wide distribution within the next few weeks. J. P. Pulkinghorn, Hunter street will be glad to give all particulars regarding the new car.

EARLY HISTORY CAVAN TOWNSHIP

The Past Reviewed in Brief For Re-Union Boys And Girls.

A Reunion, to some, seems to make the past even more real than the day in which they are living. "The present state of things is the consequences of the past," said wise Ben Johnson, "and to inquire into the sources of circumstances which we enjoy is a natural sequence."

Lieutenant-Governor Simcoe's proclamation in 1792 dividing Upper Canada into 19 counties, is the first official record in which the counties of Northumberland and Durham are specially mentioned and described. Mr. Wilmott surveyed the Townships of Cavan, Manvers, and Cartwright in 1816 and '17, but before that time, by an Act of Parliament passed in 1802, these two counties became part of the District of Newcastle to which Victoria and Peterborough also belonged. The population of this district in 1810 was 2,316 souls. The court house and gaol were at Newcastle, but this being found inconvenient these buildings were later erected at Amherst (Cobourg), though much local controversy and legal strife were the consequence of the selection. It was not until 1831 that an Act was passed making this the "legal" gaol of the district, and indemnifying the magistrates for what was considered "the illegal expenditure of the money applied towards its erection."

In 1810 the assessed value of property in the whole district of Newcastle was only 35,000 pounds. There was then not even a road, the settlers passing from one clearing to another by a path along the lake shore, and instead of the large lake steamers of today the pioneers had canoes, or "bateaus" for navigating the waters. A regulation of those early years states that, "Persons trading from place to place as hawkers and pedlars, being not resident householders, shall obtain from the county treasurer a license for such calling, and pay two pounds for foot pedlars, five pounds when using a horse or horses, seven pounds, ten shillings for a boat, and ten pounds for a docked vessel." Penalty for non-compliance, ten pounds.

In 1849, among items for other townships, appears twenty-five pounds to be expended on improvements of roads and bridges between Cavan and North Monaghan, and twenty pounds on the boundary line between Cavan and Monaghan (now the Provincial Highway). In that year in the list of roads assumed by county council as county roads is mentioned "From the gravel road at the head of Rice Lake, running northerly between the townships of Hamilton, Hope, Cavan and South Monaghan." The warden and a committee of four members of the county council were to "receive and open tenders" for the construction of these roads, contract for the performance of the work, erect toll-gates, appoint toll-gate keepers, agree upon a tariff chargeable at each gate, and begin to collect tolls as soon as five miles, or more, had been completed. "Tolls collected to be applied towards the expense of maintaining and repairing said roads." Ministers of all denominations were to be exempt from paying any toll when in the pursuit of the duties of their calling.

In 1850 the members of the county council from Cavan were: John Thorne and Thomas Syer. In 1851, '52, '53, John Swain and George Hetherington. In 1854, '55, '56 and '57, John Swain and George Hetherington.

The population of Cavan in 1820, the first record made after the township was surveyed, was 244, number of persons assessed 92, valuation of property $2,324. Each ten years mark an increase, the population in 1830 being 1,323, persons assessed 276 and property valuation $14,035; in 1840 the population was 2,869, and property valuation $32,704; in 1850 population 4,438, number of persons assessed 710, and valuation of property $280,000. In 1923 the population is considerably less, being about 2,000, and assessment of property $1,500,000.

Much of the above early history of Cavan Township was gleaned from a small volume published at the office of the "Cobourg Star" in 1857, by Clench and Floyd, entitled: "An Index to the By-Laws, Most Important Standing Resolutions, and Committee Reports of the Municipal Council of the United Counties of Northumberland and Durham, from 1810 to 1857. Compiled from Authentic Sources by Morgan Jellett, Counties' Clerk." The book is valuable because of age and contents, and is the property of Mr. Robert Hootan, 12th Line, Cavan.

RECORD OF HARMLESS FUN BY THE BLAZERS

In Pioneer Days Young Folk Made Amusement For Themselves.

In pioneer days not much amusement was provided for the young folk except such as they made for themselves, and this fact may account for some of the pranks of the "Cavan Blazers," whose good deeds, and they were not few, are probably not so clearly remembered as their mischief-making. Their fun was usually harmless though it aroused the wrath of those who were the victims of their tricks at times, as in the case of one irate farmer who lay in wait for them at night with a loaded musket. Waiting until some time in the early morning hours when sleep had overcome the nocturnal watcher, the "Blazers" came up silently, filched the gun, and fired it off over the sleeper's head, arousing him to fresh maledictions upon their hilarity at the result of the stratagem. A reminder of their visit might await the family in the morning when they found the plough, a clumsy contrivance in those days, dropped down the wide chimney, or one of the waggons astride the roof of the log house or barn. When a "roast" was contemplated, after making a night visit to some hen or turkey roost, they would make a soft paste of clay, roll the fowl in that until it was well coated, place before a hot fire, when feathers and clay would peel off clean, together.

Dr. Henry Turner, Sr., used to relate an amusing experience with the "Cavan Blazers." Soon after coming to Millbrook he was invited to a wedding in St. John's Church, North Cavan. Fresh from Dublin, he went attired in frock coat, silk hat, etc., and following the custom of his native city, placed his hat in the seat nearest the door where it could be conveniently picked up when passing from the church. But when Dr. Turner came to look for his head covering [illegible] way to Millbrook he could see shreds and ribbons of his silk hat strewn along the road. There was only one explanation: "The Blazers did that."

Among the early settlers of Cavan was "Paddy" McGuire, who built the large homestead now owned and occupied by Mrs. F. Johnston, on the Fallis Line, and who did not receive a very warm welcome to the township because in religion "Paddy" was a Catholic. Some amusing stories are told of the means the "Cavan Blazers" took to force him to leave the community amongst others being the time two of his men were ploughing one of his fields when the "Blazers" buried them in the furrow and ploughed right over them.

On another occasion when it was learned that the priest had gone to visit Paddy's home the Orangemen in Millbrook placed streamers of orange and purple ribbons across Tupper street, intending to make the Reverend Father drive "under the colors." Coming down Dawson's hill and seeing the order that awaited him the priest made the driver cover him up under the buffalo robes and so, hidden from view, was driven rapidly from the village. That was his final visit to Paddy's home and the latter soon after moved to another locality.

ADMIRAL SIMS' VISIT.

About fifty years ago Admiral Sims, of the United States navy, spent his summer holidays in Millbrook, visiting his uncle, "Squire" William Sowden. At the time the late "Squire" lived in Dr. H. A. Turner's residence, and until his father, who was a civil engineer, moved from Port Hope to the United States, "Billy" Sowden Sims, then a boy of ten or twelve years, with an older brother, came each summer for their school holidays here. Mr. George Wallace, who has spent all his life in Millbrook, and so is a real "Old Boy," lived with the late Squire Sowden for twenty-five consecutive years, and used to share the same room with the lad who has since become the American Admiral. The large east room upstairs was the one they occupied.

PIONEER HARDSHIPS

Some of the comfortably settled farmers of Cavan township today, who are reaping the fruits of their forefathers' industry and economy, would be astonished could they realize the hardships actually endured by these sturdy pioneers. Driving to market in a fine car or behind good horses, over good roads, it is scarcely possible to grasp the fact that the early settlers, accustomed to hearing the wolves howling round their little clearings, found their way through the woods by means of a blazed trail, and walked nine miles to Smith's Creek (Port Hope), carrying their grain upon their backs. After having the grist ground at the mill the ... bag of flour must be carried home in the same way.

Robert McCamus, who came to Canada from County Cavan, in Ireland, in 1800, settling in Cavan township in 1820, has placed it on record as an actual fact that farmers taking grain to Smith's Creek in the early twenties were refused groceries in exchange, the merchants stating that tea, sugar, molasses, etc., were cash articles and that wheat, at twenty-five cents a bushel, was a drug on the market.

CAMPBELLFORD AND DISTRICT

Foreword of Unveiling at Trent River—Deciding Game Postponed—Personal Mention.

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 25.—A. H. McKeel, chairman of the Trent River Memorial Committee, some time ago wrote Supt. Killaly, of the Trent Canal, asking that the Bessie Butler be chartered to carry returned men from Campbellford to the unveiling ceremony next Sunday, when the monument raised in memory of Pte. Richard Oliver Cowan is dedicated.

Supt. Killaly referred Mr. McKeel to the Department of Railways and Canals at Ottawa, and the energetic chairman at once got in communication with Hon. George P. Graham, head of that branch of the Dominion Government. Mr. Graham writes Mr. McKeel giving the required authority for the use of the boat, and the Bessie Butler will, accordingly, leave here at 12 noon on Sunday. The Northumberland Regiment Band will also go to Trent River on the Government boat.

That Deciding Game.

The game between Trenton and Warkworth, scheduled to be played at Colborne yesterday to decide the championship of the Northumberland League and the winners of the Clarke cup for another year, was postponed on account of the rain until Monday afternoon, on the Colborne diamond, at 4 o'clock. Word was received here, about 2.30, that in spite of the rain which was falling the Trenton team had arrived at Colborne and the Warkworths had started for the scene of the struggle, both teams hoping that the rain would cease and the grounds dry up sufficiently to permit play.

Two cars filled with Campbellford fans went to Colborne, and reached the town just as a heavy electric storm set in and spoiled all chances for a game. Trenton appeared anxious to play, and suggested a seven-innings contest, but Warkworth objected to the prospect of a slippery diamond and a wet ball that no pitcher could control. The veterans, win or lose, seem anxious to have the issue decided on its merits, and in order to give the grounds a chance to dry thoroughly, stood out for postponing the game until Monday. Trenton argued that under the rules the championship must be decided this week to give the winners a chance to play Tweed, the leaders of the Trent Valley League.

Finally the settlement of this point was left to Jake Solomon, the Peterborough magnate, who was got on the telephone, and who ruled that there was nothing to prevent a postponement until Monday.

The fact that Trenton is in Hastings county invests the coming contest with additional interest. There is a keen rivalry between Hastings and Northumberland for the possession of the cup and Warkworth will go into the final with a host of supporters behind them.

Two umpires were on hand yesterday, one from Cobourg and another from Belleville, each to see that the team from his particular county got a square deal. They will be on hand again Monday.

Armour, the clever catcher, who stops them all, whether they come high or low, will do the receiving for Warkworth and when he is on duty, few runners who are wise to his ability to get the ball down to second, have the hardihood to attempt to steal a base when he is on duty. Archie Zufelt, the Veterans' side wheeler, who, more than any other man on the team, has put the Veterans where they are to-day, is in the pink of condition.

This is Warkworth's second year in the league, and it is also the second time Manager Dixon has piloted them to within landing distance of the championship.

The Warkworth players brought word to Colborne that there was a fall of snow in their village Friday forenoon, a phenomenon that was calculated to dampen the baseball ardor of even a Warkworth fan.

New Storehouse Opened.

The new storehouse put up by the Campbellford Cloth Company was opened last night with a dance, given by the employees and their friends. There were over 500 guests during the evening and a pleasant time was spent, Leonard's orchestra furnishing the music. Refreshments were served at midnight. The new building is 200 x 60 feet and the space used by the dancers was 100 feet x 60.

They Had No Banks

IN pioneer days the general merchant often kept the money of his customers for them—there were no banks. Buying and selling were largely by barter only.

The coming of the branch bank filled an important need in every community, and to-day the wise farmer, business man or private individual keeps his money in the bank and makes full use of the many services it has to offer.

Your Health

By DR. CLIFFORD C. ROBINSON

(Drinking Water)

This is by no means an attempt to solve the prohibition question. It is the advocacy of H20 as a drink pure and simple, without any other question being taken into consideration.

The person who thinks that water is a glorious thing when a fellow wants a swim is all right, but please bear in mind that water is just as good internally as externally.

The Japanese have a rule which requires the soldiers in their army to drink at least two quarts of water each day. Statistics show that the Japanese army uses more water and less medicine than any other/ Maybe that's the reason.

Persons who go to spas or watering places to drink the water receive great benefits. This is accounted for, in a large part, simply because they drink more water than do at home, and as a result receive a decided tonic and health renewal.

Water is an absolute necessity for the body and we must get it in some form or other. The purer the better for our health. Naturally then we ask the question. Why, when and how much should we drink?

The reason for taking a sufficient amount of good drinking water every day is obvious. The body is constantly giving off moisture, in some form, during the whole 24 hours. Sometimes more during the night than in the day time. In the secretion of urine, the loss of moisture in the breath, by sweat during the working period and also often at night, the loss is always going on and must be renewed.

There is no hard and fast rule about drinking water. However, there are certain times when it is more healthful than at others.

A glass in the morning will help carry off any secretion of mucus which has accumulated during the rest period, and prepare you for a good-tasting breakfast.

Drinking with meals is all right if you don't bolt your food. Drink throughout the day liberally and a glass on retiring at night. A quart should be a minimum for a day.

Those living near artesian wells will find such water containing iron, sulphur and magnesium very healthy.

The sanitary intelligence of a community is in direct ratio to the number of typhoid cases.

WILL GAS STAY LOW?

Expected to Rise Again, But Not to Old Level.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Promiscuous country-wide slashing of gasoline prices has brought temporary joy to the motorist, but is leaving him in a quandary as to the cause and effect of it all.

With oil gushing out of the earth in such enormous quantities that the flow can hardly be controlled, it is no wonder that a cry should be raised against the prices that existed before the general downfall. It has been known for quite a while that production was far exceeding consumption, despite the enormous increase of automobiles on the highway.

In fact, the situation became so unwieldy that producers were forced to shut down in the refining of oil for gasoline. An oversupply of some eight or ten million gallons, a few months ago, was suggested for distribution among the retailers so as not to cause a panicky situation among the refiners.

Secret Learned

It was this condition, at first held secret among the producers and refiners, that cropped out and was caught upon as good cause for a general reduction in gasoline prices. The cry of some of them that the present low prices in some of the western states have been made at a loss does not seem to cause any worry among those authorities and consumers who started the trouble.

But, generally, oil men believe the situation will level itself down to an average reduction of 2 or 3 cents from the prices that existed before the wild cutting. In some of the states, like Ohio, and farther east, this consecutive reduction has already been made, and it is expected it will act as a stabilizer for the 11 to 16.6 cents a gallon will be raised gradually to about 18 or 20 cents, it is predicted, and thus they will remain at least for another year.

Oil men do not deny that they can afford to cut prices. They realize that is the best way to get rid of their surplus stock. But they do not relish the recent heavy slashing to which they were forced by the action of thegovernor of South Dakota and others. It is below cost, they cry.

Future Prices

Well, the price will return gradually and in a month or more. That is generally taken for granted. It will go back as soon as the present excitement over gasoline dies down.

But it will not go back to the former level. Instead, the price generally will stop at about 18 or 20 cents and remain there perhaps over next winter and spring.

In all, the producers have learned this lesson from their folly:

They are curbing their zeal for the production of gasoline beyond the capacity of consumption.

REAL JOLLY DANCE AT RYE'S PAVILION

Special "Balloon" Feature Much Enjoyed by Merry Trippers Last Night.

To the music of "Yes, We Have No Bananas," the crowd of merry trippers at Rye's Pavilion last night danced the special balloon dance. Vari-colored balloons adorned the ankles of the girls as they stepped and trotted to the music of the four-piece orchestra, which, while it plays jazz music principally, seems to have a softer and more harmonious tone than most of the syncopated specialists. Jack Bryett, violinist, makes a capable leader, assisted by the saxaphone of Bob Allen, the drums of K. Brown, and the accompaniment of Austin Nixon, at the piano.

The pavilion is in a pleasant place, and dancers and lookers-on alike seem to enjoy its fresh newsness. There is a splendid dancing floor, 50 feet by 24, and the new pine woodwork is bright and clean. The arrangement of the hall has a home-like appearance, quite different from the barn-like appearance of many dancing halls. At the north end, a partition portions off a general waiting room, where the refreshment booths are located. At the southern end, at either side of the dance floor, are small, convenient check rooms, one for men and one for women. Flanking the floor on either side is a railed-off space that affords accommodation for watchers. Here are chairs where the public can sit in comfort and observe the very latest thing in dance steps. Around three sides of the hall are screened windows, with heavy wooden shutters. Overhead, a pretty arrangement of pendant-colored paper streamers makes a bright decoration, intermingled with large ornamental balls and Chinese lanterns. It is an artistic and pleasing arrangement throughout with comfort and convenience combined.

A feature of this pavilion is the amount of attention paid to its strict conduct, although there is nothing on the surface to indicate extreme watchfulness. Attendants are placed in both check rooms, stewards are in charge constantly of the dancing floor. Mr. Max Sloan is a careful floor manager, and some one keeps an eye on the crowd that gathers outside.

There is no age limit for dancing these days, and the pavilion has a share of patrons old and young. Last evening, the majority of the patrons were youthful, but, in the audience, there were noticed many elderly people who seemed to be enjoying the evening just as much as the dancers themselves.

Old Documents

In the year 1820 seven families came mfro the north of Ireland and settled on the 12th Concession of Cavan, receiving their grants of land from the Crown; the seven were: Robert Morrow, William McIndoo, Robert Meharry, John Crozier, Moses Blackstock, John Liviston, and another Robert Meharry, a cousin of the first mentioned, who took up his grant on the 13th Line. James McGill and John Seeney were among other pioneers who came from Ireland a year or two later, and also located on the 13th. But of the original settlers only one family, that of Mr. Thomas McIndoo, is still living on the homestead received direct from the Crown, his son, Matthew, making the fourth generation on the land which his great-grandfather and grandfather cleared. Mr. McIndoo has some very old documents in his possession, interesting, both because of age and contents, one of these being his grandfather's certificate of membership in the Masonic Lodge, the address reading: "Brother William McIndoo, Certificate from Lodge No. 753, Rooskey, County Cavan, Ireland. Admitted June 4th, 1804. Declared May 16th, 1920."

The certificate is as follows:

"To all whom it may concern: We hereby certify that the bearer, Brother William McIndoo, is a regular Master Mason of Lodge No. 753, held in Rooskey, in the County of Cavan and Kingdom of Ireland, and during his stay with us he behaved himself an honest and faithful Brother, and as such we do recommend him to all regular Masons round the globe. Given under our hands this 16th day of May, 1820 and of Masonry 5820. I. L. Parr, Master; Thos. Parr, S. Warden; David Wiggin, J. Warden: Wm. Lucas, S. C. Y. Warden.

Equally Interesting

Another equally interesting paper also dating back for 103 years is "William McIndoo's Certificate from the Royal Arch Chapter, Lodge No. 753, Rooskey, County Cavan, Ireland."

"Now we recommend you in the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ to withdraw yourself from every brother that walketh disorderly.

"We, the High Priest, &c., &c., of the Grand Chapter of Royal Arch superexcellent Masons, held under the sanction of Lodge No. 753, in the Town of Rooskey, in the County of Cavan and Kingdom of Ireland, do hereby certify that the bearer, William McIndoo, a Past Master of said Lodge, was by us Installed and Initiated into the Most Sublime Degree of Royal Arch superexcellent Masonry, he having with due Honour and Justice to the Royal Community justly [illegible] the amazing trials of skill and [illegible] attending his admission, and as such we recommend him to all Royal Arch superexcellent Masons round the Globe.

"Given under our Hands and Seal of our Lodge in our Lodge Room at Rooskey, this 16th day of May, A. 1820, and of Masonry 5820. I. L. Parr H.P.; Thos. Parr, 1st G.G.; David Wiggin, 2nd G.G.; Edward Mahood, S.G.W.; John Bannan, J.G.W.: L. Phillips, Secy."

Beautifully Written

Both these certificates are beautifully written on thick parchment paper, yellowed by age but neither torn nor broken, the large seal on the first with attached ribbon being in blue color, and on the second red. Mr. McIndoo has also his father's certificate of membership in the "Loyal Orange Association of British North America." "Fear God," "Honour the King," are axioms each side of King William's picture, and below, the date, 1690, with the words: "Glorious, Pious, and Immortal Memory." The place, "County of Peterborough, District of Peterborough, Held at Peterborough."

"We, the Master, Deputy-Master, and Secretary of the Caledonian Loyal Orange Lodge No. 484, do certify that Brother Matthew McIndoo has regularly received the Degree of a True, Orange, Purple, Blue and Royal Arch Marksman in this, our Association, and that he has conducted himself during his stay among us to our satisfaction. We therefore request that all regular Associations of the Universe do recognize him as such.

"Witness our Hands and Seals this Twenty-ninth day of September, 1854. Thomas Chambers, Master; Wm. Baxter, Deputy-Master; Wm. Eastland, Secretary.

"'Love the Brotherhood.' 'No Surrender.' 'Maintain the Laws.' Printed at Peterborough Review Office."

The lettering in the above is in yellow, red and blue, and in the lower left hand corner is affixed a large red seal.

FRESH AIR CHILDREN SUFFER

Hastings Lodge, at Bolton, Ontario, where poor children, attending "fresh air" camps, have been housed, was destroyed by fire, with $32,000 loss. There were no children in the building at the time of the blaze, it being an interim between the going and coming of two parties.

RODEO RIDERS ARE MAKING MONEY

Broncho-Busters and Wild West Riders Almost As Affluent as the Prize Fighters.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—(United Press).—New York's idea of a first-class sucker is a cow-puncher who dashes widly around an arena on a pony, jumps from his mount to the back of a steer and wrestles the animal to the ground.

Sophisticated city birds also question the inclination that turns a man into a bronk-buster and a wild horse rider at the risk of life and limb for a prize of a few dollars.

During the recent rodeo, which Tex Austin promoted at the Yankee Stadium, the city-breds got a kick out of the demonstration of far western sports, but they couldn't figure where the percentage of the performers made it worth the while.

If the crowds knew what kind of money the champion riders and bull-doggers make a year out of their sport, there would be no doubts about the motives that inspired them to follow such a hazardous profession.

Some of the riders, and many of them, make from $10,00 a year upwards, and the time they spend in actual competition is not much more than that of champion boxers.

Their time is divided mostly between the rodeos at Calgary, Pendleton, Cheyenne and Fort Worth, where the "classic" contests of their game are held. New York has taken so keenly to two of them that the city may soon be a regular stop on the circuit. Champions at the big rodeos find plenty of work in the exhibition line also.

Mike Hastings, who holds the world's speed record for "bull-dogging" and his wife, Fox Hastings, a champion rider, made $25,000 between them last year, it is understood.

INTENSIVE TRAINING BY FIRPO FOR FIGHT

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press.)— Luis Angel Firpo to-day increased his programme of training for his title match with Jack Dempsey in New York September 14th.

In addition to private workout in his little white "Casa De Los Angeles" in Chelsea, the Argentine went for a short road jaunt in the lonely country on the outskirts of the city before breakfast. Accompanied by Horatio Lavalle, the dapper little director of general activities in camp, Natalio Pera, his Argentine sparring mate, and a couple of other members of the party, Firpo jogged for several miles, then shadow boxed and wrestled with those accompanying him.

Ford Planetary Transmission

This unique Ford feature, besides giving the Ford engine unusual pulling power, is also responsible for the remarkable EASE OF CONTROLLING the Ford car. The quick shift from one speed to another, and to reverse, without clashes of gears is something impossible with any other type of transmission.

What Do You Know About the Ford

Everybody knows that the Ford has power to pull itself out of holes that mire other cars---but how many know why? Do you?

The Ford not only has a big surplus of power but it utilizes that power in a unique way.

Watch a sailor ease a big steamer into the dock. He takes a turn of the rope around a snubbing post—and single-handed, brings the boat to a stop.

The Ford engine engages its power in a similar way. Ford, alone among cars, has a "planetary transmission" which makes possible a tremendous pull without jarring either engine or chassis.

The Ford is taken by everyone on faith—because it is a Ford. A nice compliment!

But it is interesting to anyone to learn why a Ford does so much that is impossible to any car but a Ford. Take a few minutes with a Ford dealer and get better acquainted with the Ford.

BURKE SCORED IN BOUT WITH CHAMP

Weakness in Dempsey's Defence Is Uncovered By Pittsburgh Boxer.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press.)— Jack Burke, the hard-hitting Pittsburg light heavyweight, uncovered a weakness in Jack Dempsey's defence yesterday which the world's heavyweight champion must correct before he faces Luis Angel Firpo, in their fifteen round contest at the Polo Grounds Sept. 14.

Burke, an accurate and stiff hitter, found Dempsey an easy target for right hand blows, the most effective punch in Firpo's collection. He nailed the champion with solid smashes with such speed that Dempsey was fighting mad at the finish of their two slugging rounds!

In the first Burke reached Dempsey's face and jaw four straight times, without a return. He also landed a one-two ppunch, following this up with lefts and rights that knocked the champion's headgear to rakish angles. Dempsey landed only one effective blow in the first round, but scored more frequently in the second, although observers agree that Burke clearly had the better of the title holder. Burke left the ring bleeding from the mouth and nose as a result of stopping left hooks.

Firpo Has Started His Secret Training.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press.) — Luis Angel Firpo has started training in secrecy.

In addition to the six rounds he boxed in public yesterday at Atlantic Park, the Argentine began work in his cottage in Chelsea. Inside the house he has had rigged for him a 200 pound sand bag and a punching bag and upon these he lets loose his power.

The cottage workout takes place in the morning before breakfast instead of the customary road ijaunt.

The sparring engagement yesterday afternoon consisted of two rounds each with Natalio Angel Pera, the Buenos Aires dandy, Joe McCann, the Newark heavyweight and Frank Koebele, of Brooklyn.

Tentative Dates For World's Series.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.— (Canadian Press.)—This year's world's series between National and American League champions will start on Oct. 9 or 10, according to present plans.

The major league season, closing a week later than in 1922, is scheduled to end Oct. 7. Should both New York clubs maintain their places at the top for the third successive year, the annual title struggle probably will begin Tuesday, Oct. 9. In the event either or both is displaced, however, the champion teams separated by a greater distance, the series likely would start Oct. 10.

No action on details, however, will be taken by baseball officials until more certainty exists as to the outcome of the present races.

ALL PREPARED FOR HEAVYWEIGHT BOUT

Tex Rickard Made Formal Application to the Boxing Commission Yesterday.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.— (Canadian Press.)—The New York State Athletic Commission yesterday cleared the way for the Luis Firpo-Jack Dempsey heavyweight title bout at the Polo Grounds Sept. 14, when it granted licenses for the contest to the champion and his manager, Jack Kearns.

Dempsey held state license No. 1 for some time after he won the heavyweight crown from Jess Willard, but the term of that permit had expired and a renewal was necessary. Firpo already holds a state license.

Formal application by Promoter Tex Rickard for a permit to stage the bout was submitted and copies of his cotnract with Firpo and Dempsey filed, in accordance with regulatoins, but the commission, while making no announcement was understood to have deferred final action on them until next week's meeting.

HASTINGS WINNERS SEMI-FINAL GAME

Drubbed Orillia Boys in O. A. L. A. Fixture by Score of 10 to 3.

HASTINGS, August 25. — The only semi-final game scheduled in the O.A.L.A. was played at Hastings yesterday. This is the first semi-final Hastings has won since the old Iron Clads trimmed every team in these parts in the year 1888.

A small crowd was in attendance to-day owing to the weatherman but the crowd was treated to some good lacrosse at times, as the Hastings boys are the finest bunch of stick-handlers in Eastern Ontario, and play the game like old veterans.

The win of the wearers of the winged foot and red and green makes them the undisputed juvenile champions of Eastern Ontario, having defeated all O.A.L.A. teams east of Toronto.

The Hastings boys had it all around their opponents, and had them beaten in combination, stick-handling and team work.

Dunn of Orillia worked like a Trojan as field captain, trying to pull out a victory for his team, and when he woke up he was forced to realize that when it comes to lacrosse and the science connected with the game, Dad Clapper knows a few things about the grand old game.

The game had not gone long when Jack Cowell, a graduate of last year's Midgets, notched the first for Hastings and the boys of the Trent kept forcing the play in the Northeners' territory till the first quarter ended Hastings 3, Orillia 1.

In the second Gould started the scoring and from then all all the Hastings boys took part making the quarter 10 to 3 for Hastings.

Not contented with their lead, the Hastings boys kept bombarding the visitors' nets, and in the last two quarters had all the play, as the visitors were completely at a loss with the Hastings defence.

The game was handled by Len Smith, of Toronto. He kept the game well in hand, and penalized one player of each side for minor infractions of the playing rules.

It would be extremely difficult to pick the stars of the winning team; they were all stars; they caught well, passed well and were always in the game.

The Line-Ups.

Orillia—Goal, Hill; point, Guille; cover point, Raney; 1st defence, Western; 2nd defence, W. Booth; centre, Jones; 2nd home, Tennant; 1st home, T. Booth; outside home, Wilkinson; inside, Cramp; subs., Hudson, Couler and Kerr.

Hastings—Goal, Lambert; point, Cochrane; cover point, Saunders; 1st defence, Dodd; 2nd defence, Archer; centre, Flint; 2nd home, Cruickshanks; 1st home, Gould; outside, Cowell; inside, Baker; subs., Way, McArthur, Walsh, White.

JOE BENZ WAS A WASH DAY PITCHER

Did Not Show Up As Well As Expected So Didn't Get Any Week - End Games.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—Managing the Chicago White Sox is far from an easy job.

The Chicago players are no harder to handle than any other club. It is the kitchen cabinet advice that keeps a manager of the White Sox in hot water.

In baseball circles the inference is that President Comiskey still does a little managing on the side. It has been said that Comiskey makes the pitching selections for any game of more than ordinary importance.

This is rather borne out by a story they tell on Clarence Rowland when he was managing the Sox. It is a story that has a humorous angle and is worth reciting for that reason if no other.

In 1917 when the Sox won the pennant and the world series, at one stage of the race Rowland was hard pressed for pitchers. Joe Benz, figured on as a valuable man, had failed to come through and had been of little use.

When the Athletics came to Chicago for a series that opened on Friday, Rowland in desperation decided to tempt fate by starting Benz. It is a well-known fact in baseball circles that the home team likes to win on Friday and Saturday. Winning on Friday helps the Saturday crowd, while a Saturday victory always has a decided effect on the Sunday attendance.

According to the story, Benz, after being handed a seven-run lead, was unable to hold it and was removed late in the game, Chicago finally winning 9 to 7.

When Rowland dropped into Comiskey's office after the game he was taken to task for using Benz. The Sox manager pointed out that he was forced to use him because of the crippled condition of his pitching staff. To which Comiskey is said to have replied:

"That all may be true, but Benz is no Friday pitcher. Never use him with Saturday and Sunday crowds to be considered. Benz is a Monday pitcher."

From that time on Joe Benz was called the "wash-day pitcher" by his teammates.

Bull Successfully Defended His Title.

MONTREAL, Aug. 25. — (Canadian Press).—Frankie Bull, of Toronto, Canadian lightweight champion, successfully defended his title here last night against George Gerardin in a fast ten-round bout. Gerardin was in distress in the fourth and tenth rounds, but came back after the first and battled his way through to the final gong. The local boy assimilated some terrific punches. Bull weighed 137 and Gerardin 128¼ pounds.

In the opening bout, the tough old sailor, Harry Jones, took the count from George Gibbons, Waterbury, Conn., in the fifth round. Gibbons outweighed Jones by over 11 pounds.

Galt, Aug. 24.—All attendance records for baseball games in Ontario were smashed Wednesday at the Galt-Guelph game in Riverside Park, Preston, there being exactly 6,339 paid admissions, and with the boys and those who got in and did not pay, it is estimated they were close to 8,000 on the grounds. By actual count there were 778 automobiles in the park. The Terriers have been ordered to meet the winners of the Lake Shore League in the first round of the O.B.A.A. play-off, and if the Brantford team is declared a winner the first game will be here Saturday and the return next Wednesday. There is a dispute in the Lake Shore League over the leadership, but they must have a winner to play Saturday to abide by the O.B.A.A. ruling.

Here is a good story the players are telling on a former star catcher, now acting as coach for one of the big league teams.

In the spring of this year the former star receiver was sent south in charge of the pitchers and catchers of his club. He was instructed to get them in the best possible shape before the arrival of the regulars.

It seems the sporting editor of one of the papers thought it would be a good idea to give the fans of the home town a little dope on what the battery players were doing in the south. Not caring to send a correspondent south so far in advance of the main squad he wired the coach as follows:

"Please send 200 words every evening on what the pitchers and catchers are doing. Dig up some new angle each day, so the stuff will have a variety. Here is the wire that came back from the coach:

"Sorry. Impossible for me to send 200 different words every day. I can't spell than many."

CAMPBELLFORD LAWN BOWLING ENDED IN RAIN

Some Outside Rinks Defaulted and Singles Were Cancelled—Belleville Man Won Consolation Prize.

WEATHER ONLY HITCH

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 25—The heavy rain that fell Friday after noon marred the finish of the lawn bowling tournament and it was found necessary to cancel the singles One or two of the rinks from outside, too defaulted in the doubles' finals as they left for home, when it seemed that play was to be stopped by the weather.

Ramsay of Belleville, won the consolation prizes with the rink from Warkworth, skipped by Buchanan, as the runners up.

The Cobourg rink that won the silver cup, the capital prize of the tournament were first and second in the finals for the doubles, Guillot and Skitch playing against Guillot and McCullough the two opponents of the same name being brothers. On account of the rain they decided to have the play-off for the prize at Cobourg. The cup, which was won Thursday by the Skitch rink is the fourth trophy these players have carried to Cobourg this year.

One of the best games in the doubles preliminary was that between the Ryan brothers of Kingston and A. J. Meyers and L. B. Glover. One of the visitors, Ed. Ryan made some of the best shots of the tournament but the Campbellford men were not far behind at any stage of the game and the final score was 13 to 10 in favor of the brothers. The Ryans were eliminated in the first round of the doubles when they went up against Guillot and Skitch, the invincibles from Cobourg. The score being 13 to 12. The New Club House.

The new club house attracted favourable comment from all of the visiting bowlers, and the building was pronounced a standing credit to the members. The place was gaily decorated with flags, the national banner of the United States having a place in the display, and the interior had been made bright and home-like by the ladies of the club, who acted as hostesses. Dainty meals, ice-cream and soft drinks were served, and the club finds itself richer by over $100.00 through the energy of the ladies, who remained on duty throughout the tournament Everything went off smoothly, and except for the unfavourable weather yesterday afternoon, there was not a single hitch in the arrangements.

The location of the grounds and the condition of the seven greens were also regarded as ideal by the visitors who saw them for the first time.

PUZZLING PLAYS

(BY BILLY EVANS)

THE PLAY

The manager of the visiting team, as is customary, hands the umpire his lineup prior to the start of the game. On the visiting team are two third basemen of about equal merit.

Jones, who is a left-handed batter, is used against right-handed pitchers while Smith, who bats right-handed, is always called upon when a southpaw twirls for the opposition.

Seeing a southpaw warming up for the opposing team, the manager of the visiting club includes Smith as his third baseman in the batting order which he gives to the umpire. He then absent-mindedly informs Jones that he will play third base.

Jones comes to the bat n the first inning with two men on the bases and triples, scoring both runners.

The team in the field then appeals to the umpire, claiming that Smith is the player the manager gave the umpire as the third baseman in the batting order, and that when Jones batted he was an improper batsman, that Smith, the proper batsman should be called out and the two runners sent back to their original bases.

The umpire so ruled. Was he right?

THE INTERPRETATION

The umpire was in error when he so ruled.

While Smith was the player given in the batting order to play third when Jones went to bat in Smith's place, he assumed that position in the lineup and Smith was automatically through for the day. Jones merely became the successor of Smith, even though the umpire wasn't notified of the change. The two runs score.

In the majors it is possible to fine the manager of the team that so offends $25 for such an act of carelessness.

BASEBALL GAME PLAYED WITH AID FLOOD LIGHT

LYNN, Mass., August 25 (Canadian Press). — A nine-inning baseball game on a regulation diamond was played last night on the field of the Athletic Association of the General Electric Company employees in this city. Powerful electric flood lights provided the illumination and the players found no difficulty in hitting and fielding, while the spectators were able to observe every play.

GOLF NOTES

THE PETERBORO-LAKEVIEW.

The score made by the different players was as follows:

| D. A. McDonald | 3 |
| H. Y. Claxton | 3 |
| W. A. Price | 3 |
| F. Tremble | 3 |
| Total | 25 |

The method of scoring was one point for each nine holes and one for the winner of the whole eighteen.

As will be seen from the above score, A. H. Stratton won both nines and the game; R. Abbott won one nine, tied the second win and won the game. A. Mowat won one nine, and J. W. McDermid tied one nine.

This shows that the play was closer than the score would appear to indicate.

Wednesday's game will attract a good crowd of fans from all over the district, including a large delegation from Bethany

Peterboro fans are expected to turn out and support the Cogs in their battle

PROTEST UPHELD BY THE COMMITTEE

The protest entered by Sacred Heart against the win of the Maple Leafs at Riverside Park on Thursday evening, was upheld by the protest committee of the City League at a meeting held last night. The Leafs admitted that the player used by them in the game was not eligible and the protest committee took only a few minutes to reach a decision. The committee did not attempt to deal with the technicalities of the protest, brought about by reason of the Umpire-in-chief declares the game forfeited by Sacred Heart in the seventh.

It now remains for the City League Moguls to reach the final decision in regard to the game.

AT THE ROYAL.

ROMANCE REBORN IN FAMOUS NOVEL.

"Thorns and Orange Blossoms," Bertha M. Clay's Great Novel, Comes to Royal Monday.

Lovers of romance will want to know that "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" which opens at the Royal Monday at 2.30 and 8 p.m., is a film of excellence in every respect. Those who have long-waited for this world-famed novel to reach the screen will be thoroughly satisfied, as it comes to Peterboro audiences highly recommended.

The very setting of the story breathes romance. Sunny Spain, land of roses, dark eyes and the clink of castenets, is portrayed in scenes of great beauty. Then the action shifts to New Orleans, where fine old southern homes replace the background of picturesque Madrid.

In addition to the contrast of settings there is the interesting preference to be drawn between two types of feminine beauty. Estelle Taylor is an alluring senorita while Edith Roberts portrays the little blonde American girl whose love for a young southern merchant battles against his infatuation for the Spanish prima donna.

A word here about the acting ability of Kenneth Harlan who plays the much tried American. Harlan gives the most satisfactory performance to be credited recently to a leading man. He is a thoroughly convincing type of young southerner and affords an extremely difficult role, an interpretation of excelling force. The great following of picture goers who have long praised his work with the Talmadge sisters will be more than ever convinced that Harlan deserves a place of high esteem among screen artists.

CAPITOL THEATRE TO HAVE MAT. EVERY DAY

Peterboro's popular theatre starts on Monday to run a "matinee daily". This news will certainly gladden the hearts of the movie fans. "Three Wise Fools," John Golden's great stage success will be shown for the first half of next week and Rex Beach's "The Spoilers" the 1923 version of the romance of Gold Rush Days in Alaska" shown the last half of next week. The theatre opens at two and the photoplays commence at two-thirty.

FASCINATING ROMANCE AT THE CAPITOL

A corking good picture is Goldwyn's film version of Austin Strong's successful stage play, "Three Wise Fools," which comes to the Capitol Theatre for three days commencing Monday matinee. It has been directed by King Vidor with all of his feeling for actuality in characterization, in atmosphere and in background.

It's story is that of three old bachelors who agree to take charge of the grown daughter of the girl who had rejected the love of all three of them in their youth. Comedy complications ensue fast and furiously and soon become interwoven in a series of dramatic incidents which are solved happily for all concerned after the girl has been jailed on a charge of aiding and abetting three criminals to break out of prison. "Three Wise Fools" has almost everything in it that the most jaded fan could wish for—comedy, romance, reality, thrills and spectacular moments.

Its cast is of the kind that Goldwyn has accustomed picturegoers to expect. Eleanor Boardman, who jumped into screen fame with her acting of the role of Remember Steddon in Ruper Hughes' "Souls for Sale," is the girl—the "three wise fools" are claude Gillingwater, William H. Crane and Alec Francis. The cast includes John Sainpolis, Brinsley Shaw, Fred Esmelton, William Haines, Lucien Littlefield, ZaSu Pitts, Martha Mattox, Craig Biddle, Jr., Creighton Hale and Raymond Hatton.

AT THE GRAND.

The original Third Division C.E.F. entertainers, now known as the "Originals," and who appeared here last season with their brilliant revue "Full O' Pep", will return this season with an entirely new and highly spectacular production entitled "Rapid Fire," appearing here September 3-4 with all the old favorites including fifteen former favorite of the Dumbells and two new artists. The Company opens with a matinee Monday (Labor Day) with Monday and Tuesday evening performances.

This unique band of Canadian soldier funmakers who started first behind the lines in France is probably the only theatrical organization of its kind in the world. For three and a half years they played to the Canadian and Allied troops in France and Belgium and later appeared in all the big cities such as Brussels, Mons, London, New York and Boston with unprecedented success during which time they played before the king and queen of Belgium, British Royalty, Allied Army and Navy chiefs and many other notables. They are now in their fifth triumphal year in Canada, having broken all theatrical records in every town and city from coast to coast, first in "Biff Bing Bang", later in the "Dumbells revue of 1922" and last season in their own production "Full O' Pep."

Arthur (Jock) Holland has been spending the summer in England and sailed last week for Montreal with several trunks full of costumes, wigs, shoes and lighting effects purchased in London for the new revue the boy are now rehearsing in Toronto. It is understood that our old friends "Red" Newman will this season offer us some unique numbers which have never been heard before outside of London, including several of Albert Chevalier's greatest masterpieces such as "The Old Kent Road" and "Wot Cheer." Jimmie Goode, Alan Murray, Bob Anderson, Fred Fenwick, Bill Tenent, Tom Young, Bertram Langley, Charlie McLean, Ted Charter, Percy Campbell, Ivor Ayre, Leonard Young and Jerry Bradford have all been spending a well earned holiday in different parts of Canada and are all back again working on the new show with the finest mterial they picked from the great productions in London and elsewhere.

Leonard Young, the original "Duchess", is back with the boys again after a year of directing Montreal's Community Players, and is this season managing director of the Originals. A new and outstanding member of the Company this season will be Gene Pearson who is said to possess the finest natural soprano voice of any female impersonator before the public. He is a Toronto boy who, since the war, has made a tremendous hit in vaudeville. A leading New York critic, when he sang there recently, declared he had a voice like Galli Curci.

Several magnificent concerted numbers will be featured in "Rapid Fire" including a brilliant Egyptian number, a Viennese number of the 1850 period and a mammoth starlight scene with several unusual and spectacular electrical effects. The Originals make an extended tour of Western Canada and the Northwestern States this season playing Seattle, Portland, Spokane, Tacoma as well as all the Canadian cities from Vancouver to Halifax on their way east.

The box office opens next Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

A QUAINT VOLUME DATING BACK TO 1817

"The leaves of many modern books are often so badly put together they will not bear one thorough opening and examination." But this cannot be said of a quaint volume, dating back to 1817, which Mrs. Robert Hootan, 12th Line, Cavan, has in her possession and which, in spite of being 106 years old, is practically unimpaired, the back secure and leaves firmly in place. It was given as a reward to a relative of Mrs. Hootan's grandfather, John Swain, whose name is so intimately connected with Cavan Township history, by the "Association for Promoting the Christian Religion. Incorporated 1800." The book is entitled: "A Companion for the Festivals and Fasts, of the Church of England, with Collects and Prayers for each Solemnity," by Robert Nelson, Esq., and is marked "The Thirty-Third Edition. Printed by William Watson, 7 Chapel Street, Dublin, 1817."

Mrs. Hootan has also among her grandfather's effects some of the original Crown Deeds conveying grants of land in Canada to early settlers, among them being one to a Peter Brouse, which is in an excellent state of preservation, and was issued on August 22nd, 1816, in the reign of George the Third. The Old English custom of using the letter "f" instead of "s" is the form of spelling in the deed.

A LONELY TOMBSTONE ATTRACTS ATTENTION

Driving along the road east from Fairmount church a lonely tombstone is noticed—the only one left standing in what was once a small cemetery where many of the pioneer families found a last resting-place, and in which a Presbyterian church once stood. "Old Boys and Girls" from the 12th and 13th concessions, returning for the Reunion, will know the spot and may possibly have had relatives removed to another cemetery when this one fell into disuse. The one stone has the inscription:

Erected
To the Memory of George Houston who died
June 3rd, 1847
From County Cavan, Parish of Sharcock, Ireland.
Aged 40 years.

"O thou my soul, bless God the Lord,

THE NAME SWAIN IS NOTED ONE IN CAVAN

The name "Swain" is a noted one in this township, the descendants of the pioneer, John Swain, first reeve of Cavan, who came to this neighborhood in 1820 and lived to the ripe age of 89 years, and who was always noted for his genial and hospitable disposition, being numerous and prosperous. The family will hold their annual Reunion this year on Monday of the Cavan and Millbrook Old Boys and Girls' Reunion—a circle within a circle—one adding interest and numbers to the other. This family gathering, which one hundred and fifty, or more guests assemble, has in the past been held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hootan, 12th Line, Cavan. Mrs. Hootan and Mrs. J. Douglas, Cavanville, are granddaughters of John Swain, and hostesses for the occasion. Mr. Hootan has heard his mother, Elizabeth Meharry, more than once tell of walking from Little York (Toronto), carrying her baby in her arms, finding her way through the woods by means of a blazed trail, to the 13th Concession of Cavan—a distance of sixty-six miles—in twenty-four hours. They were no striplings, those pioneers.

ENGLAND PREPARES FOR THE OLYMPIAD.

Crack Team in View For 1924—Campaign to Raise Money.

LONDON, Aug. 25. — (Associated Press.)— Britain has set out to win the next Olympiad and, if the trick is not pulled off, it will not be the fault of the English public in general which is giving its money to send a crack team to the games in 1924. It has been generally admitted that England has lost much of her athletic supremacy during the last decade, and to regain this a leading London newspaper has started a campaign for $200,000, the sum estimated as necessary to get together a team and send it to the Paris games next year.

The campaign has been on only three weeks, but the flood of small checks has been continuous, and many of the large English firms haves sent in donations. Efforts already are being made to form the Olympic team, the training of which is to begin at once under the supervision of the best English coaches.

The first recruit to the team is Harold Abrahams, the Cambridge captain and star athlete, who has signed a contract to appear at the Olympiad.

Great Japanese Family Extinguished By Death.

TOKIO, Aug. 25. — (Associated Press.)—The family most closely related to the Imperial clan became extinct with the recent death of Dowager Princess Yasuko Arisugawa.

The late princess, who died early in July, was the widow of Admiral Prince Takehito Arisugawa, who enjoyed the most profound trust of the late Emperor Meiji and was the advisor of the present emperor when the latter was crown prince. Arisugawa was one of the heroes of the Russo-Japanese war. Their only son died when 15 years of age.

There is a daughter who married into the family of Prince Tokugawa, but in accordance with the provisions of the Imperial House law a princely family becomes extinct when there is no male issue.

AN INTERVIEW WITH U.S. RAILWAY HEAD

Mr. D. C. Moon of N.Y.C. Lines Says State-Owned Railways a Mistake.

MONTREAL, Aug. 25. — "State-owned lines are a gigantic mistake, and a source of loss to almost every country owning them, in the United States, anyway, and, generally everywhere," said Mr. D. C. Moon, the veteran assistant to the vice-president of the New York Central lines, with offices at Cleveland, O. Mr. Moon and a party were in Montreal returning from the delightful Saguenay trip, as the guests of the Canada Steamship Lines.

Discussing general railway conditions in the United States with a press representative, he said that the various company-owned lines operating in the United States were enjoying a much better general state of affairs than they had while the railways were under the direct control of the United States government, despite conditions of trade, and the difficulties regarding export trade.

"I have been nearly fifty years in the service of the New York Central Lines," said Mr. Moon, and the longer I am engaged in railway work the more thoroughly I am convinced that there is nothing like competition for railroads to give good and successful service.

"State-owned lines are a gigantic mistake and our own experiment with government control in the United States, while perhaps necessary as a war measure, has entailed a great burden on the public at large. As to your own problems in Canada I do not care to discuss them here. The effect of the McAdoo award with regard to wages and working conditions had been demoralizing to the railways in the United States, while he knew that its effects had been seriously felt in Canada also. In order to meet the great increase in operating costs, that its increased wages, both directly a nd indirectly through working conditions had entailed, the railway companies had been compelled to increase rates, especially freight rates, to make both ends meet as far as possible. This has not been only unpopular with the general public but a considerable burden on commerce, but there was no help for it. Mr. Moon said he was a little afraid that there was some unrest among the railway employees in the United States tending towards a movement for increased wages, but he hoped that matters would be straightened out. In conclusion he said he had been delighted with his trip through the province of Quebec and especially the Saguenay.

DECLARE MOTHERS RESPONSIBLE FOR NAUGHTY CHILDREN.

Excessive Urging to a Certain Course Often Breeds Obstinacy, Say Prominent Doctors.

PORTSMOUTH, England, Aug. 25.—(Associated Press). — Children supposed to be suffering from nervous disorders are often merely naughty. This is the verdict of some of England's greatest doctors. In their discussion of one thing and another in the field of human weaknesses at their recent conference here, the physicians devoted quite a lot of time to bad little boys and girls. They agreed that most children revel in pranks for the sheer fun of exasperating their parents. Sometimes they cut up and make a perfect nuisance of themselves just to attract attention.

The doctors did not blame the younger generation for its misconduct. They seemed to think mothers are mostly to blame if their offspring are naughty. To their mind, if mother shows she is distressed and aggravated when little junior eats dirt, or walks in mud with his new Sunday shoes, or satisfies some other prankish whim, she can count on it that junior is going to accept the first opportunity to do it again. The doctors did not say it would be a good thing for parents to snub their children once in a while, but they left the impression that this might be beneficial.

Children who are always refusing food are not necessarily suffering from some nervous complaint, the doctors said. Often they are merely obstinate because of excessive urging from parents or nurses. Contrariwise, the children of the slums whose parents have difficulty in keeping the larder laden, often reveal the opposite fault. They demand what they cannot get, and the response to their clamor for more helpings is that food is doled out grudgingly, accompanied by many complaints on the enormity of the child's appetite.

Students of racial traits were interested in the report of Doctor Pabha, whose work is conducted in London's poor East End. He said 80 per cent. of the children he had to deal with were Jews, and he found among them very little nervousness, but among the 20 per cent. of Gentiles, there was almost universal nervousness.

ENTERTAINING GROUP OF MINING ENGINEERS

KIRKLAND LAKE, Aug. 25.—(Canadian Press.)— Mine operators of the Kirkland Lake district are entertaining a group of mining engineers, the biggest so far to visit this field. Engineers from various parts of the world are here over one hundred strong.

The rich gold mines of the Kirkland Lake district have proved to be a revelation to a great many of the visitors. Some of the visitors say they are undoubtedly the richest on earth.

E. P. Mathewson of the American Institute, expressed the opinion that although the mines of Cobalt have produced close to 340,000,000 ounces of silver, yet, in his opinion, the field will continue to produce the metal in important quantities long after the present miners are edad.

Of two friends staying at an English hostelry where most kers fit most doors, one went off to bed, undressed, and turned in, mistaking his friend's room for his own. Half an hour later the friend followed, saw his bed was occupied, and returned to the coffee room.

"Did you see me go to my room just nowi" he said to the night porter.

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"Well, then, why didn't you tell me I'd gone to bed already?" he grunted, and continued to finish the night on a chair in front of the fire.

LOST 13 DAYS IN THE WOODS MAN IS CRAZED

Fisherman Travelled Day and Night in a Five-Mile Circuit Shouting for Help.

AFRAID OF FIRE

ISHPEMING, Mich., Aug. 27. — After wandering 13 days in the woods near Silver Lake, fearing to use matches or cook food he carried because of danger of setting the forest afire, William C. McKinley, of Rockford, Ill., was found by searchers Saturday.

McKinley became lost while on a fishing trip. Unable to get his bearings he travelled day and night in a five-mile circle, shouting for help. For a week his cries were heard by fishermen on the opposite shore of the lake, but they were unable to rescue him because of the rough water. Searchers also became confused owing to echoes and sought him in the wrong direction.

George Wommer and Rick Anderson, trappers, finally navigated the stormy lake and came upon the wanderer. He was half-crazed and they had to threaten to shoot him to keep him from running away.

Face Haggard.

McKinley's clothing was torn and his face haggard. He carried blankets, however, that helped him keep fairly comfortable at night, but he carried no weapons. He is staying at Anderson's camp until he recovers physically.

GERMANY FINDS GOLD IN HILLS

Old Mines, Worked Years Ago, Reopened and New Discoveries Raise Hopes

By GUS M. OEHM.

BERLIN, Aug. 27—(United Press) —Germany, in dire need of gold to stabilize her finances, is turning to the mountainous regions of her southland, where gold — in greater or lesser quantities—is to be found.

German prospectors, working with governmental sanction, are wielding the pick and sifting the sands as the lure of gold, with which to pay reparations, stabilize the mark, and enrich the individual draws them to the old and new fields.

Bags of Yellow Dust.

That their efforts are not entirely in vain, and that the possibility of striking a really paying vein of gold, is evidenced by the fact that already small bags of yellow dust and even an occasional valuable nugget are found.

This—though it may be slight—reward is sufficient to keep workers plugging away from early morning until late at night, and, should gold be found in paying quantities, it is hoped, much of Germany's misery would be at least partially alleviated.

One of the principal fields now being worked is in the Waldeck region. Back in 1868 gold prospectors gave up the idea of finding sufficient gold in this region, and the mines were closed. However, recently this section has been showing paydirt again. Ore has actually been uncovered in an area, covering 25 kilometers, in this region, which, according to analysis in Berlin, shows 40 grams of gold to the ton.

Prospectors at Work.

Prospectors, encouraged by this showing, have real hopes of finding heavier and more lucrative deposits. A region nearby, which, though heretofore unexplored, will in the immediate future probably become what Germans hope will be a continental Klondike. The government is co-operating and plans are already being formed to extract such gold as is found by means of a chemical process, whereby less than 10 per cent. of the gold uncovered is lost.

"Everything points to a prosperous resumption of this mining," Dr. Beischlag, mine expert, declares, "but of this new gold production we hope will come a strengthening of the productive powers of our poverty stricken fatherland."

Besides, the possibilities in Waldeck, the gold area in the Fichtel mountains, near Kronach, offer hope to Germany's "forty-niners." In fact, a newly organized and incorporated company called "Fichtel-Gold," has taken over the territory and is prepared to begin work on a large scale. In 1546 gold was mined in this district, but following the 30-years-war efforts to continue were given up.

This summer German prospectors revisited the area with an experimental expedition and found that there was sufficient gold available to warrant re-opening of the mines. From the results of these trials it is believed that it will be possible immediately to excavate 70 tons of stone per day and obtain at least nine grams per ton—or more than 600 grams of gold daily.

The company evidently is in earnest, having obtained a staff of experts from South Africa, who know the gold mining game probably as no other group of experts in the world. These men declare their opinion is that the Fichtel mountain district will yield as much gold per ton of waste as the mines in Johannesburg.

Cuts Picture of Hubby and Self Apart in Court

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Mrs. Shirley Schoen, 30 years old, of Yonkers, appearing in Yonkers City Court to seek alimony from William Schoen, emphasized her contempt for him by taking a pair of scissors and cutting their pictures, which appeared in a group, apart.

Mayor W. M. Taussig, a visitor to court, watched the shearing process.

"I don't care to let him have my picture," she told Judge Charles W. Boote, "and I don't care to have his."

Mrs. Schoen surrendered some Liberty bonds belonging to her husband, then asked the Judge to have her husband mail his cheque for her alimony to her.

She is employed as a professional nurse, so all the husband will have to contribute is $7 weekly.

OTTAWA SEEKS TO RETAIN MEN

Claims That Harvesters From Britain Are Not Quitters, But the Right Sort Settlers.

OTTAWA, Aug. 27.—A man who puts $60 into a passage to Canada on a promise of hard work at this end is the right sort and will not quit over a little difficulty."

This was the declaration made by F. C. Blair, of the Department of Immigration, in stating the belief that the larger percentage of the 12,000 Britishers brought over to help with the harvest would remain in Canada and settle on the land. The Department, he emphasized, would make a determined effort to keep the majority of these men in the Dominion.

Mr. Blair said that all the British harvesters were now provided for.

Commenting on the arrival of these men and the recent complaints that many of them were stranded in Winnipeg, Mr. Blair said that the experiment of bringing them out was absolutely without precedent and, had harvest labor been available elsewhere, the movement would not have been necessary. Of the 12,000 who answered the call, he said, a few arrived in Winnipeg without funds to travel further and some arrived in certain districts before the commencement of harvesting. These difficulties were overcome through assisting those without funds and by providing them with transportation to the places where the harvest was ready. This assistance was given by the Federal Government and by the transportation companies.

When Need Arose.

The need of bringing in harvesters from Great Britain first arose when it became evident that sufficient labor would not be available in Canada and the United States to handle the crops. The harvest labor question is taken up each year at a conference in Winnipeg to which the Federal and Provincial Governments and the transportation companies sent representatives.

This year the estimate of labor required for the harvest fields was 50,000 men and the overseas men were brought in to make up this number. In the Federal share of the experiment the Immigration and Labor Departments co-operated, the Labor Department playing a large part in the distribution.

Any of the men who desire to return to Great Britain after the harvest and who have spent a month actuallly in the harvest fields will be given a reduced rate by the transportation companies.

HOPE TO STAY MINE CLOSING SEPTEMBER 1

Final Attempt to Prevent Suspension of Anthracite Coal Operations Got Under Way Today.

A DIFFICULT TASK

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press).—Hope of an eleventh hour settlement of the anthracite controversy was still held out today in administration circles and among the coal commissions members. In most other quarters, however pessimistic view is taken.

It is generally felt that if Governor Pinchot effects a settlment, he will accomplish a difficult task and receive great credit which may make him a presidential possibility. But it is feared that controversy is beyond control of President Lewis of the mine workers as it is said radical elements in his organization are looking for trouble.

Final Attempt To-Day

A final attempt to prevent suspension of anthracite mining got under to-day when Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania acting with the support of President Coolidge met with the Miners Union officials and representatives of operators of anthracite mines.

Until the Governor actually came to grips with his problem, the closest secrecy surrounds plans and proposals, which he had matured.

Four of the leaders from each party to the controversy, men who have faced each other half dozen times in this years' deadlock between employers and employees in industry and experience has been gained in previous years when similar breaks of negotiations precipitated strikes or shut downs, again gathered at Governor Pinchot's summons. They were however, open in declaration that they came to his meeting practically incapable of changing the attitude of those who have brought about the present conflict.

Crisis Reached

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 27.—Settlement of controversy between anthracite miners and operators "is possible, and it must be done," Governor Pinchot, told representatives of operators here, to-day at opening of conference called by him in an effort to avert suspension of operations September first.

Declaring that a crisis had been reached, he asserted, "we must do in this eleventh hour, what should have been done before."

The Governor said, he was acting in his capacity as Governor of Pennsylvania on behalf of Anthacite-using States and also on behalf of Canada, to which he declared, Pennsylvania had a responsibility.

TWO SMALL HOMES WERE BURNED TO THE GROUND

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—Two small homes on the outskirts of the city were burned to the ground within a few minutes early Sunday morning, the families of children being rescued in their night clothing by their parents and neighbors.

One baby in its carriage was being pulled out of the window when it rolled back into the burning building. Mrs. Virginia Powell, the child's mother, pluckily rescued the child, being severely burned in doing so.

SOME PAPERS DEFEND PEER

While Others Vigorously Attack Lord Birkenhead for His Remarks Concerning President Wilson.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—(Special).—Some papers to-day staunchly defend Lord Birkenhead's remarks concerning President Wilson, which were resented by Henry Brockenridge, who was a member of the Wilson Cabinet. They take the position that "too much fuss" is being made over the incident in the United States. Other newspapers consider Lord Birkenhead's remarks indiscreet and censure him for them.

The Pall Mall Gazette says the address "contained nothing that we should have thought to be other than universally recognized truths."

The Gazette, editorially, begins: "The Americans are a free spoken people, but they prefer free speech to be on their own side. They have not yet attained to the philosophic habit of mind in which Englishmen receive lectures of imported Pussyfoots, Bolsheviks, Sinn Feiners, and the whole world-wide menagerie upon the depravity of their own character and policy."

Confirm Isolationists.

The Morning Post asserts that "the effect of Lord Birkenhead's injudicious remarks is to confirm the isolationists in the wisdom of their policy of turning their backs on Europe."

In an editorial, headed "L'Enfant Terrible Abroad," the Daily News says that the British do not like the United States tariff laws but would welcome an almost prohibitive tariff on the importation of former members of British Cabinets and rigid Customs examinations of contents of their lecture tour portfolios."

Some Hostile.

Newspapers which are politically hostile to Viscount Birkenhead today bitterly attacked him.

The Asquithite Daily News to-day said that Birkenhead seems to find it increasingly difficult to open his mouth without putting his foot in it. American patriotism seems sufficiently sensitive to take offence when a well-known European visitor forgets the politeness due his hosts.

The Westminster Gazette agrees that most Britons would be just as sensitive to foreign criticism as are the Americans, and urges the United States not to attach undue importance to Birkenhead, who is politically discredited in his country."

DISMEMBERED HAND ON PROVINCIAL ROAD

A dismembered hand may be found on the highway near Peterborough to-day, according to the story of Walter Rogers.

He was making minor repairs to his car by the roadside, he said, when his wrist watch struck the wheel. The glass was smashed and a hand broken off.

DISMEMBERMENT OF THE EMPIRE

Sir Lionel Philips Warns of Result of Drift Towards Independence of Dominions.

LONDON, Aug. 27. Canadian Press —Sir Lionel Philips, in a lengthy letter to the Times, says the approaching conference between the Premiers of Britain and the Dominions, comes at a most critical time, as a problem of great moment demands solution is the Empire is to be preserved.

The powers of the Dominions have grown enormously in recent years, he says, and colonial statesmen have put forward claims virtually amounting to independence to which the Imperial authorities have tacitly acquiesced.

A change has crept in, unsidiously, like the spread of an infectious malady, he continues, and unless steps are taken to enlighten the public here and overseas regarding the trend of events it seems probable that the Empire will be dissolved into a number of independent states without the bulk of the people being aware of what has transpired.

Weaken Positions.

"It is no exaggeration to say that without the dominions the world position of Great Britain would be greatly weakened," declares Sir Lionel, "and without Great Britain, the Dominions would be in grave peril. To-day the last shred of parental authority seems in danger of renunciation. Is this wise or necessary? Can the Empire survive whose component parts do not recognize a general system of control even in international affairs, and whose cohesion rests on a common allegiance to a constitutional monarch?

"Daughters of the Empire are mistresses in their own houses, but should they become mistresses in the parental household, which is the plain meaning of equality between the Dominions and Great Britain?"

Sir Lionel is convinced that an overwhelming majority of the inhabitants of the Empire are horrified at the idea of a possible dismemberment, and sugests an imperial council composed of an equal number of representatives of Britain and the Dominions to sit permanently and study imperial problems.

ATHENS, Aug. 27. — (United Press).—Bulgarian Comitjados, the wild fighting tribesmen of the hills, have invaded Greek territory at two points near the village of Kouclaini in the nighborhood of Philappopolis. The Athens Foreign officials to-day filed a protest with the Bulgarian charge D'Affaires.

Aierdale Dog, Too Faithful a Pal, Bares Boy Owner as an Auto Thief

DETROIT, Mich., August 27. — Rover, an Airedale dog belonging to Donald Baker, 15 years old, 2662 Grand River avenue, was a too faithful friend on Saturday night, and as a result Donald is at the Juvenile Detention home on a charge of stealing an automobile earlier in the night.

Mike Jamiceski, 5028 Parker ave., reported to the police that his car parked in the rear of 7351 Woodward avenue, had been stolen.

The machine was recovered just before midnight at Grand River and Hamilton avenues filled with a complete camping outfit, several dime novels and a small Airedale dog.

The car and its contents were driven to the Trumbull station.

At 3 a.m., a Trumbull station patrolman saw a boy asleep in a car at Grand River and Fifth street and took him to the station.

The instant the boy stepped into the station the Airedale leaped toward him, tail wagging. Unable to deny ownership the boy confessed the robebry of the car to Lieut. Paul Shellenberger, and admitted ownership of the camping outfit found in the rear seat.

Donald said that he took the car to go on a camping trip to Northern Michigan.

Inability to handle an automobile meant jail for two other 14 year old boys on Friday night. Louis Sanderson, patrolman, attached to the motorcycle division, saw a car driven by Richard Cotter, 14 years old, 2480 Rivard street, nearly collide with another machine at Clifford street, and Adams avenue. He investigated. The boys confessed to the theft. Richard and his companion George Johnson,1034 Napoleon street, said that they took the machine to go riding.

Both were sent to the Juvenile Detention Home.

BOUNDARY WAS MADE AN ISSUE IRISH POLLING

Voting Brisk in Dublin and County--No Official Reports of Fighting--Jas. Larkin Prominent

STRIKE CASTS GLOOM

DUBLIN, Aug. 27. — (Canadian Press.)— There were reports this morning that attacks had been made on Mount Joy prison and various posts occupied by the National troops, but the authorities professed to have no knowledge of such attacks.

Polling was brisk in Dublin and county and up till the early afternoon no untoward incidents had been reported throughout the Free State.

In addressing a meeting at Liberty Hall last night Jas. Larkin urged the workers to march to their places of employment this morning and demand that operations go on as usual in protest against the proclamation of a public holiday, but there was no evidence to-day of his advice having been followed in any instance.

Boundary Question.

In three constituencies of Ulster the boundary question has been the chief subject of discussion. Ernest Blythe, Minister for local Government, told electors in Monaghan that the boundary commission was expected to bring about an addition to the Free State of two and a half counties. On the other hand, Cathal O'Shannon, Labor candidate, said that all that could be hoped for was a change of a few miles in the border.

Behind all the problems of the election is the menace of serious harbor troubles. The strike at the docks throughout the Free State ports continues and in connection with it a sympathetic strike such as the one with which in 1913 James Larkin held up many businesses has been put in force and is daily being extended. Conferences have been held to reach an accommodation, but Larkin has not appeared at them, and it is feared that without him no peace can be secured.

Meantime the army contracts are held up and work of repairing devastations by irregulars is coming to a halt, because permission is refused for transport of essential materials.

WATER LEVEL HIGH IN THIS DISTRICT

Little Lake Has Been Shade Above Normal Throughout Summer.

There has been no low water in Little Lake this season, although complaints from other sections indicate that low water has been the rule.

The water line has been a shade higher than normal, according to Jack Smith, harbor master, who takes the reading daily at noon.

At Little Lake the normal height is 7 feet 9 inches, and to-day the reading showed 8 feet 1 inch. As the stretch of water sets the standard for all waters in the vicinity the indications are that, despite the late log running season, the water levels were well maintained. It is understood that the last log drive is now coming down.

CHARGES PLOTTERS SOLD POISON LIQUOR

Labor Head Asks Three Members of Council Enjoined From Interfering

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—Charges that poisonous liquor has been sold to union building laborers in this city, resulting in several deaths, and that the dispensers were actuated by "sinister motives," are made in a petition filed in Superior Court by Ernest A. Johnson, secretary treasurer of the United Building Trades Council.

The petition asks that William McDonough, Joseph King, James Donovan and Henry Keyes be enjoined from interfering with the functioning of the Council, and that they be restrained from carrying liquor into its meetings or on its property.

In addition to the death of several members of the Council, the petition alleges that others have been maimed and incapacitated for life by the liquor.

"Your plaintiff," the petition says, "believes and avers that there is a sinister motive behind such machinations of the respondents, that they are trying to disrupt the Building Trades Council by their actions; particularly in soliciting for and selling vile, poisonous, deleterious intoxicating liquor."

Lancashire miners used to believe that they must not wash their backs, as water weakened that part of the body.

Belgium Upholds Ruhr Occupation By French Forces

LONDON, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press). — Belgium's contribution to the latest diplomatic exchange on the reparations question was handed to Sir George Grahame, British Ambassador at Brussels, this morning, and will be sent by courier to London, arriving here tonight, copies will probably be dispatched direct from Brussels to Premier Baldwin and Lord Curzon, who are spending brief vacations in France. It is understood that while the note is somewhat more conciliatory in tone than the French note, it emphasizes legality of Ruhr occupation, and seeks to justify Belgium's priority to reparations, on moral and historic grounds.

NO ROUGE POTS AMONG SWEDES

Rev. Dr. Rose Impressed With the Vigour and Vitality and Progressiveness of the People and Country,

Lip sticks, rouge pots and vanity bags have apparently not reached Sweden yet or have probably been disdained by the girls and the women of that country.

Such a presumption might be inferred from interesting comments made by Rev. Dr. C. W. Rose, pastor of the Murray Street Baptist church, in an interview to the Examiner this afternoon. Dr. Rose returned this morning from Stockholm, Sweden, where he attended the convention of the Baptist World Alliance during the week of July twenty-first.

The Swedish people left upon their visitors an impression of health, and vitality and robustness. The woman generally appeared to be taller than Canadian. Their faces bore none of the touches of artificial colouring, but they were bright and glowing with what was believed to be the results of the life and habits of physical culture for which the Swedes have long been famous.

And not only in their physical bearing and appearance but also in their manner and mode of life as exhibited in public they seemed to be guided by a strictness of morals that contrasted most favorably with impressions left by other peoples.

Dr. Rose attended the Gottenberg Jubilee Exhibition and was struck by the simplicity of the amusements of the great crowds. There were no gambling and other similar devices with which we are familiar. There were games of skill, guessing and estimating contests, but there were no prizes to those who won. The mere fact of winning was sufficient reward

Rev. Dr. Rose remarked that Sweden was reached after a six hundred mile sail through the North Sea The middle of that country is in the same latitude with southern Alaska and Greenland, both Arctic territories, but Sweden is warmed by the Gulf Stream and has no severe winter weather until the first of January As an indication of the progressiveness of the Swedes, Dr. Rose pointed out that they can boast of one telephone to every four families. Their whole country presented not only a beautiful appearance but also a high degree of neatness and tidiness, and those delegates who had visited Venice, Geneva, Edinburgh and other cities renowned for their beauty, declared that Stockholm was justified in its claim to the honour of being the most beautiful city in the world. Rows and rows of summer homes for workingmen beyond the city was a suggestive feature of the progressivesness of the Swedes as was also the fact that 95 per cent of their country is supplied with electric power.

The 2,500 delegates to the congress represented approximately ten million Baptists from virtually all parts of the world. Among the delegations were forty Russians who were extremely cautious and guarded in their references to the conditions in Russia, presumably because of their fear of probably consequences when they returned home. A choir of Letts, numbering only thirty voices provided one of the surprises of the convention by the beauty of their singing. One of the purposes of the conventon was to discover by contact with their nationals the trend of conditions in the countries of Central Europe.

Rev. Dr. Rose said that everywhere he went he saw unmistakable signs of unemployment and even in Sweden, there were enquiries about the prospects in Canada.

"And I believe the Swedes would make very desirable immigrants," he remarked.

WINDOW CLEANER FALLS 30 FEET TO HIS DEATH

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—When the frame of a window sash which he was clutching with one hand while washing windows at the Jesse Ketchum School gave way, James Walker, aged 35, 135 Oxford street, was hurled to the ground, sustaining a fracture of the skull, from which he died before reaching the General Hospital. The remains were removed to the Morgue, where an inquest will be opened to-night by Coroner M. M. Crawford.

WIDER OUTLOOK A NECESSITY SO ROTARY IS TOLD

"Broader Horizons" Topic of Inspiring Address To-day by Rev. A. H. McConnachie.

CRIPPLED CHILDREN

The desirability of achieving a wider horizon and a larger outlook upon life was stressed before the Peterboro Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon to-day by Rev. A. H. McConnachie, of Centreville, whose inspiring address was followed with close attention.

Vice-President Reid Wren was in the chair, and there was a large attendance.

Rotarian Dr. A. W. McPherson, reporting in regard to the work on behalf of crippled children, announced that there would be a meeting of the committee this week, and outlined the suggested programme of activities in this branch of the Club's work. An open meeting, at which an address along this line would be given had been suggested, followed by a survey of the city and afterwards by a follow-up campaign. Dr. McPherson pointed out the desirability of paying some attention also to the education of crippled children in order to equip them for life's battles.

Ministers are supposed to be professional talkers, said Rev. Mr. McConnachie in commencing his address. We certainly do a lot of talking until we become tired hearing our own voices. Teachers must bear the palm for much speaking, and lawyers are not guiltless. But truly ministers have a dubious record for multiplying words. As a result, what they have to say is often discounted in advance.

"Daddy," said the minister's boy as they walked home from church, "was that a true story you told in the sermon, or were you just preaching?"

That's the point! Just preaching! Talking at large, without very much respect for exact truth- I marvel at the patience with which we ministers are heard. Scripture says, "Have patience," and verily congregations excel in that virtue. Listening to the same voice, Sunday after Sunday, the same monotone, or ecclesiastical drone, requires patience and charity.

The average minister has no touch of originality, no sparkling gems of thought. All he can boast of is sincerity, and for the sake of that, he gets a patient hearing.

We all recognise different types of preachers. There are the official set, having the professional stamp. They bring no dignity to their office. They shine in the borrowed light of their high calling. Happily they are not common. They are contemptible misfits wherever found. The true padre is no mere official. He is a man first and a minister afterward. He is a prophet: A man with a message. Out of the fulness of deep, personal experience, he seeks to impress others.

"Broader Horizons."

That is a true saying: "The horizon broadens as we ascend." The higher you climb, the more extensive the view. On a clear day, as you ascend the mountain, the prospect is ever changing and widening. The mists of the valley are left behind. The rolling meadows, the smoky town, a glimpse of the lake or of the open sea, make up a varied panorama. From the mountain top the horizon seems far away coming down to meet distant places unknown to us. We breathe a purer air, and enjoy the larger vision. All of this is a parable of what takes place in the

The Million Dollar Doll

By C. N. and A. M. Williamson

Authors of "The Lightning Conductor"

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY

Teresa Desmond (Terry), lovely and unbelievably innocent, has left her father.

Terrence Desmond, a selfish, unreliable man, the proprietor of the Blue Moon, a road-house, and has gone to

Juliet Divine, her beautiful half-sister—known as the Million Dollar Doll—whose sketchy career is unknown to Terry. No one knows of the girls' relationship and 'Julia' is careful to keep Terry, who is an exquisite counterpart of herself hidden from her (Julia's) fiance,

Manoel Fernander, a South American millionaire of extremely jealous temperament.

Eustace Nazlo, is a wealthy Greek whose unwelcome advances caused Terry to run away from her father.

Miles Sheridan, Terry's 'Dream Prince,' furnished the money for her convent education when she was a child, partly to atone for a past rudeness of Betty Sheridan, his wife, whose infidelity is making him wretched.

Hartley Phillips, acting as Sheridan's medium, has offered Julia twenty thousand dollars to take a yacht trip with Sheridan in order to facilitate Betty's obtaining a divorce. Unable to go herself, Julia persuades Terry to go in her place, posing as the Million Dollar Doll. Terry does this because of her desire to repay 'the Prince' for his generosity.

CHAPTER XX&

A Girl's Impatience

Teresa Desmond at seventeen was the child that only a convent-bred girl can be at that age, and this age of the world.

The nuns prided themselves upon their modern broadmindedness, but the pupils went away "finished" while still very young; therefore practical knowledge of life and its secrets remained for parents or the shock of experience to impart.

As Terry had told Julia, no two girl-pupils were allowed to be alone together; consequently there were few stealthy talks, each girl fearing that she might be "given away" by the unwelcome third. For the same reason, forbidden books were seldom passed around, and Terry had been one of those whose childish purity, whose ridiculous ignorance, remained cruelly inviolate.

She had been so grateful for her education, so devoted to the nuns who gave it, that bolder spirits failed to tempt her with smuggled French novels which the nuns would have loathed. Not that Terry would have told tales. But she was always "on the side of the angels," never on that of the gay little, clandestine "devils."

Despite her ignorance of vital facts, however, the girl saw clearly that the yachting adventure would horrify the dear Sisters. There was one who taught "etiquette," though her ideas were considered old-fashioned by the girls. Things had changed since her day, and especially since the war, they argued: whereas in the convent nothing ever changed.

"Young ladies should not go about alone with young men, unless they are related," was one maxim of the "Etiquette Sister," which Terry remembered. She almost laughed at it now. Yet it would have hurt her to think of it, if her spirit had not rushed already to meet the great adventure which meant salvation for her Prince.

The high motive of self-sacrifice cooled the new fire in her blood, yet now and then, from below the calm surface of generous resolve, something different peeped out for an instant. The girl's eyes were too clear not to see it, though she pushed the thing down, and forbade it to exist.

She knew in her heart that beneath the wish to help him, there was a burning desire to see Miles Sheridan again, to be near him day after day, to be important in his life; perhaps to be thanked, after a long time, for what she had done for him. She knew also that she was sorry not to be starting upon the cruise at once, at once, instead of being forced to wait

If only she could count the days, it wouldn't be so bad. And there were other reasons not connected with Sheridan, why she longed to get away. She was afraid of her father, even after Julia had motored to the Blue Moon, explained as much as she thought worth while, and apparently settled everything.

Besides, she hated the order to "hide" from Manoel. She didn't dislike the little white kitchen, but it shamed her to be hustled into it whenever the doorbell sounded.

Julia did not tell Terry that the wedding plans were changed because of her, and that the marriage was being hurried on because of the new plan. The girl heard only the date and that it would be soon, as Manoel had decided that the parting would be too hard.

The hidden one couldn't, of course, appear at the wedding, which was to take place in the presence of only two witnesses.

The question was, how to dispose of the girl with some trustworthy person who would guard her till the last minute, sending her safely on board Sheridan's yacht "Silverwood" at the right time?

After two or three days of secret worry, Julia confided in Emmeline—not for the first time. It seemed that there was a boarding-house in Jersey City, where Emmeline's widowed sister was cook-housekeeper. The place was 'deadly respectable,' given up almost exclusively to old ladies. Terry could stay there till after the wedding.

As soon as the newly married couple had gone, Emmeline would take the girl back to Julia's apartment. When "Silverwood" had sailed, the flat was to be let furnished, for a year, when possibly Manoel might bring his wife to New York for a visit.

Anything was better than hiding from Manoel, or going back to the Blue Moon Julia engaged the best room in the boarding-house for her little sister, and all the old ladies were kind.

Terry's only instructions were, "not to tell anyone anything," and they were difficult to obey. The kind old ladies asked so many kind questions But the girl had a developing sense of humor (few women develop it till they've passed twenty) and the game of bluff was rather fun. It kept her impatience from reaching the boiling point.

Back in the apartment, life was still very complicated. Because of her likeness to Julia, and the coming trip with Sheridan, the girl's very existence was wrapped in mystery. Nobody had been told of the marriage. The news wasn't supposed to leak out, until after the cruise was over.

Then, if Miss Divine had to be called as a witness in the divorce case people must think what they liked. Anyhow, Manoel would have no cause to be jealous of his wife: Julia would have secured her millionaire.

Fortunately, the weather remained hot. New York was "empty." The few callers at the flat were told that "Miss Divine was in the country." Terry's exercise had to be taken early in the morning, or after dark, when Emmeline would sometimes chaperon her for a walk, or a drive in a taxi.

Daytime hours were wiled away by the fitting on of dresses, which Julia had left to be altered for "the kd." Emmeline was wonderful at this work, and had no jealousy of her charge, for "Madam" had been more than generous with her.

She would gladly have joined the yachting party as "Miss Divine's maid," but this proposal from Julia to Hartley Phillips was promptly vetoed by Sheridan.

An elderly woman, an old family servant, who always travelled on the yacht, would wait on Miss Divine. Sheridan preferred that his "guest" should bring no stranger on board. Julia would have fought for her rights, had they been menaced; but as it was only a question of little Terry, who had never had a maid, Sheridan was allowed to have his way.

The girl's longing to escape, her high-keyed exaltation, did not prevent her from thrilling a little now and then, over the wonderful things that were to be hers.

RUHR CRIPPLES BELGIAN TRADE.

Occupation in Several Ways Proves to Be a Blow to Business Progress.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 27.—Although it covers little space on the map geographically and politically, Belgium is a great nation industrially. Its trade competes with that of the United States, Great Britain and Germany in all markets. In 1922 Belgian foreign commerce amounted to more than $1,200,000,000. Exports to France totaled $150,000,000 and imports from France over $400,000,000, while exports to Great Britain were $69,000,000 and to Germany about the same amount. Before the war Belgium exported 80 per cent of its industrial production and by virtue of this was able to support a surplus population of 2,000,000 and a total of 7,000,000 which made her the most densely inhabited country in Europe. Exports were and are, therefore, a matter of vital importance to Belgian prosperity.

Since the war, Belgium has had a hard time keeping up its commerce, partly on account of competition from Germany. In 1922 the Belgian trade showed an unfavorable balance of nearly $260,000,000. There is reason to believe that it will be still larger this year. Moreover, compensation items like transit trade and income from foreign bonds, which used to do much to make up for excess imports, have decreased alarmingly.

Germany Big Factor

Belgian industry is dependent for one-third of its coke consumption on Germany (the Ruhr), Belgian cotton exports usually find a profitable market in Germany. Belgium's port, Antwerp, has grown to be the fourth largest trading haven in Europe through its geographical situation as outlet for a big German hinterland. The value of the transit trade passing through Antwerp from the Rhineland and the Ruhr is estimated at $2,000,000,000 a year, with $20,000,000 profit accruing to Belgian railways and Belgian storage.... plants as transit charges. All these statistics apply to postwar rather than to prewar conditions. They make Germany a factor of immense importance in the business of Belgium.

Rhur occupation at first gave a spurt and then caused a slump to Belgium industry, in much the same way as it did to Czechoslovakian, Austrian and other industries in central Europe. The spurt was occasioned by the removal of German competition in foreign markets, the slump by scarcity of coke and the rapid rise in the cost of production. For a while during March and April Belgian metallurgy was in a bad way through lack of fuel supplies. Luxemburgh's industry, which is tied up with that of Belgium, was hit even harder, so hard that disastrous consequences threatened to ensue. Over half of the blast furnaces in the grand duchy had to close down completely. Since about the middle of May conditions have improved. French and Belgian economists say there are enough stocks of coke on hand to last until December. German contradictions to the contrary notwithstanding. Moreover extensive new mines yielding coal capable of producing coke have been discovered in the southeastern part of Belgium.

Transit Trade Ceases

Besides industry, another branch of Belgian activity has suffered severely from Rhur operations—namely commerce passing through the port of Antwerp. German transit trade has ceased entirely wile exports to the Rhineland have diminished greatly. German shipping firms in the Scheldt have cut down operations radically. If disorganization and chaos go on increasing in western Germany, Antwerp will be the first to suffer from it.

It is said that the financial and commercial interests of Belgium were not consulted about the occupation of the Rhur. It is certain that Flemish traders and bankers in Antwerp look upon the adventure differently from the Walloon politicians in Brussels. I have heard French speaking bankers condemn the occupation as harmful to the Belgian nation and justifiable only on the assumption that Belgium would have been cut off from Rhur coke supplies by France if she had refused to join in military operations, as assumption which seems far-fetched.

Efficient Housekeeping

The modern idea of efficiency extends into the household as well as into every branch of business. Most housewives pride themselves upon the fact that their homes are conducted in an efficient, business-like manner.

Every housewife knows, too, that the business of running a house, providing for the wants and needs of the different members of the family and meeting the almost daily emergencies is second to none.

The Want Ads. in the Examiner are a great boon to the efficient housewife. In securing helpers, in purchasing various articles of household equipment, disposing of discarded furniture, in fact in countless ways, the Want Ads. are the housewife's most valuable assistant.

POINCARE DECLARES THAT GERMANY MUST MAKE GREAT EFFORT

Premier Served Notice That Germany Must Duplicate the Efforts Made By France in 1871.

NO REDUCTION.

CHASSY - BEAUPRE, France, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press.)— Premier Poincare in an address here yesterday served notice on Germany that she must make an heroic effort to pay reparations, just as France did in 1871. The address was delivered at the dedication of a monument to war dead. In it the premier told Germany not to look for any reduction in her reparations debt.

"What we did fifty-three years ago," said M. Poincare, "they can try to do now. If they do not try to do it they will compel us to enforce against them the menace they made then 'pay us or we remain'."

France, continued M. Poincare, had to pay five billion francs, which was an enormous sum then, but the people offered 43 billions. He told how the country had raised other billions to pay the expenses of the war simply by getting to work. He added that the French payments could be proved, while as for the German chancellor Stresemann's assertion regarding Germany's payments, he declared, "it is vain to pretend that Germany already has paid forty-three billion gold marks, or even twenty-five billion, as was said by an economic institution of Washington, which it has been impossible for me to identify and which is not listed in the congressional directory or the official year book of the federal capital."

Dollar Day will be with us on Wednesday.

If you are good at counting beans you have an opportunity of winning some good prize in the Examiner contest. On exhibition in the Peterborough bookstore window is a quart sealer filled with ordinary white beans purchased from Roland Denne, and for each dollar paid into the Examiner office for a subscription on an account you will receive an estimating blank on which to estimate the number of beans in the quart sealer. With each estimate on the sealer you also receive an estimate in connection with the Merchants' Treasury Box prize, the first prize of which is $50.00, and all the stores participating in Dollar Day estimates for every dollar purchased. Big values will be given this year by the merchants and there are going to be some extremely lucky people getting the prizes that have been offered.

CUBANS IN CANADA FEEL COLD SPELL.

Crew of Cruiser Look Past Cheering Crowds to Warm Underwear Store.

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—To the crew of the Cuban cruiser Canada is almost a region of the Arctic. Shivering in their light cotton uniforms, with lips actually blue from the cold, the Cuban sailors had only one request to make upon their arrival in Toronto. No cheering thousands, no official welcome, no new impressions of a strange land occupied first place in the minds of the mariners from the sunny southland. More prosaic thoughts, more mundane desires, came first from their lips. What they wanted above all else was, underwear. Within a few hours 90 suits, purchased hastily by Exhibition authorities, were sent aboard and soon both hearts and bodies of the visitors were warmed up by practical hospitality. Yesterday, even with the decks warmed by a bright sunshine, the crew still wore their new garments. To them, Canada is still below zero.

CROP BLIGHTED IN SHORT WEEK

Western Crop Which Promised Record Yield Reduced to Average By Rust.

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—In one short week the heat followed by an invasion of rust from the United States, has turned a record crop in the west into an average one, according to a correspondent at Winnipeg. Six weeks ago, he says, there was every prospect that the wheat crop in Manitoba would equal or exceed the record yield of 1915, when an average of nearly 29 bushels to the acre was secured. Today, with cutting general in the south, reports indicate a yield of barely 16 bushels or about equal to the average of the past ten years. The weather during the early part of the growing season was perfect in most places. There was sufficient rain and no frost of any account. Seeding was a little late, but favorable weather quickly brought along the crop. Then came the week of July 22 and the trouble commenced. The mercury rose above the average height and stayed there for a week. The lasting heat brought along the rust. The latter, like all fungous diseases, thrives best during murky weather and the hot spell following plenty of rain, created ideal conditions for the development of one of the west's greatest scourages.

Dempsey Worked Out Before a Large Crowd.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press)—Working out before a crowd of more than 2,000 spectators, Jack Dempsey went through an equivalent to ten rounds at his Saratoga Lake camp yesterday.

The cold from which the heavyweight champion is suffering was reflected in his work. He complained of stiff muscles.

George Godfrey, the 225-pound negro continually stuck a snaky left hand into Dempsey's face during their two rounds to keep the champion off balance, so he could not whip over a crushing right or left hook. Dempsey, however, managed to connect solidly a half dozen times on the negro's chin, rocking him to his heels.

Jack Burke tried to keep Jack at a safe distance with left jabs. Dempsey shook him up with rights to the head, but tried more frequently to land left hooks to the jaw and body.

Jack Bernstein, world's junior lightweight champion, boxed the final two rounds with Dempsey to develop the champion's speed.

DEMANDS FOR A REFERENDUM IN SASKATCHEWAN

The Prohibition Forces Counter With Statement Showing Decrease in Crime Since Liquor Stores Were Closed.

URGE IMPROVEMENT.

SASKATOON, Sask., August 27 Canadian Press). — With demands being made in some quarters for a liquor referendum in Saskatchewan at an early date, the Prohibition Committee of the Social Service Council on Saturday issued a manifesto declaring that, as compared to the period when Government liquor stores were operated in this Province, general crime had been reduced to approximately one-half, drunkenness to one-fifth, and vagrancy to one-ninth.

The manifesto urges more vigorous enforcement of the Saskatchewan Temperance Act, the use of all Dominion, Provincial, and municipal police units in prosecution of Inland Revenue Act offenders, and more vigorous action on the part of Federal Government officials in eradicating illicit liquor manufacture in the Province.

The committee objects to a referendum at this time declaring that the present law should be allowed to operate for a minimum period of three years from the date the liquor export warehouses were closed, 15th December last.

The normal operation of the Prohibition laws here, the manifesto adds, has been impeded by conditions that have passed or are passing.

Mrs. Helen Stokes Last Demand.

CHICAGO, Aug. 27.—Demanding that her name be cleared by the "last of my defamers," Mrs. Helen Elwood Stokes has brought suit for $1,000,000 damages against her stepson, William Earl Dodge Stokes, Jr., son of W. E. D. Stokes of New York. The praecine in the suit was filed in the Superior Court by Mrs. Stoke's attorney, Charles M. Erbstein.

Young Stokes, called "Weddie" by his father, was named as one of the several correspondents in Stokes's New York suit to divorce Mrs. Stokes. For over a year he has lived in Chicago. He was graduated from the University of Chicago last June, and is now associated with the law firm of Fisher, Boyden, Kales & Bell here.

Mr. Erbstein refused to make any statement with regard to the case. Asked whether the suit was not for slander and libel, he said:

"I have nothing to say."

Mrs. Stokes was more communicative. She arrivee in Chicago several days ago with her mother, Mrs. Arthur Scott Miller of Denver, and has been living at a hotel. In an earnest manner she gave her reasons for bringing the million-dollar suit.

"Certain accusations were made against me by young Mr. Stokes," she said. "They are baseless, profoundly untrue, and both my husband and his son are best aware of the fact. Since my arrival here I have communicated with the young man, and I have given him full opportunity to confess that his statements against me were not true.

"I am able to prove, in this suit brought by Mr. Erbstein, that Stokes Jr. was substantially paid for his part." Mrs. Stokes continued, as her mother nodded assent.

"I don't know what are the plans of Samuel Untermyer, my New York attorney," said Mrs. Stokes, "but I do know that every person involved in the conspiracy of defame me will be prosecuted.

"I have relentlessly traced every person who had anything to do with the baseless accusations made against me, and I am now after the last one of them. Mr. Untermyer proved during the trial of the divorce suit that the witnesses who testified against me were bought and paid for. Some of them have made confessions to the District Attorney in New York.

"I had no desire to disgrace Stokes Jr., and for that reason I gave him the opportunity of publicly repudiating his misstatements.

"I am tired of courts, of this bitter struggle with my husband and his friends."

The Stokes divorce litigation will be brought to another hearing in the Fall, it is said. Mrs. Stokes first brought suit for the separate maintenance, charging her husband with extreme and repeated cruelty. He filed a cross-suit for divorce, which, after a hearing, was denied. Mrs. Stokes's maintenance suit was upheld, but the decree was later reversed, and the case was sent back for a rehearing.

CAPT. NOICE HAD TROUBLE WITH ESKIMO STRIKE

Families Intended For Settlement of Wrangell Island Deserted at Nome

HANSEN RESIGNED.

NOME, Alaska, August 27 (Canadian Press). — A "strike" of natives at Ketzbur, Alaska, has interfered with plans of the Noice Expedition to Wrangel Island to secure a number of Eskimo families to colonise the Island, according to information received here on Saturday.

Several families deserted the exploration ship Donaldson after they had signed on at Ketzbur, and when the vessel sailed on 6th August, only one family remained on board.

Captain Louis Hansen, master of the Donaldson, also resigned from the expedition as the result of differences with Captain Noice, its director, according to the Ketzbur advices.

The Noice Expedition left Nome on the night of 3rd August to go to the relief of Allen Crawford, of Toronto, and other members of the Stefansson Expedition to Wrangel Island of 1920, believed to have been marooned on the Island for the last two years.

The Donaldson arrived at Ketzbur on 5th August, leaving the next night and was reported o Point Hope, four hundred miles north of Nome, and within stiking distance of Wrangel Island on 9th August.

Wrangel Island is approximately 150 miles north of North Cape, Siberia, in the Arctic Ocean, and is claimed by Russia.

Allan Crawford, however, raised the British flag on the Island in 1920, claiming the territory for Great Britain.

MACHINE GUNS OPENED BATTLE IN IRISH POLLS

Government Party is Confident While Republicans Rely on New Voters —Workers Lose Day's Pay.

MOLEST CANDIDATES

DUBLIN, Aug. 27. — (Canadian Press).—A lively outbreak of rifle and machine gun fire occurred in Dublin early to-day. The shooting was not explained. Balloting in Dail Eireann proceeded quietly during the forenoon with national troops patrolling the streets.

A motor car carrying Finian Lynch, Minister of Fisheries, who is the government candidate in County Kerry, was attacked by a hostile crowd while passing through Lixnaw yesterday. Shots were fired and one young man was seriously injured

Voting opened at nine o'clock this morning with an electorate of more than one and three quarter million eligible to cast ballots. Almost half a million of this number are new voters. The day is a public holiday and workers are complaining that they are forced to lose a day's pay through the proclamation.

The law provides new and drastic penalties for interference with voting and no intimidation at polls is expected. The Dublin sheriff does not expect to be able to announce any result before Tuesday evening and it is expected that it will be Thursday before complete returns can be announced.

Supporters of the government party have daily increased in confidence and it is now believed that this group will constitute the largest bloc in the new house. The Republicans rely on the new voters to improve the showing made by them in the last election, when they took 36 seats.

The campaign was brought to a close yesterday amid a great outburst of oratory all over the country. The final pronouncement of the Republicans, issued as a manifesto, bore the name of De Valera, but it is strongly expected as being the work of Mrs. Erskine Childers.

SEEKING HOMES FOR SETTLERS IN THE NORTHWEST

Professor Robert Wallace Would Settle Scotch Immigrants in Wooded Sections Rather Than on the Prairie.

GREAT FUTURE.

OTTAWA, August 27 (Canadian Press). — With a view of investigating the wooded sections of Canada as places for immigrants from Scotland to settle in as against the Prairies, Professor Robert Wallace is in Canada on his tenth trip, arriving in Ottawa on Saturday.

Officially, Professor Wallace has been sent out by the Scottish Board of Agriculture and a combination of Scottish dairy societies to represent them at the coming National Dairy Congress which is to meet in Washington on 2nd October.

In the meantime the Professor is touring Canada.

Professor Wallace is one of the foremost agricultural authorities, and authors, in the British Isles.

Professor Wallace is of the opinion that Canada is the logical centre for English-speaking people. He is also of the opinion that one of Canada's greatest developments in the future will be the settling of the vast areas of fine land in the northern and comparatively unexplored sections of the country.

He is of the opinion that Canada has vast stores of both coal and oil.

"The Peace River country," he also claimed, "is one of the finest grain growing countries in the world, and in due time this will be well proven."

GOVERNMENT OUTLOOK IS BRIGHT IN TODAY'S ELECTIONS IN IRELAND

President Cosgrave and His Minister Have Made An Intensive Campaign and Are Expected to Win.

PRESS SUPPORT.

DUBLIN, August 27 (Canadian Press). — On the eve of to-day's polling uncertainty as to the result of the Irish Free State election continues, but it is agreed in Governmental circles that within the past week the prospects of the Government party have grown brighter.

This belief is due to the intensive campaign made by the Ministers, who personally have addressed numerous meetings, and partly to the effect of the celebrations of the anniversary of the death of Arthur Griffiths and Michael Collins.

President Cosgrave has covered more ground and addressed more meetings during the past week, than any previous leader ever did. While he is confident of retaining office, his repeated appeals for a majority outnumbering that of all the other parties, tends to show his unwillingness to govern by a coalition if he can help it.

The farmers are expected to return the next strongest party, while the split in the Labour Party probably will prevent much of an increase in the existing labour representation.

The Independents and business candidates hope to return at least 20 representatives

Ministers Safe.

The seats of the individual Ministers are all considered safe. There have been numerous appeals to the electors to give them first preference in the voting so that their names may head the first polls and give them the quota for securing election before the remaining votes are proportionately distributed.

The Republicans who started their campaign merely to make a demonstration, now say that they can return more than half of the House of 153 members.

Support from Unionists.

It is true that nearly all the old Unionists have announced their intention to keep President Cosgrave in office; but there still are some Unionist "die-hards" who will abstain from voting. They object to the oath of members of the Dail as implying an oath of loyalty to the Free State, holding this would bar them from advocating a return of British power.

It is conceded that Eamonn De Valera will be elected in County Clare and Mrs. Cathal Bruga, Mrs. Charles Burgess, widow of the noted Sinn Feiner who died of wounds received in the July, 1922, fighting in Dublin, in Waterford.

There is a keen fight in Mayo between Labour Minister McGrath and I. J. Rutledge, who is now acting as a De Valera deputy in the Dail. Mr. McGrath has been well received in the constituency, to which he is a stranger. He has been assisted by Judge Daniel F. Cohalan of New York.

SOMMERVILLE, N.J., Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press.)—Bowling merrily along a road in the outskirts of Bound-Brook, a few miles from here, watching for a place to picnic yesterday, Mrs. Mary Gahlen, without a cry, slipped from the seat of her husband's automobile to the floor of the car and died. A tiny hole inside of her head showed where a small calibre bullet had entered. When it came no one in the party could tell and after investigation, it remains a mystery to the county police.

SIX LIVES LOST A CHILD DYING CROSSING TOLL

No Witnesses to Tragedy When Flyer Hit Automobile at Level Crossing Near Binghamton.

CAR DEMOLISHED.

BINGHAMPTON, N.Y., Aug. 27. —(Canadian Press.)—Six dead and a seventh dying, was the toll taken when an Erie train struck an automobile at Gray's Crossing early yesterday.

All of the dead were killed instantly. The seventh victim, a child six years old, was taken from the pilot of the engine a quarter of a mile from the scene of the crash and rushed to a hospital with little chance for life.

There were no witnesses to the accident, which took place in a dense fog. The car was en route to Endicott, home of four of the victims.

The train, Erie No. 6, the Cleveland-New York flier, was travelling at a sixty-mile clip when it struck the car. The machine was completely demolished and had to be pried from the tender of the locomotive when it was brought to a stop. The mangled forms of four of the victims were taken from the wreckage of the car and the bodies of two others were found 200 feet from the crossing.

HELP FOR THE FARMS.

Out of the series of conferences that are being held by W. C. Noxon, Agent-General for Ontario in Great Britain, and Hon. J. S. Martin, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, is expected to develop an entirely new scheme for the securing of farm labourers for work in Ontario where there is a decided dearth of trained help at the present time.

Details of the plan are lacking. However, it is satisfactory to learn that new methods are being employed, for it must be confessed that the policy that has been in force has done very little towards filling the needs of Ontario.

Both in numbers and quality, the policy of the Drury Government failed to score, and the shortage of labour on Ontario farms was never greater—except during the war years—than it was during the Drury regime.

If Mr. Martin or his Agent-General have found a way to secure for this Province 8,000 or 10,000 experienced farm assistants who are ready to go to work on the farm and stay there, a splendid contribution towards the general welfare of Ontario will have been effected.

Up to the present the majority of immigrants have drifted to the cities, having neither the experience or the temperament necessary to enable them to score success as farm helpers.

CANADIANISM.

What more fitting task could the ex-service men of Canada turn themselves to than instilling a deeper sense of Canadianism into the hearts and minds of people throughout the Dominion? asks the Veteran. A recent announcement of the Dominion Command, G.W.V.A., says the first step in this direction had been taken by arranging for speakers on national topics to address public gatherings under the auspices of local branches of the association. Information will be drawn from the vast store available at Ottawa and passed to speakers in all parts of Canada who will be available for meetings in centres adjacent to their home towns.

People of Nova Scotia will be acquainted with the extent and wealth of British Columbia, combined with an idea of the aspirations of the Western folks. British Columbians will be told something about the Bluenose Province, its history, resources and the temperament of its people. Each will learn of the other, and it is not too much to hope that a new sympathy with the problems peculiar to each Province will be born. Add to this the realization of the magnificent heritage of every Canadian which will be revealed by the addresses on national affairs, and one can but dimly visualize the tremendous patriotic resolve that will be given life if the G.W.V.A. puts its paln into effect in more than 850 communities where branches of the association are located.

FARMERS AND THE EXHIBITION.

The Peterborough Industrial Exhibition is planned primarily for farmers and largely by farmers.

Some of the directors are business men, merchants and manufacturers, others are mechanics—all equally interested and active in the development of Peterborough's Exhibition to that stage of success, already practically attained, which will fix it securely and beyond question among the leaders of its class in the Dominion.

But the group with the most representatives on the directorate are the farmers of this district. They determine the bulk of the prize list, and they compose the committees that are authorized to assume full control of the agricultural exhibits.

The least of the work of these farmer directors falls within the four days of the Exhibition. Meetings throughout the year have anticipated and arranged for the details of that week. Their voluntary labour, with that of other sympathetic farmers, has materially helped in the making of Exhibition Park a beautiful and efficient plant for its special purpose.

And, furthermore, these rural directors have, with their city colleagues, obligated themselves financially for the deficit incurred by the erection of new buildings and by other permanent improvements to the grounds during the last few years.

The city of Peterborough has been generous in its financial support to the Exhibition, but its ultimate success depends very largely upon the co-operation of the farmers, not only of this county, but of the entire district.

And because it is essentially an enterprise by farmers and for the benefit of farmers, through the betterment of their industry, a moral duty devolves upon the farmers generally to exhibit their stock and products, to visit the Exhibition on one or more of the four days and to recommend it earnestly to their friends.

The farmers of this district should be the most ardent boosters of Peterborough's Fair.

THE HARVEST EXCURSION.

Economically it might perhaps be better for Western Canada if it were possible to harvest the huge crops produced annually in the Prairie Provinces with labour secured locally, but it is an excellent thing for Canada as a whole that assistance has to be recruited each year in the East.

The value of this annual movement to the prairies each year, from the easterly Provinces, from an educational standpoint, is not to be underestimated.

It is a link between East and West, for each year thousands of young men from the farms and from the cities of Ontario are provided with an opportunity of seeing something of the newer Canada that lies in the West, of becoming acquainted with the people of the Prairie Provinces and of studying conditions as they exist in that wonderful region that we very vaguely describe as "The West."

The average man who embarks upon this pilgrimage must necessarily come back a better Canadian because of his experience, for he has been able to get a new viewpoint upon the vastness of his native country and a more definite realization of its resources and its possibilities.

Thousands of men who otherwise would never get or take the chance to visit Manitoba, Alberta or Saskatchewan are receiving a lesson in Canadianism at the present time, and it is a course that cannot fail to produce important results from a national standpoint.

One drawback to the rapid progress of Canada is the tendency to make distinctions between East and West, to isolate one portion of the Dominion from another.

The harvest excursions play a considerable part in overcoming that tendency and wiping out that isolation.

THE FARMER'S SALVATION.

Even the discontented farmer, who probably is in the majority, will not deny that there are some farms in this country now prospering. A little personal investigation of one such prosperous farm may throw some light upon the basis of such prosperity, and perhaps suggest an ultimate solution of part of our American farmers' problems. It is a solution in no way allied to politics. For that reason it will not be popular either with farmers who look to politics as their hope of economic recovery, or with the politicians who look to discontented farmers as their hope of political advancement.

The farmer's best hope, we believe, rests in American inventive genius. The Tribune is willing to give some free advertising to emphasize its confidence in the accuracy of that belief. Such things as the De Laval milker and separator, the Fordson tractor, the improved harvesting machinery, the Steinmetz electrical advancements, and a score of other labor saving and production improving devices will put American farms and farmers on top of the world, if they have intelligence.

Politics will not do it. Many farmers still believe that politics will do it, despite the recognized fact that twenty-six specific pieces of legislation passed by the last Congress at the demand of the farm bloc have failed to restore contentment to the farms. But the agrarian confidence in legislation is carried along by such talk as that of Magnus Johnson, telling a gathering of farmers in Minnesota that the Federal reserve system is exploiting them, that cheaper credit is their need and their right, and that unless the old parties promulgate programs of relief for the farmer and laborer they will be thrust aside. The farmers, hard up, hear and cheer.

Among their most pressing troubles are the scarcity and high price of labor, the high cost of transportation, the middleman's profits, and the comparatively low prices received for their products. Of these factors in their discontent the first perhaps is the most immediately distressing. If that were removed, the second might be expected to follow it, and the fourth would then be eliminated automatically. The third point—the middleman's profits—may be taken care of by organization without politics.

The cost of labor will be adjusted by improvement of machinery. Observation of a modern farm is beginning to prove it. The small tractor is doing the work of several teams and drivers, in reduced time and at reduced cost. The milking machine and separator have been perfected, with a saving of many hands. Hay loaders, manure spreaders, reapers, binders, combined harvesters, power machines for handling all sorts of loads, etc., are steadily cutting down the number of workmen needed on farms. Use of these inventions and demand for and perfection of others will solve the farm labor problem.

In that task such men as Ford, De Laval, Deering, McCormick, Steinmetz and Edison are both potentially and actually more important and effective than any politician or statesman could be. More rapidly than any politics can change conditions under which we live, such men will advance the material influences upon life. That is the farmer's and the nation's way forward.—Chicago Tribune.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

According to Hon. J. S. Martin, Ontario needs 10,000 farm labourers. And yet stories from the West indicate that some of the harvesters are having trouble to find employment out there.

BRITISH PLAN AIRSHIP LINE

The Government Accepts Scheme For Air Route From London to India—Carry 200 Passengers.

(By P. M. SARL)

LONDON, Aug. 27 (United Press).—Huge air liners—bigger than the Mauretania—racing through the air at 80 miles per hour and landing 200 passengers in India four days after leaving London, such is the idea that will be converted from an idealist's dream into solid fact within a year or 18 months.

That it is not a dream, or a propaganda stunt, is proved by the fact that unemotional business men are putting up real money with the idea of making big profits. The British government stands behind with a carefully graduated subsidy, which is dependent on the India-England airship line proving a practical businesslike proposition.

The Imperial Airship Company, of which Commander Denniston Burney, member of Parliament and late of the Royal Navy, is the leading light, proposes to establish a bi-weekly airship service between England and India—with subsequent extension to Australia—and will start construction work as soon as possible, probably before Christmas.

The British government has lent its endorsement 'in principle' and only a few details need official sanction. These will be discussed by the Imperial Conference which meets in London during the next few months and will probably lead to extensions of the scheme.

Present plans provide for the construction of a huge, rigid type of airship of 5,000,000 cubic feet capacity, able to transport from 150 to 200 passengers and ten tons of mail on non-stop flights of from 2,500 to 3,000 miles. Actually without cargo, the designers compute it could stay in the air for 25 days and range over 24,000 miles at an average speed of forty miles per hour.

London to India

It will thus be possible to get from London to India in from three and a half to four days—instead of fifteen, by the present fastest rail and steamship routes. The passenger fare will be slightly less than steamship fare, and it will enable mails to be carried much more cheaply. When the route has been extended to Australia, it is expected to cover the full distance from England to Australia in a week instead of from a month to five weeks.

The first capital subscribed for the company will be 400,000 pounds, to which the British government will add a further sum of 400,000 pounds as a loan, repayable out of future profits. When the first airship has flown to India within a contract time of 100 hours (the promoters actually expect to do it in 72) the government will provide an annual subsidy of 400,000 pounds for three years, also on a loan basis, and the company's capital will be increased to 1,700,000 pounds.

The government will have no further liability until the company has maintained for three months, a weekly airship service to India, when it will guarantee a further subsidy of 250,000 pounds annually for fifteen years—the capital of the company being raised to three million pounds. For this the government will have the right to send officials and troops to India by air, the use of all stations and plant, without charge, and the right to take over the whole air fleet in wartime.

Build Ships in Four Months

It is estimated it will take eighteen months to get the first airship in the air ready for the voyage, but after that other airships can be built in four months. There will be no necessity for expensive airship sheds at the main stations. Probably one each in England, India and Australia will suffice as "drydocks," while the airships will be moored to special towers. Passengers will be carried on elevators to the tops of the towers for embarkation.

No fear is entertained of repetitions of the ZR2 disaster, as the airships will be constructed on a different principle, and will be practically accident-proof. No petrol, the cause of most airship fires, will be carried. The Engines will be run by a combination of kerosene and hydrogen, and as an additional precaution, the gasbags will be surrounded by a "layer" of non-inflammable gas.

Exhaustive experiments will be made with the existing British government airships, R33, R36, R80 and the ex-German L71, along the proposed air-routes with a view to adding to present-day knowledge, but the constructors anticipate no difficulty about turning out an "aerial Mauretania," according to schedule.

The British air station will probably be at Cardington, near Bedford, which is handy to London. The Indian depot will be either at Karachi, Bombay or Calcutta.

But apart from the actual institution of such an air-route to the east, chief interests lies in the possibility of further extension—England to United States and South America.

FALL WEAR

Leading fashions for fall wear tend towards the simple frock of dark satin and the tailored, or semi-tailored, cloth coat dress. Prints are disappearing gradually, and black takes first places.

GIRLS STOP JAZZ TO IMPROVE LOOKS

Tell Young Girl How She May Be Graceful and Jazz Will Disappear.

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Aug. 27).—The next time Mary Ellen starts out for the country club dance, tell her how pretty she looks and that she's going to be the most graceful dancer on the floor.

For a consciousness of one's personal appearance will do more than all else to clear up the jazz era of dancing, says Hulda Hanker of this city. It's been 30 years since Hulda Hanker started telling young people the why and wherefore of the heel and toe. And in all those 30 years she's never encountered a young person who insisted on going to extremes in dancing.

"The cheek to cheek and the cake-eater's clutch couldn't exist," she says; "if young people realized how they look.

"Years ago I became convinced that so-called vulgarity in dancing didn't rise from vulgarity at all. It merely comes from exuberance. Young folks get tired of doing the same old thing and want to try something different.

Self Predominant

"Then is the time to turn this extra exuberance into thoughts of—self. Yes, I mean it. There is a consciousness of self which every one should have. Selves can express crudeness and vulgarity or they can express grace and beauty.

"If a young girl in my classes shows a tendency to want to clutch her partner about the neck, I don't tell her outright that it is in bad taste. Instead, I praise her clothes, her hands, her walk. If she has danced particularly well at some other time, I recall it to her.

Boys, Too

"And I have never known a girl, once she realized it was possible to express beauty in her dancing, who didn't want to express that beauty all the while.

"It is the same with boys. Boys won't admit it, but they're vainer than girls. Get a boy to thinking about his hair, his shoes, his finger nails. Praise him for his walk, audibly admire the way he carries his shoulders, and he'll never fall into the slinking ways of the dance hall lizard.

"There is hardly any other question of behavior on the dance floor that will not resolve itself purely into a matter of taste. Give the young people judgment and a sense of personal pride and the jazz era will lose every one of its objectionable features."

Happy Re-Union Millbrook's Old Boys and Girls

PRESENT AND FORMER RESIDENTS ONCE MORE CLASP GLAD HANDS AT HOME COMING CELEBRATION

Homes Are Decorated With Flags and Pennants Cross Streets in Blazing Lines — A Gathering of the Clan.

NOBLE RECEPTION.

(By Staff Reporter

MILLBROOK, Saturday afternoon, August 25—Millbrook is smiling a welcome to her Old Boys and Girls to-day in their first Re-Union here. The weather, that threatened and gloomed through a heavy rain and a thunderstorm, yesterday afternoon, has changed to-day to a sunny warm outlook, and the Old Boys and Girls are coming back under pleasant auspices.

Already close onto a hundred of them have arrived, and will register to-night at the community gathering in the Armouries. Chiefly old boys are in view to-day and they are gathering on the main street in little groups, looking at the old-time pictures in the store windows, and occupying chairs in the store doorways as they exchange reminiscence of former days. They are pitching horseshoes in the back-door yards and invading stores and homes, to join the citizens in pleasant talk of bygone times.

Home, Sweet Home

"Welcome home," "This is our day," "Home, Sweet Home," are some of the inscriptions on the long overhead banners that cross the main street. Down the sloping hill that leads from the railway station to the business section, homes are decorated with bright flags, pennants cross the way in blazing lines, and the stately trees that make the roadways here so pleasant are wound about with folds of red, white and blue. The pretty and dignified little village has turned from its customary calm to a youthful aspect that delights to welcome home its wandering sons and daughters.

First Re-Union

This is Millbrook's first attempt at such a re-union. Although it is a hundred years and more since John Deyell came out from Ireland in 1816 and established himself as the first settler, building the grist mill by the brook that gives the place its name a mill, by the way, that was afterwards superseded by a flour mill, since burned down, and although it will soon be fifty years since the village was incorporated as such, this is the first time that Millbrook has set out to bring together its many far-away children. And it is doing it well. Invitation to the number of twelve hundred were sent out. Peterborough itself shelters many of Millbrook's native-born, and Toronto many also. To-morrow a great gathering of the clans is anticipated but already to-day parties have come in from Maine, and Louisville, Kentucky, from Cleveland and from Vancouver. Fred Armstrong of London, England, a son of William Armstrong of Millbrook, is here, having postponed an anticipated visit home until this time, in order to be present for the re-union.

On main street, in the store windows, gay with cedar greens and many colored pennants, are old photographs of Millbrook's people of long ago, in the faded colrings, the old-fashioned attire, the direct gaze of the photographic art of another time.

Looking Backward

The window of the Millbrook "Mirror", with its unique window decoration that suggests the "looking backward" of the old boys in a mirror reflecting old-time pictures, contains a group of Millbrook's Professional and Business men of a quarter of a century ago. Of the lot, there remain in Millbrook now only a few: J. E. Needham, George Burnham, H. W. Johnston, A. A. Smith, B.A., W. S. Given editor of the Millbrook "Reporter", Rev. Canon Allen J. Steel, W. T. Wood, the reeve, R. J. Doak, R. H. Edmund, W. C. Thorndyke, H. R. Armstrong and A. Payne. The Plum Creek boys, champions of Southern Manitoba in 1893 are here, half of them Millbrook youths.

In George Burnham's store window is the picture of old John Swayne, first reeve of Cavan, who retained that office for 21 consecutive years. Two daughters of John Swayne, Mrs. John Douglas of Cavan, and Mrs. Robt. Hooten of the 12th line, live in the vicinity. On Monday, descendants of the Swayne family, attending the re-union, intend to have a dinner and general gathering of their clan on the Mansions grounds, when it is expected that nearly 150 of the descendants will be present for the occasion.

Noble Reception

The committee in charge has prepared a noble reception for its guests in their "Auld Lang Syne" meeting. Commencing to-night, festivities will proceed until Monday evening, when two dances, one for the younger portion, with modern steps and music, and the other a regular old-time affair, will make a grand wind-up. This evening, from the Town Hall balcony, over the head of the silent young white soldier who guards forever in martial pose the grey marble slab on which are inscribed the names of Cavan's and Millbrook's soldier dead, and at whose feet three huge floral wreaths testify to the mute remembrance in which the departed lads are commemorated with the joyful living, addresses of welcome will be given by the reeves of the two municipalities, followed by a community gathering ing in the Armouries, and a concert by the noted Oshawa Regimental band of 26 piece, which has been engaged for the occasion, and which is expected on the afternoon train. To-day is "Reception Day," and to-morrow is "Community Service Day," in the three churches of the village, with sermons by returned Old Boys.

Mass meeting will be held Sunday afternoon, on the Agricultural Grounds, when an address by an Old Boy, Rev. Harold W. Young, of George street Methodist church will be given. Rev. S. H. Pickup, B.A., B.D., of St. Giles' church Toronto, will speak and other Old Boys. There will be community singing and a sacred concert by the band in the evening.

Parade Monday

On Monday, devoted to Sports and a General Re-Union, a parade led by the band, and with a prize for the best decorated car, will be held at one o'clock. There will be a lacrosse game between Peterboro and Millbrook Old Boys; a baseball game between Bethany and Janetville; Keene and Elizabethville, and Millbrook and the North Monaghan U.T.O. team races, and basket ball between the Reds and Blacks of Millbrook. For Monday morning the committee had planned an interesting morning session in a school roll-call, to be answered by the Old Boys and Girls, but workmen's activities in the old school-house have interferred with this plan.

The committee in charge of arrangements is composed of A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., chairman, J. N. McGill, secretary and Miss Pearl Burnham, assistant secretary. Miss Burnham has been indefatigable in furthering the work of the committee, her manifold duties including an exhaustive search for documents and facts of interest throughout the community generally, which resulted in the unearthing of many worthwhile papers and letters pertaining to early activities of the village and its people.

Monster Gathering.

Yesterday afternoon, at the Agricultural Grounds, a number of the citizens and their visitors from the surrounding district, with the Old Boys themselves, whose total up to date amounts to about three or four hundred, held a monster gathering under a sky whose faint cloud-fringe failed to fulfill its threat of rain. On the grand stand, the band played and various speakers addressed the audience. In the absence of Rev. Canon Allen aat the funeral services of Charles Lough, one of the "old boys," whose demise occurred on Friday last, the chair was occupied by the Rev. S. T. Tucker, pastor of the Methodist church here. Rev. W. H. Young, of Peterborough, and Wellesley W. Staples of Lindsay, the latter of whom is a Manvers "old boy," were the speakers of the afternoon. Prayer was offered by Rev. R. Patterson of Fraserville.

Rev. Joseph Wilks of Millbrook, also occupied a chair on the platform.

Mr. Staples spoke particularly to the boys and girls of the gathering, saying that the growing youth of the country was the greatest Canadian asset of the day, for on its shoulders rested the great responsibility of keeping intact those Christian principles that make any country great.

"Remove not the ancient landmarks that our fathers have set," said Mr. Staples, referring to the virtue and righteousness of the lives of those gone before. These landmarks would be found in the Book of God, the Bible.

"Look for the best things in life and you will always find them. The true science of living is not to make no mistakes, but to avoid repeating those mistakes that we have made.

To cultivate a good, stout heart, to make friends of those who expect the very best of one, and "to build a bridge for those who come after you," was the advice of the speaker, who used a great deal of poetical quotation in his address.

Good Feeling.

Rev. Mr. Young remarked on the manifestations of good feeling and sincere welcome to one and all that he had observed at this gathering, and spoke of the glorious heritage that come down to the present generation from those gone before. He referred to the work of Louis Hemon, "Maria de Chapdelaine" as an exemplificattion of the pioneer life in Canada, and said "to-day we feel the inspiration and the challenge of those lives. The peril of living, however, is in too great a contemplation of either the joys or triumphs of yesterday. In this way, we sometimes lose contact with the things of to-day, and the working out of to-day's destiny. As our fathers labored that the world they lived in might be a better place for their children and children's children, so we should work for a better civilization and a better life."

Mr. Young quoted Kipling's poem, with its refrain, "something lost beyond the ranges," and said, "it is the voice of our fathers that speaks to us, and the only way to implement this is to dedicate our lives to a better world, a warless world, and one where justice abides in industry and commerce. God make us fit and ready and willing for our task."

Community Singing.

Last evening, as in the afternoon, community singing of favorite hymns was a feature, with a responsive reading and prayers, Rev. Canon Allen, who enjoys the distinction of being only the third of Millbrook's Anglican clergymen in the last century, was in the chair, and prayer was offered by Rev. Mr. McConnachie, of Centreville. An address was given by Rev. Stanley H. Pickup, B.A., B.D., a former Millbrook boy, now rector of St. Giles' Presbyterian church, Toronto. On the platform also was Rev. G. S. Gervan, of Millbrook.

Band Concert.

The Oshawa Regimental Band, whose neat appearance in khaki suits, combined with excellent playing and a generous programme, added much to the programme, gave several lovely numbers, including a beautiful rendition of "Home, Sweet Home" with variations, and numbers from "Il Trovatore." They accompanied also the singing of "Home, Sweet Home," by Mrs. K. Eardley Wilmot of Belleville, formerly Miss Howden, of Millbrook, daughter of Major Richard Howden, first reeve of the township. Mrs. Wilmot's voice was heard to great advantage in a beautiful sacred number, "The Lord is My Light," its strong, clear quality and dramatic power having a splendid effect in the setting afforded it; a quiet night with many hundreds of silent, listening people under a starry sky, with the hushed music of the band behind the singer. In the background a long line of motors kept watch, with dimmed lights. Miss Mamie Collins acted as accompanist for the sacred solo.

Stirring Address.

The speaker of the evening, Rev. Mr. Pickup, chose for his text a portion of the Bible lesson just read, from the 26th verse of the 18th chapter of Genesis; "Isaac digged of the wells which were digged in the days of his fathers."

"It is not in the making and establishing of new things that blessings come to this old world. It is in the holding and possessing and keeping good and true the old treasures of the race that have come down to us through the years. The wells of life are as old as the years of God and it is a matter of keeping these wells open and of making good use of them."

The wells of life were available in the Book of the Lord itself, much as modernists might scoff at its veracity. The wells of memory, the wells of the goodness of God, the wells of atoning love, "for, there is nothing that sweetens the pillow in the last hours of life like the thought of Divine forgiveness of sin," and the well of Gospel invitation, were all described. With regard to the latter, Mr. Pickup said, "Our preaching often fails because we do not make the invitation of the Gospel strong enough. We preachers are not measuring up."

"Have you made things right? To keep putting it off is like leaving an apple to wither before it is used or a flower to die before it is worn."

Last evening, nearly a thousand people sat in the parked cars at the Agricultural grounds, or on the wooden seats that front the grandstand, to listen to the speaking, to join in the hymn singing, and to give at the conclusion of the programme, a hearty clap for "the talent that has come to us to-day," as the chairman phrased it.

OLD DAYS RECALLED

An Aged Document

Age may not always add to the attractiveness of people but it certainly gives to documents a peculiar interest. Below is a copy of a certificate of membership in an Orange Lodge at Fermanagh, Ireland, which John Vance, one of the pioneer settlers in North Cavan, brought with him ninety-four years ago. The original, framed and in a good state of preservation, is owned by his grandson, Mr. J. A. Vance, Millbrook.

"New System, 1828, Orange Institution, Great Britain and Ireland, Incorporated A. D. 1828. We, the Master, Deputy-Master, and Secretary of Orange Lodge No. 997, of the Anglo-Hibernian Orange Institution held in the County of Fermanagh, Ireland, do hereby certify that Brother John Vance has been legally initiated in all the signs, symbols, and mysteries of the annexed colors, and that he has conducted himself during his stay amongst us to the entire satisfaction of all the Brethren.

"We therefore recommend him to all the Societies of our Fraternity in the Universe. Given under our Hands and Seal of our Lodge this Twenty-Ninth day of March, 1829.

"William Bryans, Master; George Crawford, Deputy-Master; Jeremiah Collins, Secretary."

The last name signed, Jeremiah Collins, was the father of the late T. B. Collins, Millbrook.

Back to the Seventies

The "Millbrook Messenger" was first published in 1862 by Mr. A. E. Hayter who came from England in 1857. Previous to Mr. Hayter's time the editor was a Mr. Rogers who had written a very good "History of Canada." A sale bill dating back to 1877, and printed at the "Messenger" office is now in Mr. J. A. Vance's possession. It announces a sale of "farm stock" on Thursday, February 22nd, 1877, on the farm now occupied by G. A. E. Touchburn, Ida (earliest name, "Churchville"), but where Robert Vance, Jr., then lived. His father, Robert Vance, Sr., joined with him in disposing of some stock at the sale. "Sale to commence at 12 o'clock noon. Terms: All sums under $10 cash, $10 and upwards, 12 months' credit on approved notes with interest from date if not paid when due. Eight percent allowed for cash. Fallis and Scott, Auctioneers. Cavan, February 9th, 1877. 'Messenger' Print."

Baptized in House

Looking backward, the older people who worship in the Anglican church recall the day when for the Sunday services they had to walk, or drive, out to the frame church, the second built in the parish, which stood in the 4th Line cemetery. Before even this frame church was erected the services were held in the home of John D. Armstrong, a pioneer settler who came from Ireland in 1818, grandfather of Mrs. T. B. Collins and Miss Annie Armstrong, Millbrook, and the parish records show that many of the children of the neighborhood were baptized in his house. This was before the time of the first rector, when the Rev. Mr. Thompson was the spiritual leader of the flock, the first clergyman of any denomination in the township.

The first marriage in the frame church was that of Miss Francis Armstrong, a sister of the early settler of that name, and Mr. Kells, father of the late T. G., and the Misses Mary and Annie Kells, Millbrook, the ceremony being conducted before the workmen had completed laying the floor of the church. Dr. H. A. Turner has a photograph of the interior of the old St. Paul's, taken just before it was torn down and replaced by the present mortuary chapel in 1897. The pulpit and reading-desk are so high steps were necessary leading up to them, and the pews of the good old style with doors which closed and fastened with a metal button when all the family were seated within. A high gallery ran along the back and this will bring to the minds of many of the older folk an incident which actually occurred during one Sunday morning's service. A young man, John Thorne, sitting on the gallery, had occasion to pull out his handkerchief and inadvertently brought with it part of a pack of cards which fluttered down on the heads of the congregation below. The rector, Rev. Samuel Armour, stopped in his sermon to remark: "I perceive, Mr. Thorne, that your prayer-book is very badly bound." The receptacles for the offering, oblong-shaped and with long handles, are seen on the altar, the almsbasin against the wall behind them. The contract when the old church was torn down and the chapel built reads as follows:

"Millbrook, Sept. 5, 1897. I agree to do all the work and furnish all the material for the said church in a workmanlike manner according to plan and what is specified on the said plan for the sum of two hundred and eighty-six dollars. Thomas Oliver."

Curious Coincidence

The present St. Thomas church in Millbrook was opened on December 16th, 1885, but the congregation for many years worshipped in a red brick edifice, the first Anglican church in the village. It is rather a curious coincidence that two men lost their lives through the scaffolding giving way when the steeples of both the Anglican and Methodist churches were in course of erection, Mr. Beatty meeting with the fatal fall from St. Thomas church, and Mr. William Orr from the Methodist.

Though the congregation have for some time been preparing to renovate their church, the beautiful memorial windows, and interior furnishings will be viewed with pride and affection by the returned "Old Boys and Girls" who will gather there for worship on Sunday morning, August 26th, 1923.

MILLBROOK OLD BOYS CELEBRATE REUNION IN REAL OLD-TIME STYLE

Prominent Speakers Welcomed Old Boys and Girls on Saturday — Special Services Yesterday.

MANY RETURNED.

(By a Staff Reporter.)

MILLBROOK, August 27.—"This quiet little village among the hills," as one of its admirers characterized it, had a big night on Saturday. The main street, that the citizens say, is usually so quiet "you could fire a cannon down it, and it wouldn't touch anyone," was thronged. Millbrook's lone policeman would have had a busy time if the crowd hadn't been good-humored, but the visitors at Cavan and Millbrook's Re-Union were given the freedom of the village and the population turned out en masse to help them enjoy themselves. The homes in the district were dark, as the citizens mingled with their guests on the main thoroughfare, listened to the addresses of welcome from the town hall balcony, and jammed the armouries for the ensuing band concert, and dance.

Among the speakers for the occasion, one and all of whom made the Old Boys and Girls welcome in the most hospitable terms, were A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., for East Durham; J. L. McCamus, Reeve of Cavan; W. T. Wood, Reeve of Millbrook; and several of the Old Boys of the place, including Judge E. Clarry of Calgary; Fred Armstrong, of New York City, late of London, Eng., son of the late John Armstrong; S. Hunter, the popular cartoonist of the Toronto Globe, who claims Millbrook as his birthplace; Colonel Stewart of Toronto, and Thomas Donaldson, ex-reeve of Cavan.

On the street, where traffic to autos was closed for blocks, the crowd gathered in groups, that chatted and laughed, and welcomed old friends emerging suddenly from the passing throng. The hand-shake was universal. There were probably more hands shaken in Millbrook on Saturday night than for years past, on any single occasion, and smiles were everywhere. Every face wore a cheerful expression—men, women and children alike.

The Oshawa Regimental Band brought along some old carnival costumes and donned them for the benefit of the crowd. Pierrots and Pierrettes flirted in gay reds and yellows; Mephistopheles himself hob-nobbed with a harmless looking tramp, and a crowd of small boys escorted the "bobby," who threatened trespassers with a big stick.

Billy Bowman of Peterboro, entertained the throng around a torch-lit corner, a monstrous green-silk clad doll lady with abbreviated skirts, smiling a red-lipped welcome under a tinsel-decorated head.

A cool night, with an enormous full moon, contributed to the general decorative scheme, and the stores were lighted to the limit for the occasion.

To the tune of "Nobody Knows How Dry I Am," the crowd paraded after the gaily dressed band, which gave a splendid concert later in the Armouries, when the big building was packed to the doors. The band numbers in its personnel, two of Millbrook's natives, in Sid Trews and Norman Dunsford.

The evening ended with a dance in the Armouries, the music supplied by the band, when the younger people stepped and trotted for a pleasant interval.

Yesterday morning two of Millbrook's pulpits were occupied by Old Boys, Rev. Harold W. Young, of the George street church, Peterboro, who was born in the Methodist parsonage here, during his father's term as pastor, occupying the pulpit in the Methodist church, and Rev. Stanley Pickup, of St. Giles' Presbyterian Church, Toronto, taking charge in Grace Presbyterian church. Rev. Canon Allen, who is a real old boy of Millbrook, having been born and brought up here, preached in his own church, St. Thomas' Anglican, and the three edifices were beautifully decorated for the occasion with fresh flowers, and filled with good-sized congregations.

At St. Thomas', vocal solos by two of Millbrook's daughters, Mrs. K. Eardley-Wilmot, of Belleville, and Mrs. D. C. King, of Peterboro, were given. Mrs. Wilmot was for some time a resident of Peterboro also.

Freaks In Black Bass

It was none other than the famous Dr. James A. Henshall, the father of black bass propagation in America, who designated that splendid game member of our lakes and streams as "the game fish of the people."

This grand old man, Eho, by the way, is living his last days amongst the scenes of his boyhood in Cincinnati, O., probably didn't realize, at the time of his now famous designation of this country's mostly sought after fighting fin, that the black bass ever would be held in such high esteem by so many hundreds of thousands of the nation's anglers.

No game fish is so well distributed in North America as the black bass. You find him in the lakes of California, in the waters of the parched lands of the southwest (Roosevelt Dam, for instance), in the icy waters of Maine, in the tepid Florida fluid, in Canada from Nova Scotia to Manitoba. He is lord of fishes in more than a score of states. Truly, he is the game fish of the multitude.

They're Not All Black

I don't know exactly why this fish is called the "black" bass. There are two kinds—the small-mouth and the large-mouth. I have caught a good many of each and seldom indeed have I seen a black one. However, I have seen black ones—as black as night—of both varieties.

The large-mouth kind is the most numerous. It is called "trout" in the south, "green bass" in some places. Its mouth extends beyond the center of the eye. On each side is a lateral stripe, or line.

It is found in still water. It will stand a higher temperature than its small-mouth brother and, at times, it will take most any kind of bait you'll serve, from a live frog or minnow to what a noted manufacturer of pork rind baits designates a "battleship plug."

They Live to Fight

This fish, during the vacation season, lays in wait for its food under lily-pads, in the shade of fallen trees, around submerged stumps and along the edge of weed-beds. On bitin' days, the general rule on most early mornings and late afternoons in the summer, a well-directed, put-'em-where-they-live cast will turn many of them into your skillet.

The small-mouth is the bass family tackle-masher. You get him in fast water or in quiet lakes. In any event the water must be clean and at least medium cold.

The mouth of this fish does not extend beyond the eye. He has no lateral stripe and when taken on light tackle, either on bait or fly rod, is a fighter from strike to sun-stroke. It was the small-mouth black bass that made the famous "inch for inch and pound for pound the gamest fish that swims" slogan.

Its predominating natural food is a minnow, crayfish or frog. Personally I haven't used any live bait in my bass fishing for years, but, of course, that doesn't matter.

Either variety of black bass caught on a light bamboo rod, an eight or nine-pound test line and a sporty single-hook lure will keep a man from becoming conscious-stricken.

Try it some time.

GREAT CROWDS AT FOOTBALL GAMES

Manchester City Headed the List With a Gate of Sixty Thousand.

LONDON, Aug. 27. —(Canadian Press Cable.)—Football received an enthusiastic welcome all over the country on Saturday, immense crowds attending the opening matches of the big leagues. Manchester City headed the list with a gate of sixty thousand, while the aggregates for all the matches were: First league 380,000; second league 180,000; third league, southern section 118,000, northern 83,000. Total 761,000. The weather was fine and conditions were more suitable for football than for cricket, the turf having softened after the recent rains. There was a distinct nip in the air.

The event of the day was the opening of Manchester City's new ground, Moss-side, which has accommodation for 80,000. Fifty thousand persons watched Birmingham trounce their local rivals, Aston Villa in the Midland derby, which was their 21st meeting. There were forty-five thousand spectators at the Arsenal-Newcastle United match, despite the fact that there was nearly the same number at Tottenham, only a few miles away.

The outstanding results of the day were the defeat of last year's league champions by West Bromwich and the success of Cardiff over Bolton Wanderers, last year's cup winners. West Ham signalized their entry into the first division by a very creditable performance, drawing against Sunderland at Roker park, where their defeat was freely expected.

England and France are two nations as mad as if one was taking lessons on the cornet.

Construction Work in North Is Calling for More Help

Several Thousand Men Now Employed and Companies Scout For More.

Why There Should be no Winter Breadline

The present programme of construction work in the north follows. At the present time labor is still needed:

| | |
|---|---|
| Des. Quinze dam | 1,000 men |
| Transmission line | 1,000 " |
| C. P. R. extension | 1,000 " |
| T. N. O. extensions | 600 " |
| C. N. R. cut-off | 500 " |
| Hollinger dam | 900 " |
| Total | 5,000 men |

Activity in the North is assuming very large proportions, altogether apart from the mines and pulp companies and labor is already getting so scarce that one company, to get an additional hundred men had to send an agent to Toronto, Montreal and Ottawa, as the available supply in Sudbury, the usual labor market, had dried up on account of increased activity in the nickel mines. At the moment it is understood that over four thousand men are employed on development work and this is likely to be increased over the five thousand mark before the snow fl[illegible]

The principal [illegible] now absorbing men are the construction of the Northern Canada Power Company's hydro-electric development at Des Quinze, the same company's transmission line from Des Quinze into Porcupine, the extension of the Canadian Pacific Railway on the Quebec border from Kippawa to Des Quinze, the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario's extension from Cochrane north, and the Larder Lake branch, the Canadian National Railway's cut-off at Longue Lac and the Hollinger hydro-electric development beyond the end of steel on the Abitibi River.

Power Work Predominates

Morrow and Beatty are now employing over 600 men at Des Quinze and are sending another hundred in. They expect to have over a thousand on the job as soon as they can be secured. The Northern Canada Power Company is building the transmission line simultaneously from Porcupine, from Des Quinze, and both ways from the centre at Thornloe. They will use another thousand men, as for each metal tower over the 125 odd miles, four post holes eight feet deep will have to be dug in addition to wire stringing and clearance of right of way. This will be the first virtually fire-proof transmission line in the North.

New Route to West?

Angus Taylor and Company, who have the contract for the Canadian Pacific Railway extension to Des Quinze have approximately a thousand men on the job, which is being rushed at high speed, so much so, that reports of right of way blasting can already be heard at Des Quinze. The report is current in the north that this extension of several hundred miles which, if report can be relied on, will continue either through Larder Lake and then west for an indefinite distance, or else north along the Quebec side to the Abitibi Paper plant, crossing into Ontario near Twin Falls and then proceeding west. There are those who believe that the Canadian Pacific may be planning an entirely new route to the west, more or less along the line of its original Sandford Fleming survey, to give an easy gradient and with a deflection to serve the mining and camps and pulp and paper areas.

Other Railroad Work

Several hundred men are employed on the northerly extension of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario to Oil Can and north of that again preparations are being made for active work on the Hollinger Power development which, it is said will also utilize a thousand men. Further to the west, work is being rushed on the Canadian National cut-off at Longue Lac, which will link the old Canadian Northern with the National Transcontinental, giving a shorter route than the present one via the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario from North Bay to Cochrane.

With renewed activity in all the mining and pulp areas coupled with these other works, northerners believe that there will be work for all this winter and that "bread lines" in the big cities "down below" should be non-existent.

EMBROIDERIES.

Interesting embroideries executed in ribbon are seen on many of the fall frocks. One frock shows the low waist line emphasized by a belt made of fold upon fold of satin-edged grosgrain ribbon alternated with ribbon which had a gold edge.

AT KING'S WHARF AND THE DISTRICT.

Harvest Is Over and the Worst in Many Years—Personals.

KING'S WHARF, August 27. — The farmers here have finished harvesting, and the result is disappointing. Crops here are the worst in a number of years. The recent rains will be a help for the pastures and roots, but it came too late for the grains. Red and sweet clover never thrived, and therefore there will be no seed for the second crop.

SCRUBBING AS EXERCISE

Clothing Specialist Speaks Words of Commendation

Scrubbing the kitchen floor, if done in the right way, is not only good for the floor, but the best kind of exercise for women who dread excess poundage So says Mrs. Catharine H. Griebel State College of Agriculture. Why pay an expensive specialist, she asks, to exercise the muscles when two birds can be killed with one stone right at home?

"The difficulty with most of us," says Mrs. Griebel, "is that when we are blessed with good-looking figures we do nothing at all to keep them good-looking. I know of many women who pay specialists to exercise muscles that could perfectly well get all the exercise needed if these women kept in mind that there is a right way, as well as a wrong way, to go about scrubbing, sewing and cooking, just as there is about walking or dancing. I recall one woman whom I admired very much when I was a girl. She dressed beautifully and walked gracefully. She filled my youthful heart with admiration when I passed her home on my way to school and saw her sweeping her front porch, with a smile and a manner that was nothing short of queenly. I am sure that she scrubbed her kitchen floor with the same grace and dignity.

"I used to think then, 'Oh, if I could only sweep like that when I am grown up!' If women only knew that they could keep their good figures by doing their housework in the right way, and accomplishing something at the same time, they would get over the idea that doing one's own work is not appealing Given a good body, be thankful; but don't stop there. Keep it good. Watch out for the pitfalls of middle age and check up occasionally to see that no extra inches have crept into the hip lines. Surely we may keep our figures young and beautiful even though gray hair, wrinkles and grandchildren are added to our possessions."

Under a will dating back to the sixteenth century the mayor of Nottingham receives sixpence if he goes to a certain church service.

AN INSPIRING MEMORIAL TO TRENT RIVER HERO

Unveiled in Memory of Pte. Richard Oliver Cowain, Who Gave Life For Country at Battle of Vimy Ridge.

TRENT RIVER, August 27. — Pte. Richard Oliver Cowain, who lost his life on the 9th of April, 1917, at the Battle of Vimy Ridge, sleeps on the poppy-strewn Flanders Fields, under a white cross; but here at Trent River, his former home, an imposing shaft has been erected in his honour, and this memorial was unveiled on Sunday afternoon with impressive ceremony before a large crowd that came from all parts of the district.

The plan on which A. H. McKeel, ex-Reeve of Campbellford, and the owner of a cottage here, has worked so energetically for over a year, was yesterday brought to a successful issue. Fifteen officers of the late war who came from Belleville, Brighton, Cordova, Norwood, and other places, and 75 returned men, were gathered to do honour to the dead.

Under command of Major J. M. Bygott, of Campbellford, and headed by the Northumberland Regiment Band, the veterans paraded across the bridge and formed a circle around the monument, standing throughout the entire service, which lasted over an hour.

A platform, draped with the Union Jack, had been erected in front of the memorial. Occupying seats on this dais were the mother of the deceased, Mrs. Cowain, who now resides in Campbellford, and who was accompanied by her two daughters, Misses Mary and Susan, and her son John, himself a hero of the Great War. Another son Charles, a veteran, too, who resides in Toronto, was unable to be present. In the midst of the family group was a vacant chair, covered with the national flag, and bearing a rosette of white crepe, a badge of mourning for the departed.

When the Band reached the monument and, with the veterans, formed around it, they played "Oh God, Our Help in Ages Past." At intervals in the proceedings they rendered "The Silent Tents," the dirge used on such occasions, and "Nearer, My God to Thee," in style so perfect that Judge Huycke, of Peterborough, one of the speakers, complimented them upon their splendid performance.

The closing musical number was "The Last Post," sounded by Sergt. George T. Salter.

Over the inscription on the monument, which records the name and regimental number of the deceased, the fact that he went overseas with the 93rd Battalion, and the date of his death, was hung a Union Jack.

Beautiful floral wreaths were placed upon the base and around the memorial.

The column is 33 feet high, and on the top is the gilt image of a dove with outstretched wings, in mute symbolism of the message of peace to the world.

A. H. McKeel Presides.

Mr. McKeel, as chairman of the and at the outset called the following committee, presided over the service, gentlemen to the platform: Major T. B. Johnston M.L.A. for East Peterborough, His Honour Judge Huycke, Rev. E. O. Seymour of Havelock, Major J. M. Bygott, Major J. F. B. Belford, M.L.A., who was in the uniform of his rank, M. E. Maybee, M.P., Reeve Van Volkenburg of Seymour Township, and Dr. Holdcroft of Havelock.

Can Never Pay Debt.

In his opening address, Mr. McKeel gave a history of the movement which resulted in the service of yesterday. Private Cowain was only 25 years of age when he lost his life. Of the number who enlisted from Trent River and vicinity, he was the only one who made the supreme sacrifice. The work on the monument started on the 2nd of July, when Mrs. John Scott, president of te Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church at Trent River, turned the first sod. Everything had been done by volunteer labour, by people of all ages, from children of seven to men of 92 years. Mr. McKeel was especially grateful to the farmers who had, without charge, hauled the gravel used in the construction, some of them taking the hay racks from teir waggons in the height of the busy season to lend their assistance.

Mr. McKeel was pleased to see so many returned men and civilians present. He praised the sacrifice made by the soldiers and declared that the Canadian people owed the veterans a debt that they never could pay. Raising monuments, such as this one, in their honor, was a step in the right direction. The residents of the vicinity who had helped in the erection of the monument, had given an unselfish expression of the gratitude they feel to the young men in whose honor it was raised. They gave their labor and their money, not for what they could get out of it, but for what they could put into it.

Mr. McKeel said that Supt. Killaly of the Trent Canal, was entitled to the thanks of the community for the assistance he had given. The monument stands on a plot of government land, 30 feet square, that has been leased to the Township of Seymour at a nominal rental. The canal boat, the Bessie Butler, had also been chartered by the government to convey the returned men and officers from Campbellford to Trent Bridge.

Major T. B. Johnston.

Major Johnston said the people of Trent Bridge were to be commended for the memorial that they have put up. While it is commendable to remember the dead, it is also commendable to do as much for the living. Some of the men had returned from overseas broken in health. They found it difficult to resume their place in civil life, and these should be given some leeway.

The Major believes that now that now that the war has been won we should not slip back to where we were before it started. The military organizations that have been built up should be maintained. He advocated preparedness. If there is ever another war we should be ready; if there is not then the trained men will not be needed.

Judge Huycke's Address.

Chairman McKeel introduced Judge Huycke as a man who had sent four sons to the war, and one of these had fallen.

The Judge, who delivered one of the eloquent addresses for which he is famous on such occasions, began by expressing the pleasure that it gave him to be present to do honor to one who had laid down his life, and to those who were left, the men who had fought so valiantly for the British Empire, for God, for freedom, for justice and for truth. In choice phrases he expressed sympathy for the bereaved family.

"It was an honor to these people to give their boy," went on the speaker. "See that you treat them so and that you honor the mother who raised such a son. Pte Cowain was a true man. Thank God for such as he. His race was well run; his fight well won; now cometh rest. Vimy Ridge was taken and retained by such boys. It was one place that was not recaptured by the Germans in their second drive .The chairman has said that you cannot pay the soldiers for what they have done, but you can at least try to do so.

"I want to tell you people something. The movement for the erection of this monument was started by Mr. McKeel. He did the planning and designed the memorial. He superintended the work of construction. Campbellford and Trent River should be proud of such a citizen as A. H. McKeel."

Continuing, the speaker said that some people believe that the war, the veterans and the dead have been forgotten, but the Judge does not think so. He desired to say that the heart of Canada still beats for the soldiers. The returned men have not always been treated right, but the time is coming when the uniform of a soldier will be regarded as the highest badge of honor.

On Vimy Ridge the finest war memorial in the world, designed by Walter Albright of Toronto, is to be erected. The Judge was happy to be able to state that when the Toronto sculptor is through with this work he is to design a memorial to be erected in Peterborough.

Life is a hard task. To live right is doubly difficult. If this is true of an individual it is also true of a nation. The national life has not always been easy in the past but Canada has triumphed over every hardship and will do so in the future.

The Judge concluded his address by quoting the poem, "Render Thanks to the Giver."

The vast audience stood with bowed heads while Rev. E. O. Seymour led in prayer, the keynote of which was sounded in the opening petition, "Lord, accept the sacrifice of one who has lived and now liveth forever."

The Unveiling

Major Bygott then removed the flags which covered the inscription on the monument, after which Major Belford delivered a short address. He was glad to be assisted in any way with what Trent River had done Then he sounded a vote of warning after quoting part of the poem "In Flanders Field," a poem, which he said had been worn threadbare having been spoiled by all kinds of people, including profiteers for their own selfish ends. The crimson poppies were suggestive of the blood, that the soldiers had shed and sometimes, the speaker said, he thinks that blood was shed in vain.

The people have not taken up the torch. The late war was not really a war against Germany or among nations, but was waged against greed. Greed prevails to-day. Things have lapsed back to where they were before 1914. There is danger of Bolshevism and we are running too much into material things and a care less way of living. We are living in perilous times, the speaker said, but he is optimistic. These conditions can be overcome, just as the war was won, not by strength but by the determination to win. Other men will give their lives in battle unless we convert some of the things that are going wrong today. Some people seem to have forgotten the lesson of the war and we are drifting politically and spiritually. We should strive to be worthy to live.

Major Belford said that Mrs. Cowain should be proud of the sacrifice made by her son. For his own part he esteemed it an honor that one of his boys had laid down his life in France. The man who went overseas has made his mark in the annals of eternity. He will live forever.

Veterans Gave Wreath.

After a brief address by Mr. E. Mayebe, M.P., Major D. McManus, of Belleville, on behalf of the Veterans of that city, some of whom were present, laid a beautiful wreath upon the monument.

Chairman McKeel thanked the returned men, the band and the speakers for the assistance they had rendered in the service. Then Sergt. Salter sounded the Last Post and the proceedings came to a close.

Notes of the Day.

The plot in which the memorial stands will be planted with flowers and maintained as one of the beauty spots of the village.

The floral tributes were presented to Mrs. Cowain, mother of the deceased.

James Wright, of Toronto, who owns a cottage at Trent River, where he has spent the summer, donated the gilded dove at the top of the monument.

Two German machine guns, secured by Mr. McKeel from the Militia Dept., stand at the base of the memorial.

Mr. McKeel was congratulated on all sides for the successful issue of the movement, in which he was the prime mover and on the splendid service over which he presided.

Chief Duncalfe of Campbellford, was on duty at the service, but had no trouble in handling the large crowd and the autos that filled all the available space in the vicinity.

WINRY WANK IS RESCUED

Nick poked in a stick and Winky Wank caught it.

Mister Bee shook himself and shook himself but he couldn't shake Winky Wank, the Pee Wee boy, off his back.

Winky Wank winked one of his tiny black eyes and laughed and laughed at the joke he had played on everybody.

"My, but it's fun being an aviator," he cried. "Nothing else can buzz like an airplane except Mister Bee. I've ridden on every other kind of a bug but not one of them can buzz as beautifully as he can. I wonder why mother never would let me ride him. When I go home I'll tell her how lovely it is 'n' everything and what a mistake she made not letting me ride on him before."

Winky Wank had run off from Pee Wee Land and jumped on Mister Bee when he wasn't looking. And Mister Bee was as mad as a hornet.

Bzzzz Bzzzz hewent angrily, flying away from the posey vine and making straight for a row of funny things that looked like great big porridge bowls turned upside down.

Each one had a door away down, and before Winky Wanky knew what was happening, Mister Bee made a dash for one of them and crawled inside.

It was so dark that Winky Wank couldn't see a thing at first. But he'd never heard such a buzzing in all his life. He let go his hold on Mister Bee and held his hands over both ears.

And what did Winky Wank do but lose his balance and fall off.

And although he wasn't hurt one bit, he sank into sticky stuff up to his waist. And he couldn't move

"Stay where you are " said Mister Bee coldly. "You're a bad boy and nobody is going to help you."

"Yes, they are. We're going to help him," said a new voice. "We've been hunting for him everywhere and we're going to take him back to Pee Wee Land at once."

My, but Winky Wank was thankful Nick poked in a stick and Winky Wank caught it and was pulled out all covered with honey.

"I'll never go near a bee or a bee-hive again," he declared to the Twins.

URGES POWER OF PRESS TO PUT AN END TO WAR

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—(Canadian Press)—A letter written by Warren G. Harding on June 15, exhorting newspaper editors in the United States to use their power to end war was made public last night by Walter Wellman, journalist and author.

In the letter Mr. Harding described the isolation policy of the United States. Mr. Harding wrote that he had been informed that some newspaper editors were considering a plan to use the power of the press to ascertain the opinion of the people of the United States upon the problem of the duty of the United States in world re-organization for the abolition of war, the re-organization of international law with tribunals instead of battlefields as the courts of last resort and the creation of a system of International co-operation without super-government or encroachment upon the independence of any nations designed permanently to perserve peace, neighborly relationship, economic stability and prosperity among all peoples of the world.

Well Known Fireman Declares Tanlac Restored Health When Stomach Trouble Was So Bad He Almost Starved Rather Than Suffer Eats Anything Now.

"When I began using Tanlac two years ago stomach trouble had such a hold on me I thought I would never get rid of it," said Noah Pare, 330 Albert St., Windsor, Ont., well known city fireman, Station No. 2.

"It's an absolute truth not a day passed in six years that I didn't suffer with my stomach. I used to work my twenty-four hour shift without a mouthful of substantial food, and when I did eat a little, I just suffered agony and it knocked me out so I was good for nothing, and couldn't throw a line of hose.

"But I want to tell everybody, that's all in the past now, for Tanlac fixed me up in such fine shape I've not had a sick day in two years. My appetite is good and I don't believe there's a man in Canada with a better stomach than mine. I can handle a line of hose with the best of them now, and Tanlac's the one medicine I'll always speak up for."

EUROPE'S WHEAT CROP LARGER THAN IN 1922

ROME, Aug. 27.—(United Press) —Europe's wheat crop is 17 per cent larger than in 1922 according to figures issued by the Institute of Agriculture. The gain may be found to be still greater when revised figures from Germany, Jugo-Slavia and Czecho-Slavakia are obtainable.

Data now on hand from Egypt, Algeria, Morocco and Tunis shows an increase of 56 per cent.

The wheat harvest throughout Europe has increased 19 per cent, over the 1922 figure, but has declined 8 per cent in India. Barley had increased 7 per cent and oats 10 per cent. Institute reports that India's cotton crop is normal, but that the Egyptian crop is below the average.

LEARN TO LIVE TO 140 YEARS

By CHAS. McCANN

LONDON, Aug. 27.—(United Press)—Man is getting the worst of it from whoever allotted him a span of only three score and ten years of life, Dr. Leonard Williams, noted author of medical books, told the Aldwych Club.

But man gives himself the worst of it regarding illness, Dr. Williams added.

He declared that man's expectation of life should be from 120 to 140 years; and he held the unscientific Bible partly responsible for instructing man otherwise. As to illness, Dr. Williams said:

"If we become ill we ought not to be pitied as victims, but condemned as fools. It is just as fantastic to talk above being a martyr to rheumatism as it would be to talk about a martyr to delirium tremens.

"Man is virtually the only reasoning animal," Dr. Williams continued. "But the price he pays for his reason is a heavy one—the loss of his instinct or intuition. Man reasons; but he is the only animal who does not know how to feed himself.

"Woman is less logical than man, and more intuitive. The more logical she becomes, the less intuitive she is.

Man's Reason Blurred

"Instincts of the lower animals are increasing. Man has only his reason to guide him. And his reason, blurred and befogged by every kind of bias—in which greed figures very largely—causes him to arrive at the most fantastic and deadly conclusions.

"One of these is that the normal span of life is about 70 years.

"If you estimate the average age of the lower animals in relation to the time it takes them to reach maturity, and apply that formula to man, you will arrive at the conclusion that man's normal span of life is from 120 to 140 years.

"The reason why we have been content with three score years and ten and speak of a man of 80 who is still vigorous as a marvel, is partly on account of the Bible, which is not a scientific work, and largely because in matters physiological we are content with a very low level of mediocrity.

"We must learn to divest ourselves of the idea that there is something heaven-sent and inevitable about illness. There is nothing inevitable about it, still less is there anything heaven-sent.

"In greater or less degree, chiefly in greater, all disease is preventable. If we get an illness it is our own fault sometimes, and sometimes, but very seldom, the fault of our forbears.

"We speak of the normal as synonimous with the average. The average man is not normal. He is grossly, and even grotesquely, abnormal.

"It is necessary to realize that when a man has developed his powers and attained his maturity, maturity ceases to be a function of time, but becomes a physical state which it is the duty of the man to maintain in its pristine vigor for as long as possible."

VALUE OF COKE SHOWN BY TEST

As Efficient in Heating Home as Anthracite, Bureau of Mines Announces.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27. — At a time when thousands of householders are pondering the problem of next winter's fuel supply, the Department of the Interior directs attention to the results of tests recently made by the Bureau of Mines which demonstrate the high efficiency of by-product coke.

Tests conducted by the bureau at its Pittsburgh and Minneapolis experiment stations with different types of steam boilers suitable for heating seven or eight-room houses recorded as high efficiencies with by-product coke as with anthracite. The efficiencies obtained with Pittsburgh and Illinois bituminous coal were 8 to 20 per cent lower than those obtained with coke.

The anthracite used in these tests was a mixture of egg and nut sizes, and was considerably cleaner than that ordinarily obtained in the Pittsburgh market. The by-product coke tested at Pittsburgh was of domestic size, made from a mixture of several coal from the Klondike region near that city. The by-product coke tested at Minneapolis was of domestic size and made from Eastern coal.

Heat More Uniform

With the same attention to the fire, the Bureau of Mines found that coke gives much more uniform temperature than bituminous coal. In addition coke is a clean fuel and makes neither smoke nor soot, ad advantage difficult to express in exact figures. It is nearly as good a fuel as the domestic sizes of anthracite, and if anthracite is unavailable at reasonable prices a by-product coke makes a good substitute.

Domestic fuel should preferably be clean and smokeless and should keep the house at an even temperature, with little attention to the fire. Anthracite suitably sized possesses these properties to a large degree and has been used for this purpose for a long time, particularly near the anthracite mines. Many thickly populated districts are so far from these mines, however, that anthracite can be obtained only at a high price, and the bituminous coal that is available is not so clean and requires more frequent attention to the fire to maintain a uniform temperature.

By-product coke in small sizes is a good substitute for anthracite. As it is made from bituminous coal, and the bituminous coal beds are very extensive, it seems possible eventually to provide smokeless fuel in the form of by-product coke for practically the entire country.

By burning coke for domestic heating, more soft coal will be used in by-product plants, which save many valuable by-products that are wasted when the coal is used directly in the raw state. The by-products of popular interest obtained in the coking process are gas, light oils, ammonia and tar.

Little Draft Required

The following condensed instructions as to proper methods for the burning of coke in house-heating equipment are given by the Bureau of Mines.

Carry a deep-bed of fuel; one about 18 inches thick gives the best results.

Use very little draft after the fire is started and keep it always under control. The success of even heating depends on careful draft regulation.

Do not stir the fuel bed; clean the fire in the morning.

Use sized coke—one-half to two inches for furnace, boilers and stoves; one-half to four inches for open grates.

Do not allow ash to accumulate in the ash pit.

MILITARY SERVICE FAST GROWING IN DISFAVOR

(By CLARENCE DUBOSE)

TOKYO (By mail to United Press).—About 1,800 Japanese Army officers will be dismissed this summer as a part of the retrenchment scheme adopted last year.

This scheme called for a reduction of about 60,000 officers and men, but provided for the purchase of more machine guns. Anti-militarists declared the so-called "reduction" means, really, a more efficient and a more costly army. They intend to continue their fight for what they call "real reduction"—that is lopping off about half of the standing army and reducing the term of universal compulsory military service.

Objection to military service is continuing to increase among the people. Applicants for naval service are now materially below the number necessary to maintain the force. Applications for admission to the Japanese Naval academy, where future officers are trained, fell this year to one-third the usual number.

Malingering and efforts to avoid military service also showed a sharp increase this Spring, when conscripts were called.

The commander of a Tokyo garrison, who will have to dismiss a certain number of his officers in August under the general reduction order, hesitated to select himself the officers to be retired. He thought it more fair to give a chance to those who wanted to get out. So he called for expressions from those who wanted to be put on the retired list. Eighty per cent of his officer personnel applied for immediate discharge.

HIGH-SALARIED WOMEN

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27 (Associated Press).—Women are becoming a larger factor than ever in the running of the government.

When Miss Louise Stanley assumes office as chief of the newly-established bureau of home economics of the Department of Agriculture September 1, there will be more than half a dozen high-salaried women assisting in the activities of the nation. Miss Stanley's work will be to direct service to workers in rural communities and assist in every way possible the task of the nation's home-makers. She comes from the University of Missouri.

Women now in executive positions in Washington are scattered through many government departments and bureaus. Some of the higher paid are: Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney general, $7,500; Mrs. Helen H. Gardener, civil service commissioner, $5,000; Miss Mary Anderson, director of the women's bureau, Department of Labor, $5,000; Mrs. Bessie Parker Brueggeman, chairman of the Employee's Compensation Commission, $4,000; Miss Margaret M. Hanna, chief of the correspondence division of the State Department; Miss Lucille Atcherson, the first woman member of the Diplomatic Corps, and Miss Margaret R. Wilson, chief of the trading with the enemy division of the Federal Trade Commission.

NATIONAL WHEAT BODY FOR FIXING PRICES

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 27 (Associated Press).—Creation by the United States of a national wheat corporation which would establish a basic minimum price for all American wheat, and employ other measures for stabilizing the wheat market is advocated by I. A. Madden, farm advisor for Sangamon county, and well known in Illinois as a farm authority.

"Allowing the surplus of American wheat to set the price of American farm crops must stop if the farmer is to be saved from ruin," said Mr. Madden in outlining his plan.

"The United States should charter a national wheat corporation and appropriate sufficient funds for working capital. This corporation should then establish a basic minimum wheat price for all American wheat offered at the basic minimum price, then the national wheat corporation should step in and buy wheat.

"Until conditions are more stable in foreign countries, the wheat exported would have to be sold at less than the basic minimum price. To make up the loss sustained on exported wheat every bushel of wheat marketed should be assessed with a differential tax. This tax would vary with the surplus produced. If the basic price was such that there was an overproduction, then the tax would lower the farmers' price to where over production would be discouraged, while if there was a shortage of wheat the tax would be lessened and production stimulated.

"This plan would not interfere with the present grain trade, with the development of cooperative marketing, nor with the chance of a price above the basic minimum to the farmer who chooses to hold his wheat until after the harvest rush. It would, without subsidizing agriculture, put the labor and capital of the American farmer on a plane with the capital and labor of other industries.

"It would eliminate market gluts due to overproduction placing the burden of overproduction entirely upon the farmer. The consumer of wheat in the United States would be asked to give the farmer an equal chance. Only the extremely selfish would deny this.

"Approximately six hundred million bushels are consumed at home and two hundred million bushels are exported. This surplus is a millstone around the neck of agricultural prices."

The suggestion that American citizens should be induced to buy wheat was denounced by Mr. Madden, who said this plan would only aggrevate the situation because, "it increases the amount of the surplus held in America, which sooner or later will cause prices to fall to lower levels."

THE WORLD'S WHEAT EATERS

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 27 (United Press).—Canadians are the greatest per capita consumers of wheat in the world, with a consumption of 9.5 bushels per person annually. France, the figures show, is second with 7.9 bushels per person annually. The United Kingdom is third with six bushels per capita; Australia is fourth, with 5.5, and the United States is fifth, with 5.3 bushels. Per capita consumption of other nations is: Argentine, 5.2 bushels; Chile, 5.1; Germany, 3.2; Mexico, 0.8; British India, 0.8, and Japan, 0.5.

Stay sober. Booze is dangerous. Toronto man got drunk and told about stealing $20,000.

BIBLE PRESENTED JAP. CROWN PRINCE

A Wedding Gift From Several Hundred Thousand Christians.

By CLARENCE DUBOSE

TOKYO (By mail to United Press).—A beautifully embossed Bible will be presented to Crown Prince regent Hirohito, future emperor of Japan, and his bride, the Princess Nagako Kuni, when they are married next fall.

This wedding gift will be given to the future emperor and empress of this country by several hundred thousand Christians in Japan—both foreigners and natives. Subscriptions, small per capita, but substantial in total, are now being raised by Japanese Christian workers throughout the empire.

The Bible will be printed in the Japanese language. The materials and workmanship will be the finest money can buy, but it will not be a gaudy thing, not built only for display. It will be of a handy, convenient size—built for use. The Christians who are giving it expect that it will be read.

"The Crown Prince Regent is not a Christian, speaking in a technical religious sense, but in spirit I suppose he comes pretty close to it," a prominent foreign missionary here said. "He knows the Bible. He will read this one. That's why we're making it a handy size."

Wedding in October

The exact date of the imperial wedding has not been announced, but it will be fixed, probably, for some time in October. Several special missions are now in Europe buying articles of dress for the prince and princess. However, most of the garments and supplies will be of Japanese products.

Hirohito issued two orders for his wedding: 1. Buy in Japan everything possible, and, 2. Spend no more money that is necessary. He said that he would never consent to money being wasted on an imperial wedding while poor people were in need.

Despite this injunction—which made a big hit with the people—the wedding will be the most elaborate show Japan has known for years. Hirohito is tremendously popular, and the entire nation will go into a holiday, and have all sorts of fetes—economy to the contrary notwithstanding.

They Say—

Interesting Thoughts of Interesting People

ROBERT BLACHFORD, famous Socialist author, in an essay: "Democracy is the rule of the majority. But the fact is, the majority do not want to rule. They will not take the trouble; they are incapable of the effort; they do not want to be bothered. The masses are not ambitious. They prefer to be directed and led. We can not succeed in war or business by control of committees, not even committees of Fords and Fochs. The true way is to put the one Ford or the one Foch in command."

• • •

GILBERT FRANKAU, noted author, in The Centurion: "My early years were throughout handicapped by scholastic distinction. I became a regular prize winner at every school to which I was sent. I mention this because I am now so firmly convinced that the 'cramming' form of education merely teaches a boy to rate intellectual achievements above character building."

• • •

ALBERT JAY NOCK, in The Freeman: "Although the idea of administrative government is extremely simple, it is none the less hard to entertain, because nothing in our experience corresponds to it. Government in the United States is wholly political and strongly centralized. What few vestiges of local self-government survived the first half century of our national existence, have disappeared. Under this system, moreover, the number of vested interests which have their root in privileged monopoly is very great."

ERNEST HAROLD BAYNES, in World's Work: "When the opponents of medical research, in the name of Humanity, seek to abolish vivisection, they seem to ignore the fact that they are striking at a practice which is fundamentally humane. One 'vivisector' working in his laboratory will prevent more suffering to animals than all the officers in all the animal rescue leagues in the United States put together."

GLENN FRANK, in The Century: "Preach the gospel of Jesus rather than the gospel about Jesus."

NEW YORK, N. Y., Aug. 27.—(United Press).—The poke hat continues its reign in Paris, although several millinery designers are sponsoring the new "scuttle" hat, which differs slightly from the poke. Its crown is higher than the crown of the average poke and its brim is very narrow. All hats continue to keep the short back effect. Panne and Lyons velvet are the favorite fabrics used for early Fall models and brown and green are the leading hat shades. There is a shade of deep wine that is also used a great deal.

Feathers of all sorts from barn-yard fowl to ostrich will be used this coming season and it is predicted that the ostrich in all its variations will be seen on sports hats as well as on dress hats. Vari-colored feathers and feather fancies splotched with metal are shown in quantities. Pompoms, wheel effects, and tassels of burnt ostrich trim many tailored shapes. Ribbon still holds its popularity as a trimming.

Metal-cloth blouses lavishly worked in beads are seen in great numbers in the Parisian shops. Metal, by the way, is stressed as one of the leading fabrics for Fall for formal gowns, blouses, hats, etc.

Just now the Parisians are wearing little straight-lined suits with short, pin-tucked jacquettes.
